U. S. Sends Cool Reply To Germany's Protest On Insult to Swastika

Acting State Secretary Is Abrupt in Note to Berlin.

Hitler Stays Calm As Unrest Grows

The German Situation.

Acting Secretary of State Phillips replied to the German protest over tearing of the Nazi flag from the liner Bremen at New York. He called the incident unfortunate, but did not specifically express regret.

A Catholic demonstration was staged before the offices of the German Consul in New York.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Somewhat coldly, if not abruptly, Acting Secretary of State William Phillips yesterday replied on behalf of this Government to the German protest against the tearing of the Nazi swastika from the liner Bremen in New York Harbor last Friday night.

Although conceding it was "unfortunate" that, despite sincere police efforts to prevent any disorder, "the German national emblem should not have received that respect to which it is entitled," Phillips did not specifically express regret or sorrow over the incident.

On the other hand he emphasized efforts of the New York police to prevent the alleged Communist demonstration at the Bremen pier and pointed out "the incident which actually occurred was in no sense due to neglect on the part of the American authorities."

Phillips cited sections of the New York police report, copies of which he sent to Dr. Rudolph Leitner, German charge d'affaires, with the note. The Acting Secretary pointed out the complaint of the New York police that the officers of the Bremen failed to co-operate in preventing unauthorized persons from boarding the liner.

Jewish Detective Hurt.

He also took pains to point out that Detective Matthew Solomon, obviously Jewish, had fought the alleged Communists to protect the Nazi swastika and in doing so "was set upon, knocked down and sustained serious injury."

As for the German demand that everything be done by the American authorities to see that "guilty persons be duly punished," Phillips disposed of that with the brief statement that "the persons implicated in this disorder have been apprehended and are being held for trial."

Attached to the police report which the State Department sent to the German embassy was a copy of a circular addressed to the "Catholics of New York" urging them to protest the treatment of their co-religionists in Germany by the Nazis.

Police Searched Ship.

This circular, purported to be sponsored by the "Communist Party U. S. A.," called for the demonstration at the Bremen's pier last Friday night, an hour before the vessel sailed. This was the first notice the New York police received that a demonstration would be held. Their reports indicated that widespread plans were made on Thursday and Friday morning to deal with any demonstration.

The police report also revealed that, due to reports that some of the demonstrators had secreted themselves on the liner, a squad of police and detectives sailed aboard the vessel as far as Quarantine, searching the ship with members of the Bremen's officers and crew.

Phillips sent this Government's reply to the German embassy yesterday and later in the day the text, along with the text of the German

Laurel Wife, Freed in Bail, Shuns Home, Scene of Killing

Mrs. Smith Leaves Jail in Daze With Relatives and Rejoins Child, Vowing She'll Never Return to House Where She Slew Husband.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Mrs. Dorothy Joan Smith, twice-married 26-year-old blonde who has confessed she killed her husband in the small hours of last Sunday morning at their Laurel (Md.) home, got out of jail yesterday. Judge Joseph C. Mattingly, after listening yesterday morning in his chambers at the Prince Georges County Courthouse to Mrs. Smith's story of the shooting, released her on $5,000 bond. Her trial on a second-degree murder charge is set for the first Monday in October. Arthur S. Harrison, retired Navy Yard worker and father of the slayer's brother-in-law, went her bond.

For those weeks between now and time when she is brought before judge and jury to tell once more of the manner in which she sent a bullet through Wade L. Smith's heart, Mrs. Smith has made no plans, she told a Post reporter in an exclusive interview yesterday.

"I've been in such a daze—I can't even think—I don't know what I want to do—all I know is that I'm back with my baby again," said the killer of Smith, 26-year-old automobile salesman, who resigned from the Maryland State police force at his wife's request soon after their marriage 18 months ago. The baby to whom Mrs. Smith referred is her 4½-year-old son, Vincent Dodd Greco, by her first marriage.

Shuns Tragedy Cottage.

She was "still all upset," she confided as she sat yesterday afternoon in the kitchen at the home of her half-sister, Mrs. Carroll Harrison, 911 Montgomery street, Laurel. It was to the Harrison home that Mrs. Smith went immediately after she shot her husband. And it was to the Harrison home that she went yesterday as soon as she learned she would not have to return to the Hyattsville Jail.

But to her own home—the cottage on Fourth street, where she and Wade had lived since last May—she will never return.

"It isn't home to me now," she said. "Besides, it was only a rented place. Since Sunday all the furniture has been taken out. My mother has it."

Her mother, Mrs. Abbey S. Dodd, unable to attend the habeas corpus proceedings, was on hand to welcome her daughter at the Harrisons.' She had been in a state of

Mother Battles Stepmother In Street Tilt Over 2 Children

Overcome by the sight of her two children, whom she had not seen in two years, Miss Louise Williams, formerly Mrs. William Wooding, attempted to take them from their stepmother at the corner of Thirteenth and F streets in downtown Washington yesterday.

A large crowd watched the two women become embroiled over the possession of the two little girls, one 8-years-old, the other 6. Detective Watson Salkeld, of the Fifth Precinct also saw the row and with the aid of a passing taxi cab driver took all four to police headquarters.

According to the story told the detective and Lieut. Clement Cox, Miss Williams was divorced from Col. William Wooding two years ago and the court awarded custody of Nancy, 8, and Louise, 6, to the father. He later married again, to the woman who was with the children on Thirteenth street. The stepmother said she had come up from Danville, Va., today to take the children to the theater.

To Lieut. Cox they recounted the story of the divorce and awarding of the children to Col. Wooding, now a resident of Danville, Va. Lieut. Cox told the real mother of the children that any attempt on her part to take the children would be a criminal offense. He told the stepmother to return home with the children. With Miss Williams at police headquarters was her aunt, Mrs. T. H. Wildman, Decatur Heights, Md.

Italy Wins Delay Of League Action

Roosevelt Puts 'Moral' Support of U. S. Behind League's Effort to Avert African War.

Compromise With France And England to Delay Vote on Intervention In Africa for Month.

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday informally threw the moral support of the United States behind the efforts of the League of Nations Council to bring about an amicable solution of the Italo-Ethiopian controversy which threatens to break out in warfare which might involve other European nations.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement was regarded as significant because it was closely timed with the deadlock of the league's council over the thorny Italo-Ethiopian problem and because none could remember when another President—since Wilson's days—had given his benediction to an effort of the League of Nations which had no direct concern with this country.

The President's statement, given out by the White House secretariat without further explanation, was as follows:

"At this moment, when the Council of the League of Nations is assembled to consider ways for composing by pacific means the differences that have arisen between Italy and Ethiopia, I wish to voice the hope of the people and the Government of the United States that an amicable solution be found and that peace will be maintained."

Although this statement is cautiously worded, nevertheless it was a significant gesture on the international stage, illustrated by the prompt applause which came from Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary. In the House of Commons Sir Samuel expressed "great satisfaction" with the Roosevelt

Geneva, Aug. 1.—League of Nations intervention in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict was postponed until September late tonight when Britain, France and Italy agreed upon a compromise solution.

A victory for Italy was scored with a League Council decision to revive its arbitration commission's efforts under restrictions demanded gruffly by Premier Benito Mussolini.

With arbitration in progress, Britain, France and Italy—the "Big Three"—will inaugurate negotiations for all Italo-Ethiopian differences.

The compromise plan will be communicated to Ethiopia tomorrow upon receipt of formal approval by Il Duce.

Ethiopia's acceptance will permit council adoption of the compromise solution Friday afternoon.

The compromise, reached by chief Italian delegate, Baron Pompeo Aloisi, French Premier Pierre Laval and British Secretary for league affairs, Capt. R. Anthony Eden, was reached during dramatic dinner-table negotiations at the home of League Secretary Gen. Joseph Avenol.

It climaxed 24 hours of conferences marked by frequent Anglo-Italian clashes and repeated rejection of draft resolutions by Mussolini who answered "unacceptable" to everything not completely to his liking.

Il Duce scored two victories for his own novel brand of diplomacy. Not only will arbitration be continued without consideration of

House Balks Over Issuing Midget Coins

Somers Says Morgenthau Asks for Too Broad Authority.

By the Associated Press.

The House Coinage Committee, which a year ago quickly agreed to gold dollar devaluation, kicked over the traces yesterday on the Roosevelt-Morgenthau midget coin plan.

The open explanation was that the bill presented to the committee by Secretary Morgenthau and introduced in the absence of Chairman Somers (Democrat), New York, gave the Treasury too broad authority.

Morgenthau had been talking about issuing new half-cent and mill pieces—which he said were designed by the President—to simplify payments in States which have sales taxes requiring cent fraction payment.

But the bill he sent up to the coinage committee would have authorized the Treasury to issue any coin it wanted which was worth less than a cent.

"That's too much," said Somers, after the committee tabled the Treasury bill. "We appointed a sub-committee to consider the matter further. If it develops that there is a real need for a midget coin of specific value—one mill or five—I wouldn't say we would turn that down."

But the committee's plans for the future were indefinite. One leading committeeman remarked privately that if the Treasury agreed to a new bill permitting the minting only of one mill and half-cent pieces, long hearings would be held.

Alexis Mdivani Killed in Spain In Auto Crash

Former Husband of Barbara Hutton Was Speeding to Catch Train.

By the United Press.

Madrid, Aug. 1.—Prince Alexis Mdivani, of the marrying Georgian princes, divorced husband of Barbara Hutton and Louise van Alen, was killed in a motor accident today when his Rolls-Royce overturned on a mountain road.

Accompanied by an unidentified woman—who was seriously injured—the handsome polo-playing prince was speeding to catch a train for Paris.

The smart automobile, careening along the highway between Palamos and Figueras—near the French frontier—was traveling at 80 miles an hour when it struck a gutter.

The car turned over and was destroyed. Alexis was dead when removed from the wreckage. The woman was taken to a hospital in Gerona.

Mdivani had been attending a party at the home of his brother-in-law, the noted Spanish painter, Jose Maria Sert, at Palamos. Sert married Russie Mdivani in 1928.

The former husband of two American heiresses volunteered to drive the woman to the train, friends said. Police at Geroma, near which the tragedy occurred, said the crash apparently was due to excessive speed.

Alexis was the youngest of the "marrying Mdivani," sons of Gen. Zakhari Mdivani, of Tiflis, Georgia, and was 31 years old.

Louise Van Alen, beautiful $10,000,000 heiress, whose brothers Alexis met at Cambridge, divorced

JULIUS SANSTAG, of Brooklyn, jumped from the Brooklyn Bridge into the East River. Although he has been out of work for more than two years he did not jump to end his troubles, but with the hope that something would develop out of the publicity that would be of material value to his mother and himself.

He was fully clothed when plucked from the river. There was a large bruise over his left eye and blood was oozing from his ears, nose and mouth. He complained that it was difficult for him to breathe.

Sanstag, who is 22 years old, says he is a radio mechanic. A hospital reported his condition as "fair."

According to Dave Perles and Seymour Sapan, who were with the youth when he made the jump, Sanstag had been planning the stunt for several weeks. When the moment for him to leap arrived, Perles asked him to get back into the car in which they had driven to the center of the bridge, but Sanstag took a deep breath, leaned forward and dropped.

When asked the purpose of the jump, Perles and Sapan explained that Sanstag is planning a parachute jump from 30,000 feet, which will, they said, break the present world's mark by more than 5,000 feet. He needs a sponsor—thus the jump to attract one.

House Beats Roosevelt Again on Death Clause, Starts Tax Bill Debate

G. O. P. Filibusters Each Step To Block Tax Vote This Week

Night Session Is Narrowly Averted; Morgenthau Refuses to Commit Administration; Byrd Calls Program Farce.

By Robert C. Albright.

Filibustered every step of the way by a suddenly militant Republican minority, the Administration's $270,000,000 "tax the wealthy" bill started its stormy course through the House yesterday, with passage this week the Democratic goal.

The tempestuous House launching followed a noncommittal statement before the Senate Finance Committee by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who could not be budged from a refusal to express the Administration's stand.

The Secretary sat silent while Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, asked why he didn't go out and tell the country frankly that the tax program was a "farce." Morgenthau said the Administration will be "satisfied" with any bill Congress enacts, because "it would have to be."

Night Session Avoided.

Meantime, embattled House Republicans, determined to frustrate the leadership's drive for Saturday passage, opened a parlimentary attack that threatened for a time to hold the House in night session, and let up for the day only after a personal intrecession by the Speaker.

A rule limiting general debate to six hours was adopted by a 261-to-78 vote, after Minority Leader Bertrand Snell flung down the gauntlet on what promised to be the first out-and-out partisan struggle on an Administration bill this session.

"The bill," declared Snell, "is a gesture of fellowship to what Theodore Roosevelt terms the 'lunatic fringe,' and a peace offering to the 'soak the rich' and 'share the wealth' groups of American voters."

It was Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, who started the filibuster with a demand for a roll call vote on passage of the rule. He followed this up with insistence that the 96-page tax bill be read in full, a requirement usually dispensed with.

Democrats made several futile at-

Double Defeat Handed to New Deal on Utility Bill.

Vote of 210-155 Blow to Probers

By James D. Secrest.

Twice rebuffing President Roosevelt, the House yesterday reiterated with emphasis its opposition to the so-called "death sentence" in the Wheeler-Rayburn utility bill and expressed its objection to the presence of Benjamin Cohen, an Administration aid, at conferences on the measure between the Senate and House.

The double-barreled retort to the Administration's demand that the bill be passed with section 11, as written in the Senate, authorizing the Securities and Exchange Commission to abolish all unnecessary holding companies at the end of seven years, increased uncertainty as to the ultimate fate of the legislation.

Possibility that a compromise may be worked out on the disputed section before Congress adjourns arose in the Senate as Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, saw in the House action no change in its attitude on the bill, but held that the House overstepped its rights in dictating to the Senate conferees. He said he will confer today with his colleagues to decide whether the Senate will recede on its demand that Cohen attend all conferences.

Whispering Drive Revealed.

Earlier in the day the Senate Lobby Committee reached into its apparently inexhaustible bag of tricks and pulled out another sensation. It produced E. P. Cramer, an advertising man of Plainfield, N. J., as the man who suggested the whispering campaign against President Roosevelt recently.

The idea was offered to the Electric Bond & Share Co. as one of several schemes to discredit the New Deal. The whispering campaign, which finally reached such proportions that it was brought up at one of the President's press conferences, included the rumor that Roosevelt was failing physically and mentally.

At the same time the House Rules Committee learned from Bernard B. Robinson, a Chicago broker and reputed utility lobbyist, that he had talked over his telephone with H. C. Hopson, missing executive of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., wanted by the Senate committee. Robinson said he did not know where Hopson was at the time of the call.

"Death Clause" Gains Five.

Reaffirmation by the House of its opposition to the "death sentence" proviso came on a motion by Representative Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House conferees, to instruct the House managers to accept the Senate version of the disputed section. The motion was defeated on a roll call vote by 210 to 155.

Despite predictions by Administration spokesmen that disclosures of faked telegrams, huge utility lobby expenditures, and insinuations of bribes had swayed 30 or more votes in the House to the President, opponents of the "death sentence" actually gained five votes over the anonymous teller ballot of July 1.

The teller vote was 146 for the Senate provision and 216 against. The roll call vote the following day on the bill proper was 258 to 147.

Conferees May Decide.

After Rayburn's motion had been defeated, Representative Huddleston (Democrat), of Alabama, whose initial protest led to the Cohen issue, offered a motion which, in effect, gave the House managers authority to maintain their opposition to the presence of the Administration aid at future conferences.

Actually, the motion, which was adopted on a roll call by 183 to 172, leaves the House conferees a loophole to accept or reject Cohen or any other outsiders.

The resolution states that it is the will of the House "that its mana-

Two Prostrated as Capital Swelters in 96 Degree Heat

Only twice during the season has the city seen anything as hot as yesterday's official top temperature of 96, registered at 5:15 p. m. Once last month the Weather Bureau thermometer reached this figure and several weeks ago set the summer's high of 98.

Succumbing to yesterday's heat were George Price, 40, of 18 Ninth street northeast, who collapsed at Eighth and East Capitol streets, and John Hill, 50, colored, of Rosslyn, Va., who was overcome while working near his home. Price was admitted to Casualty Hospital for treatment for heat prostration. Hill was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

While Washington was given little hope for respite by Government forecasters, the Middle West, suffering a second dose of near-tropical heat, took heart in Weather Bureau predictions of showers and probably lowered temperatures for today.

Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Missouri were the Middle West hot belt. The Associated Press reported seven deaths during the day, bringing the summer's total for this section . . .5 in 11 States

In striking contrast to weather conditions in the Plains States and here, fresh rainstorms, driven by high winds, swept across the New York State Finger Lakes region, the center of the flood that killed 43 early last month.

Conferees Act To Leave AAA Liable to Suits

Reach Tentative Agreemen Cummings Approves Gold Compromise.

Congress apparently was determined last night to expose the New Deal's farm processing taxes to recovery suits in the courts.

Senate and House conferees on the AAA amendments reached a tentative agreement—expected to become final before the week-end—to retain Senate provisions permitting processors to sue for repayment of processing taxes provided they can show the levies were not passed back to the grower or onward to the consumer.

Meanwhile an announcement by Attorney General Cummings that the gold clause bill permitting suits for the next six months on Government obligations was "satisfactory" brought a prediction yesterday from Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, that it would "mitigate" opposition.

Revised by McAdoo.

"I think we will have strength to put it through," the chairman of the banking committee told reporters. Fletcher said he would attempt to call up the bill Monday or Tuesday.

Under of terms of the bill suits for recovery on gold clause obligations may be filed within six months after enactment of the measure. The revision was worked out earlier in the week by Senator McAdoo (Democrat, California, and brought approval on Wednesday of the banking committee as an amendment to the hotly contested administration proposal to outlaw all suits against the Government growing out of its refusal to pay gold on its obligations.

The attorney general expressed doubt many suits would be filed, observing that the Supreme Court had already ruled against damage claims.

"I think it would be folly," Cummings said, "for anybody to come into court and try to do over again what Mr. Perry recently tried to do and failed."

Battery of Counsel.

He referred to the holder of a Government bond who failed in a Supreme Court test to have the Government pay him in gold or its equivalent in devalued dollars.

But while the House managers in the AAA dispute gave way to the Senate on the tax question, the Senators agreed to permit restoration of House language authorizing use of 30 pe rcent of customs receipts to help finance the export of surplus farm commodities.

The setback to Administration requests for an absolute ban on tax suits coincided with a Justice Department campaign to make such recoveries difficult.

Attorney General Cummings said at his press conference that more attorneys might be hired to help handle the mass of AAA litigation.

Court attacks on processing taxes had an increase to 636 and the department was sending tax experts out to help local Government attorneys combat the drive. A half-dozen already were in the field on "key" cases, while others will leave next week.

Altogether, the department said, 48 tax lawyers are available for the fight, while 90 tax experts are devoting their time to defense of New Deal's farm program.

Newspaper Pays Contempt Penalty

The $5,000 fine paid by American Newspapers, Inc., as the result of contempt proceedings in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., yesterday was forwarded to William S. Gordy, State comptroller, by Sheriff G. Edington Bell, of Montgomery County.

The fine was paid after contmept proceedings which arose from a story printed in the Washington Herald purporting to be the deliberations of the judges in the trial of John Boland as part of the Lyddane murder conspiracy trials. Two reporters of the Herald, David Lee and Pat Frank, are at liberty on bond pending appeal of sentences of 90 days given by the court in the same case. The fine is said to be the largest ever paid in the State of Maryland as a result of contempt proceedings.

Political Dynasty Tax Suggested for Roosevelts, Etc.; Martin Davey Appeased.

By Raymond Clapper

ANOTHER thing this country needs is a political inheritance tax. We say that inherited wealth is a bad thing. What about political inheritances? Shouldn't these hereditary political fortunes be broken up by drastic taxation also?

It is getting to be that if you are not a widow of a Senator or Representative, or a Roosevelt, you are at a disadvantage. This thing h s been developing gradually a d insidiously. While the tendency is not far advanced, the principle is being established and our democratic institutions thereby menaced.

Look at the Roosevelt dynasty. They have managed to set it up on a bi-partisan basis so that, no matter whether the country wants a Republican or a Democrat, it has a Roosevelt in its hair. Charges even are being made that Franklin Roosevelt is establishing an option also on the Socialists and Communists, just in case.

For years Republicans and Democrats alike have had to put a "reserved" sign on the Assistant Secretaryship of the Navy for the Roosevelts. Cousin Henry is the fourth of the line to hold the job. Two were Republicans and two have been Democrats.

And the Roosevelt boys. We always have them. Col. Theodore Roosevelt is always willing. Sons James and Elliott of the present ruling branch of the house are cutting their wisdom teeth on the young Democrats. It has been painful on both sides, but the boys are sticking with it.

Then, too, Buzzie and Sistie are coming along.

On a smaller scale we see the same tendency in Congress. Senator Caraway inherited her seat, with the assistance of Huey Long, from her late husband. All six ladies of the House are widows. The two Republicans succeeded their husbands. It has been the custom of late to permit widows to serve out the terms of their husbands.

Sons of distinguished fathers also have done well. Representative Paul J. Kvale succeeded his father in the House. So did Senator Morris Shappard, but he went on to the Senate on his own. Senator Robert M. La Follette succeeded to his father's Senate seat, while Brother Philip entered the Wisconsin executive mansion. Senator Hiram Johnson's father was a member of the House, while Senators Robert D. Carey, of Wyoming; Frederick Hale, of Maine, and John H. Bankhead are sons of senatorial fathers. Senator Bennett C. Clark is the son of a former Speaker of the House.

Moreover, the Wallace family has established a corner on the Secretaryship of Agriculture—Henry holding the position under a Democratic regime, while his father was there in a Republican administration.

There is still time to hitch an amendment on the tax bill providing for a sharply graduated political estate and inheritance tax. Run it up to, say, 25 per cent of the vote on the larger beneficiaries.

Political Parade: Representative W. P. Lambertson, Kansas Republican, plays golf barefooted and writes a weekly gossip column which is printed in 50 newspapers in Kansas. He calls it "The Cloak Room." He says all of the women members of the House are good housekeepers. . . . The American Liberty League is going to follow the old Anti-Saloon League tactics and go into the congressional and senatorial fights next year to elect members, regardless of party, who are against the Roosevelt program. . . . Various parts of the country report growing resentment over relief rolls. It broke wide open in South Dakota, where relief was suspended when the harvest rush provided additional jobs. Reports from New England and the West Coast agree that there is increasing feeling among working folks toward others being paid month after month for doing nothing. . . . The Administration has fixed things up in Ohio. Gov, Davey a few months ago swore out a warrant for the arrest of Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, who had taken Federal relief administration out of the Governor's hands. Now Davey has promised the Ohio delegation for Roosevelt next year and Washington announces 90 long pages of work relief projects for Ohio. You don't catch an expert tree surgeon like Martin Davey sawing off a limb behind him. . . . Stormington, Conn., breaks into the political parade by going Republican for the first time in 40 years, right on the home grounds of Attorney General Cummings. . . . Tax bill critics say Mr. Roosevelt is out to demonstrate that it isn't "smart to be thrifty," as Macy's advertises.

Instead of pulling in, the Government organization continues to spread out. When the Oil Code Authority dissolved and gave up its office space, covering a whole floor in one of the largest office buildings here, four Government agencies rushed to the landlord to bid against each other for the space.

Government agencies are snapping up the best private residences for office space. Everything practically is gone now, so that if any more agencies are created, they will have to move into the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument.

Youth Slays Two In Theft of $16

By the Associated Press.

Elkins, W. Va., Aug. 1.—Clyde Sharp, 21-year-old mountain youth, killed his grandmother and uncle so he could steal $16.

State Trooper A. O. Harper said Sharp, a former convict, admitted he clubbed Mrs. Jennie Harper, 73, and her son, William, 41, with an iron bolt in their farm home near Marlinton, Pocahontas County.

Harper quoted Clyde as saying:

"I hit Bill (the uncle) with an iron bolt and then hit my grandmother.

"I took $15 out of Bill's pocketbook and a dollar and some change from under the mattress of grandmother's bed."

The trooper quoted the youth as saying he had not "meant" to kill his relatives, only to rob them.

journ," this member said, "I think we can talk the bill to death in committee without trouble. We've been getting along all right with the money we have."

The Treasury agreed that the latter statement was true as applied to conditions a few years back, but in an official memorandum it put before the coinage committee contended that unless the Federal Government issued the new midget coins the States would insist upon it.

The memorandum added that such a step might lead toward a yielding of the Federal, constitutional control over the Nation's money.

Tax-Cut Chieftain Held in Ohio Raid

Directory Names Copied on Petitions, Is Charge.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 1 (AP).—Police, acting on a tip, halted today what Secretary of State George S. Myers called "the most brazen attempt at corruption of elections I have ever encountered."

A squad led by Safety Director Winfield S. Pealer entered a downtown hotel room in which Myers asserted O. W. Gillette, secretary of the Ohio Association for Tax Reduction, directed the copying of names from telephone and city directories of a half-dozen Ohio cities on to petitions for a State-wide vote next November on three constitutional amendments sponsored by the association.

Gillette was held for investigation. Eight girls and four boys were released. Myers charged Gillette with employing them.

Myers immediately turned the case over to Donald J. Hoskins, prosecuting attorney of Franklin County.

Protesting he had done nothing wrong, Gillette asserted:

"It's a frame-up!"

Packing Firms Win Injunction On Process Tax

Payment of $7,000,000 in Levies on Pork at Stake in Suite.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Ruling the Federal processing tax is "not a tax at all," Federal Judge John P. Barnes today granted a temporary injunction to 18 meat packing companies who suoght to avid paying about $7,000,000 in such taxes on pork.

The meat packers, including Armour & Co., Swift & Co., and Wilson & Co., among the largest in the Nation, won a curt order restraining the Internal Revenue Department from enforcing payment of the overdue taxes, mostly for May.

In announcing his ruling at the conclusion of a hearing in Federal District Court, Judge Barnes termed the tax a "deprivation of property."

Cities Fifth Amendment.

"I do not think this is a tax assessable under either the Interstate Commerce or taxation powers of Congress," Judge Barnes said in an oral opinion.

"I believe it to be a violation of the fifth amendment to the Constitution as a deprivation of property."

Judge Barnes ordered that the full amount of the unpaid taxes be placed on deposit and urged attorneys to speed the case to a higher court if an appeal is made. The Government has 90 days ni which to appeal the case.

Explaining his reason for urging a quick settlement of the case, Judge Barnes said:

"I do not want to enrich the processors by granting this injunction. I want the saving passed on to the consumers."

United States District Attorney Michael L: Igoe did not announce his plans for an appeal.

Judge Barnes said he believed the processing tax was not a tax because it was "not levied for the support of the Government."

"As far as I can see," the judge commented, "the so-called processing tax is levied for the purpose of taking money out of the pocket of John Brown and putting it into the pocket of John Jones.

"Nothing has been shown to indicate that it was a tax in support of the Government.

"I don't think that this exaction placed upon processes is a tax, and therefore cannot come under the provision of section 3224 of the Revised Statutes, which prohibits injunction because of the alleged unconstitutionality of a taxing statute."

Publisher Warns Of Dictatorship

By the Associated Press.

Mount Carroll, Ill., Aug. 1.—Col. Robert R. McCormick, Chicago publisher, today told a "back to Americanism" celebration audience that "when the mask of economic planning has been stripped off the New Deal we are confronted with the hideous face of dictatorship."

"Let us be warned in time that we do not become enslaved like the citizens of Russia, of Italy, and of Germany," he said.

"You appreciated even before the Supreme Sourt spoke that the President in office and a large majority of Congress intended to change our Republic States, united by a constitution providing for a national government of limited powers administrated by three separate branches, into a single omnipotent State ruled over by a despot like the dictatorships of Italy and Germany," Col. McCormick stated.

Hodges Off to Meeting Of Conventions Body

Curtis Hodges, director of the Greater National Capital Committee, left last night for Chicago, where he will attend a meeting of the board of directors of the International Association of Convention Bureaus, meeting August 4 and 5.

One of the chief reasons for the meeting is a discussion of the readjustment of passenger railroad rates now before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Hodges is chairman of the railroad committee of the association.

Housing 'Spur' Of $10,000,000 Offered by RFC

Fund Would Back Dealers in U. S. Guaranteed Motgages.

By the Associated Press.

The Reconstruction Corporation yesterday put a $10,000,000 spur behind the formation of national mortgage associations under the Federal housing act.

Such associations, to be capitalized at not less than $2,000,000, were authorized in the law for the purpose of buying and selling mortgages insured by the housing administration.

Officials said, however, that private capital has not been forthcoming and that no associations have been formed. Banks and insurance companies were termed the only mortgage buyers thus far.

The RFC last wek announced that through its mortgage company it would buy insured mortgages from banks which need to obtain their money.

Yesterday, bankers here circulated a letter from Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the RFC, to Stewart McDonald, acting housing administrator, in which Jones said that "if between now and January 1, 1936, you need assistance in the organization of national mortgage associations under title 1 of the national housing act, this corporation will buy preferred stock to the extent of $10,000,000 in these associations, provided that in every instance the common stock privately owned shall be at least equal to the preferred stock subscribed by this corporation."

Mine Victims Found Dead.

Johannesburg, Aug. 1 (AP).—Rescue workers, penetrating the Marsfield Colliery near Breyton, today found three European and 74 native miners, entombed since an explosion yesterday, dead. Several days must pass before the bodies can be recovered. The mine is filled with deadly carbon monxide gas. The victims were trapped at the foot of a 500 foot shaft when an unexplained explosion, not followed by fire, destroyed the colliery.

Briggs' Body Found; Funeral Is Tomorrow

The body of Forest Briggs, 21, of Gaithersburg, Md., who was drowned Wednesday in the Potomac near Seneca, Md., was found yesterday about 200 yards from where he sank. The body was recovered by Byron Miller, a Gaithersburg-Washington Grove volunteer fireman.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the residence in Gaithersburg, with the Rec. John Paul Tyler, pastor of Grace M. E. Church South, officiating. Members of the Gaithersburg Independents baseball team, with whom he played, will act as pallbearers. Burial will be in Forest Oak Cemetery, Gaithersburg.

Berlin Citizen Slain by Police; Unrest Grows

New Attacks on Jews Mark Eve of Hindenburg Anniversary.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 1.—Suppressed and smoldering German unrest had as fuel for its fires tonight new warnings to faltering Nazis, new repressive measures directed against Jews, "Steel Helmets" and "state enemies," an anti-Jewish demonstration near the Bayerischerplatz and lurid newspaper extras.

[A United Press dispatch from Berlin reported one of Gen. Hermann Goering's secret police officers, allegedly in self-defense while on duty, shot and killed Werner Neumann, 29, who reportedly attacked the policeman.

"The reasons for the brawl were insignificant," an official announcement said. "It was totally unpolitical."

The shooting started rumors that Neumann, formerly employed by Jewish clothiers now out of business, was killed in an anti-Semitic argument.—Editor's Note.]

The Nazi "fuehrer," Adolf Hitler, took no notice of the growing tension. He calmly and laconically ordered all flags to be half-staffed on all public buildings tomorrow in commemoration of the first anniversary of the death of the former president and field marshal, Paul von Hindenburg.

Nor was preparedness for disorders included in the instructions Werner von Blomberg, minister of war, gave to the army in outlining tomorrow's solemn ceremonies. The password was to be "Hindenburg." A special mounted guard of honor was to ride to the tomb of the Tannenberg Memorial. A wreath was to be placed by the commander of the East Prussian Army Corps.

Police Prepared.

Berlin police, however, were under orders to be prepared for any eventuality, indicating municipal authorities were aware of the potential dangers in these new developments:

A new threat to the Steel Helmets, veterans' organization, from Adolf Hitler's personal bodyguard, the Black Corps.

Omission of the East Prussian Steel Helmets from the list of those invited to attend Hindenburg memorial services at Tannenburg tomorrow.

Orders from officials of the Westerland resort on a North Sea island, giving Jews 24 hours to leave the place.

Efforts of the Berlin Chamber of Industry and Trade to stop the bootlegging of foreign goods, which has increased with rising prices.

Pictures Published.

Tonight thousands of Germans devoured the Steumer extra, but the anti-Jewish newspaper's ceremonious unveiling of an advertising board near the entrance of Bayerischerplatz, in the Jewish quarter of the city, drew only about 200 persons. Jews were conspicuously absent. A half dozen shouts of "out with Jews" was the only out-of-the-way occurrence.

U. S. Answers Nazi Protests On Ship Riot

note of protest, and a copy of the New York police reports were made public by the State department.

This Government's reply was drafted after careful thought. State department officials and draftsmen had been at work on the reply since Monday. The last draft of the note, which was dispatched to Dr. Leitner, indicated that the attitude toward Germany had hardened somewhat in the last few days.

When the first news of the Bremen incident was received here, officials were disturbed and felt keen regret that it had happened. Earlier, it was believed almost certain that the American reply would indicate this Government's regret in a phrase such as "this Government keenly regrets the incident," or similar words.

Ship's Officers to Blame.

Since then it has been indicated in several quarters that the American people are in no mood for expressing any embarrassment or humiliation over the Bremen incident, particularly in view of the fact, not known at first, that the liner's officers failed to co-operate with the New York police in taking planned precautions.

Indicative of the attitude of this Government was the action earlier this week of Phillips in pointedly referring to reported religious persecution in Germany and deploring religious intolerance anywhere in the world in a letter replying to petitions of three Jewish organizations. Phillips made this reply public within an hour after he revealed that Hatler's government had formally protested against the Bremen incident.

Police Efforts Recounted.

Phillips' reply to Germany apparently was based on the assumption that the action of the New York police in handling the demonstration against the Bremen completely relieved this government of any responsibility in the matter. References to the police report constituted the main body of his note.

The reports sent to the State Department by Lewis J. Valentine, New York Police Commissioner, explained that information of the proposed demonstration at the Bremen's pier was first received last Thursday and that the German shipping officials were immediately notified.

The latter replied that the captain of the Bremen would police his vessel and that the pier would be policed by private watchmen, Emil Maurer, assistant marine superintendent of the Hamburg-American Line, requested that the "police not interfere with the persons coming onto the pier as he believed it might interfere with the regular routine business of the line."

The shipping agents, however, arranged to have three tugs guard the Bremen from the river, and to have special police operatives stationed at each gang plank for the purpose of checking persons boarding the ship to make sure they were passengers or genuine friends of the latter, the report related. These plans were checked over less than 5 hours before the time set for the demonstration.

Police authorities detailed to the neighborhood of the Bremen's dock five sergeants and 50 patrolmen, and one mounted sergeant and 10 mounted patrolmen, in addition to detectives from the alien squad, on the night of the liner's sailing. Four streets leading to the dock were closed off, the report stated. Finally a crowd of about 1,500 gathered and about 11:15 p. m. "it was observed that some Communists were going aboard the ship, accompanied by well-dressed women and using the third class gangway." Police reported that the ship officers failed to carry out the plans to check everyone going aboard.

Liner Ordered Cleared.

The police reported they notified the ship authorities of what was happening and orders were given to clear the liner of all but passengers and crew. Police were sent aboard to aid in clearing the boat of visitors. The signal to clear the vessel of visitors, however, was not given until 25 minutes later.

As the whistle was blown "the Communists who had been allowed to board the vessel crowded together on the rear part of the deck where the third-class gangway was situated" and started to "attack some of the German sailors," the report stated.

It was at this point that Solomon undertook to apprehend some of the agitators and he was struck and later knocked to the deck as the alleged Communists pulled down the German swastika and threw it into the river. In the melee a detective shot Edward Drolette, one of the demonstrators, when other officers went to Solomon's aid The shooting of Drolette, the report stated, "probably saved the life of Detective Solomon, whom the Communists were attempting to throw overboard."

Six Men Arrested.

The report related that six man were arrested, all American citizens, and charged with felonious assault on the police officers and with "acing in concert while rioting with a number of others aboard the steamship Bremen and tearing down flag of said ship." Three others were arrested later in the night for disorderly conduct in front of a police station and shouting in behalf of the freedom of the demonstrators.

Acting Lieut. James A. Pyke, in charge of the squad that subsequently searched the vessel, reported that he and his men were "highly complimented by Commander Ziebenbein (of the Bremen) for their co-operation in handling a very delicate situation."

Alexander C. Anderson, deputy chief inspector of the New York police, reported that Capt. W. Drechel, marine superintendent of the Hamburg-American Line and North German Lloyd, had likewise praised the police and said the general manager of the line proposed to call on the police commissioner and thank him. Drechsel also was quoted by Anderson as saying that "the German consul was sending a cablegram to the German government also commending the police for the work performed in connection with the disorder on board the S. S. Bremen."

Lieut. Pyke, in concluding his report, stated he was of the opinion that "the trouble aboard the S. S. Bremen would have been entirely avoided if the shipping agents had lived up to their part of the proposed plan in this particular instance which was to let no visitors aboard the ship unless they were duly authenticated persons and identified as such to the men who were especially assigned to this task."

Grounded Black Eagle Struts in Addis Ababa

Addis Ababa, Aug. 1 (UP).—"Colonel" Hubert Julian, Harlem "Black Eagle," strutted the streets of Addis Ababa today, resplendent in a sun helmet, Sam Browne belt and khaki uniform with red trimmings—but without an airplane.

The aviator announced he has been commissioned in the Ethiopian Air Service. He wore the four bars of an Ethiopian colonel on his shoulders, but:

The government doubted Julian would be in the flying corps.

"We do not have enough airplanes to risk them that way," an official said. The "Black Eagle" once cracked up Emperor Haile Selassie's only airplane.

frontier limitations, but the three-power conference to thresh out all Italo-Ethiopian differences will convene without participation of Ethiopia on an equal footing.

It was expected the conference would sit in northern Italy to permit Mussolini's attendance.

The resolution of the "Big Three" embodies two compromises:

1. Dealing with resumption of arbitration.
2. Procedure for settling fundamental differences.

Ethiopia Informed.

The compromise proposal has been communicated to Tecla Hawariat, Ethiopian minister to France and delegate to the league, and his legal aid, Gaston Jeze.

They have not indicated acceptance.

Prior to the dinner-fable negotiations at the Avenol home, the council was deadlocked with Britain and Italy over procedure and the role the league should play in the east African crisis.

Officials now await Ethiopia's response to the latest hope for settlement. A favorable reply would make possible a council session tomorrow.

The three statesmen will reconvene Friday, after receiving Mussolini's reply, to put final touches to the compromise formula if Il Duce approves it.

The agreement was being kept secret until Mussolini had had time to study it, but news leaked out after Avenol's dinner when members of the council were informed by telephone that an agreement had been reached. Laval laughingly dodged newspapermen at a press conference but hinted good news could be expected tomorrow. It finally was officially confirmed, however, that "Laval, Eden and Aloisi had agreed on a compromise" which would be submitted to the council.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 1.—The British government views the threat of a clash between white and black races as a "world calamity" and will use every influence available to prevent a war between Italy and Ethiopia, Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, told the House of Commons today.

Speaking on the eve of Parliament's adjournment, Sir Samuel said he "should not feel honest if on this last day before recess I did not say the state of Europe remains one of gloom and apprehension."

He cordially welcomed the United United States to the ranks of nations striving for peace.

A few minutes before the House heard Sir Herbert Samuel, leader of the Liberal faction, declare war between whites and blacks in Africa might be fraught with consequences for the British Empire, in which blacks outnumber whites 6 to 1.

Simultaneously, the financial editor of the London Herald said London bankers' reports showed "opposition to Mussoloni's policy is growing so rapidly that a revolt against him can no longer be regarded as altogether impossible."

structions from your government you lodge a protest against the action of demonstrators in New York in tearing down the German flag flying from the bow of the German steamship Bremen when that vessel was departing from New York the night of July 26, 1935. You also give expression to the hope that everything will be done by the appropriate American authorities in order that the guilty persons may be punished.

"The appropriate authorities in New York have provided me with a full report on this matter, and I inclose a copy for your information. You will note that the police authorities took most extensive precautions in order to prevent any untoward incident; that having learned in advance that a demonstration was planned, they consulted with the representatives of the interested steamship companies and in co-operation with them took all measures which seemed calculated to assure order; and that the incident which actually occurred was in no sense due to neglect on the part of the American authorities.

"I invite particular attention to those sections of the report which indicate that a very considerable number of police were detailed to prevent disturbances; that the police suggested measures to prevent persons other than the passengers and other duly authorized visitors from boarding the vessel, but that the officers of the steamship line did not deem it necessary to adopt such measures; that unauthorized persons accordingly succeeded in boarding the steamer; that before the vessel sailed such elements started a demonstration; that police authorities took immediate and efficient action with a view to clearing the ship of all unauthorized persons; and that during the course of this action one of the police, namely, Detective Matthew Solomon, in attempting to apprehend the ringleaders, was set upon, knocked down and sustained serious injury.

"I also invite attention to that section of the enclosed report which indicates that the persons implicated in this disorder have been apprehended and are being held for trial.

"It is unfortunate that, in spite of the sincere efforts of the police to prevent any disorder whatever, the German national emblem should, during the disturbance which took place, not have received that respect to which it is entitled.

"Accept, sir, the renewed assurances of my high consideration. WILLIAM PHILLIPS.

N.Y. Catholics Stage Anti-Nazi Meeting

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 1.—A Catholic demonstration against religious persecution in Germany was staged today before the office of the German consul and a crisply worded document, condemning the Hitler regime, was left at the consulate to be "forwarded" to Der Fuehrer.

Elsewhere in the city, elaborate police precautions had been made over the past 24 hours against possible repetition of the Bremen incident, which led to international complications.

Two hundred policemen and detectives were present on the pier when the North German Lloyd liner Europa, sister ship of the Bremen, docked at noon. The docking was completed in routine manner without trouble.

A heavy concentration of police was effected near Pier A for the Catholic demonstration before the German consulate on the Battery. There was no trouble.

25 Are Feared Dead In Texas Train Wreck

Waco, Tex., Aug. 1 (AP).—Fear was expressed that as many as 25 transients may have been killed as wrecking crews searched tonight in the fire-swept debris piled up by the derailment of a Missouri-Kansas-Texas freight train.

Two bodies were recovered today. Another victim, unidentified, died after the wreck near Bruceville late last night.

C. P. Carlisle, 21, of Waco, declared he saw at least 25 men in the cars. He expressed belief all were dead.

Nine persons were injured.

Peoria Attack Slayer Moves for New Trial

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 1 (AP).—Gerald Thompson, 26-year-old toolmaker, convicted and sentenced to the electric chair by a circuit court jury for the attack murder of pretty Mildred Hallmark, today was placed in solitary confinement pending his motion for a new trial, for August 12.

Shaken, but still confident that "something will happen to get me out of this," Thompson was barred from all contact with the outside world by order of Sheriff Marcus Olson.

If his motion for a new trial is denied by Judge Joseph E. Daily, Thompson will be removed to the death house of the State penitentiary at Joliet to await execution.

Moral Support Given League By Roosevelt

statement in a plea for observance of post-war treaties.

The subsequent news from Geneva that the League of Nations Council had announced that Great Britain, France and Italy had reached an agreement "in principle" which would avert Italo-Ethiopian hostilities and thus would save the league from a further loss of prestige caused pleasure in Administration circles here.

The reported agreement—which apparently still lacks the approval of Benito Mussolini—may or may not have resulted from the Roosevelt statement earlier in the day. But it is now clear that this country is supporting league efforts to solve the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, and Italy in whatever it does must take that into account.

Hull's Words Recalled

First notice of this attitude was given early in July when Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in replying to an appeal from the Ethiopian Emperor for means of assuring observance of the Kellogg pact, pointed out that the league had the matter in hand, that he hoped arbitral proceedings then pending would be successful, and that he was loath to believe either Italy or Ethiopia would disregard their pledges under the Kellogg pact.

Since that note was dispatched the general understanding of this Government's attitude toward the threatened Italo-Ethiopian conflict has been at times confused, due in part to faulty interpretations and in part to the phraseology employed here in expounding that attitude.

Hull found it necessary to call in the Italian Ambassador and point out to him that this Government was not in sympathy with any action which would disrupt the peace of the world and that it expected a complete observance of treaties. The same word, to clarify the situation, was sent to the major powers through our diplomatic representatives abroad.

Some misunderstanding developed over a remark made by the President a week ago at his press conference to the effect that this country proposed to keep out of international controversies in which it had no direct concern and that, aside from our general interest in the maintenance of peace, the Italo-Ethiopian dispute fell into that category. In one quarter this was interpreted as meaning the President had washed his hands of that affair—an interpretation which cheered Italy.

Perhaps the reaction to that remark was in part responsible for the President's further statement yesterday. But it was not the sole reason. Many persons in this Administration who believe that the League of Nations is a force for peace and good in world relations—irrespective of whether this country should be a member—likewise were troubled over the difficulty of the Italo-Ethiopian problem confronting the league.

Some of these persons feel that the league can not stand many more set-backs and still survive and that consequently anything this country could do to strengthen the league in that situation, without involving ourselves, would be a distinct contribution toward world stability. It now appears their views have prevailed with the President.

It is believed that Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador at large, among others, played a prominent part in bringing about the President's statement yesterday. Davis has been in Washington this week and has been in close contact with both State Department attaches and the White House.

Meanwhile, shortly after the President's statement was issued a delegation representing seven pacifist organizations called on Acting Secretary of State William Phillips to express the feeling of their following as to Italy's attitude toward Ethiopia and Hitler's treatment of religious groups.

They were chiefly interested, however, in protesting Italy's alleged designs on Ethiopia, and left with Phillips a copy of a statement subsequently delivered to the Italian Embassy threatening a boycott of Italian goods. The statement urged that "Italy be conjured to temper tyranny by judicious reasoning."

This group also left at the German Embassy a statement issued under the auspices of the "August 3 March Against War Committee," which purports to speak for 315,000 persons. This protested Hitler's religious persecutions and likewise threatened a boycott of German goods and services unless such actions are abandoned.

Sponsoring the alls of the delegation was the "August 3 March Against War Committee," represented by Harry A. Maurer. This committee has arranged a parade in New York tomorrow to protest against war. Those who came to Phillips' office included Maurer; I. Alleyne, of the Provisional Committee for Defense of Ethiopia; Dido Johnson, of the League of Struggle for Negro Rights; Clara Ashcroft, of the Harlem branch of the American League Against War and Fascism; Albina Porrino, of the Italian Federation of New York; Samuel Jerussi, of the Italian Federation of Philadelphia, and Rose Stern, of the American League Against War and Fascism.

Suicide Hoax Seen in Hunt For Mutilator

Finding of Note Fails to Deter Search for Doctor's Slayer.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—The search for Mandeville Zenge, jilted suitor sought for questioning in the mutilation-slaying of Dr. Walter J. Bauer, was renewed today despite indications he had leaped to his death in Lake Michigan.

The hunt had been halted temporarily after Zenge's blood-stained coat and hat and a note announcing his suicidal intentions were delivered to authorities by a taxicab chauffeur who had driven him to Navy Pier last night.

Mrs. Louise Bauer, pretty brunette widow of the slain professor, identified the garments as those of the 26-year-old carpenter she had spurned, established the authenticity of the "farewell note," then exclaimed:

"Oh, that poor thing! He's gone, too."

Sobbing hysterically, she fainted in the arms of her father.

Hoax Suspected.

But Lieut. Otto Erlanson, head of the homicide squad, announced:

"Indications point to suicide, but he might well have conceived a suicide hoax to throw officials off his trail. Until we have something more tangible than a note and a coat and hat we will exert every effort to find Zenge."

Capt. William Russell, in whose South Side district the doctor was fiendishly emasculated Tuesday night, asserted his belief that Zenge had killed himself. Capt. John Stege branded it a "ruse." Assistant State's Attorney Alexander Napoli said it was possible the apparent suicide was a "herring drawn across the path of a fugitive," but declared himself satisfied that "insane jealousy over Mrs. Bauer motivated the murder."

Bride in Tears.

The widow, a comely bride of only 18 days, clearly showed the strain of the rapid-fire flow of developments. After testifying between dabs at her eyes at an inquest, she was hurried to the State's attorney's office. She wept as she read the note and was shown the abandoned coat. Investigators said there were stains inside the right-hand pocket "as if someone had placed a bloody instrument there."

"Yes, it's his writing," the 23-year-old nurse cried. "They're both dead."

Accompanied by the victim's brothers, William and Joseph Bauer, the widow boarded a train bearing the body to Cleveland late in the afternoon. She appeared to have regained her composure. She deferred her first view of her husband in death until the group reached the Ohio city.

John Giannini, a cab driver, who reported his patron had vanished after he had driven him to Navy pier at 10:45 o'clock last night, looked at photographs of Zenge and said: "That's the man."

He told police his fare had disappeared in the gloom of the pier—extending a mile out into the lake. The note found with the clothing in the rear seat was addressed to Zenge's father, J. Andy Zenge, Canton, Mo.

It contained no reference to the slaying of Dr. Bauer, 38-year-old professor at the Kirksville (Mo.) College of Osteopathy, who was abducted at Ann Arbor, Mich., carried to Chicago and mutilated.

The missive set forth Zenge's bitter reaction to the marriage of the doctor and the girl he had wooed for seven years. It said in part:

"I was miserably unhappy over losing Louise. I'm going to end it all. I suppose she is better off married to that doctor. I'm going to take a cab to the lake and jump in. Will leave this in my coat in the cab and the police will send it to you."

Enmity Denied.

The inquest was continued to August 15 to permit further investigation after the widow had testified she knew of no "hard feeling" between Zenge and Dr. Bauer.

Mrs. Bauer testified at the inquest: "Dr. Bauer and I were married July 14 in Kirksville. I had known him five months. He left three hours after the marriage. I have not seen him since."

She was not asked about a letter in which Dr. Bauer reputedly told a friend "my marriage is a hoax," but concerning a chance meeting with Zenge she said:

"I saw him Tuesday or Wednesday of last week. He asked, 'Are you happy?' I said I was, and he said, 'I hope you will always be.'"

"Do you think Zenge would do such a thing?" asked Coroner Frank J. Walsh. The widow, nurse at a Kirksville hospital, replied:

"I don't know."

Preferred Doctor.

"Why did you break off so suddenly with Zenge?" the coroner asked.

"I thought more of the doctor."

Joseph Bauer testified the family knew nothng of Dr. Bauer's marriage plans. The widow wore nos wedding ring.

As the inquest adjourned, Mrs. Bauer was led away in tears.

Capt. John Anderson assigned two coast guardsmen to patrol the waters near the pier. He announced dragging operations would be started tomorrow night if no body had been found in the meantime.

Sergt. George Schupolsky received a long-distance call from the chief of police at Ann Arbor, Mich., who said he was forwarding several letters that arrived at Dr. Bauer's hotel there after he had disappeared in the company of a guest registered as "Jones" and several specimens of the latter's handwriting. Employes of the hostelry have told authorities the mysterious "Jones" resembled Zenge.

Laurel Wife Who Slew Husband Released Under $5,000 Bond

collapse since Mrs. Smith was lockd in a cell at Hyattsville. But when her husband telephoned her about Judge Mattingly's ruling, she speedily recovered and was in good spirits

The four days in the Hyattsville jail was an "awful experience," Mrs. Smith said. She told of takingsleeping potions so she "wouldn't keep thinking about things all the time;" of trying to real, but of being unable to keep her mind on anything except newspaper stories about herself and the shooting.

"And I missed my baby so," she said. Just then little Vincent, fresh from his bath, came into the room. He begged his mother to "go with them to New York."

His grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Dodd, were leaving last night for Saratoga Springs, where Dodd will be employed during the summer, and Vincent wanted to go with them. But he wanted his mother to go too.

Too Weary for Trip.

Mrs. Smith declared she was too worn out to make the trip. She was still trying to decide late in the afternoon whether she would permit her son to go.

"I don't think I can stand to have him away again," she said. Her father seemed to think she would join them at Saratoga in a few days.

"I don't know—I can't think—I don't know what I want to do. Everything still seems in a daze," said Vincent's mother.

"Everything was in a daze" immediately after the shooting, too, Mrs. Smith and Carroll Harrison related in their testimony yesterday at the habeas corpus proceedings—in so much of a daze that it never occurred to them to call a doctor for the man who lay on the floor of the Smiths' bedroom with a bullet wound through his heart.

State's Attorney Alan Bowie seemed greatly interested in this fact. He questioned both witnesses along that line. Harrison said that after Mrs. Smith had wakened him and his wife about 2:30 a. m. Sunday to tell them she "had just shot Wade," he couldn't think what to do.

"I never thought about a doctor," he said.

Mrs. Smith testified that after Smith slumped to the floor from the bullet she sent through his body, she examined the wound, felt his pulse and "was sure he was dead."

Story Retains Thread.

Although both the defense counsel, J. Wilson Ryon and Maryland State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, and the State's attorney called several witnesses to give their versions before Judge Mattingly of the killing as they had learned of it from Mrs. Smith, the killer herself was the chief witness. Her story was substantially as she had related it before a coroner's jury Monday night in Laurel.

She told again how she and her husband, accompanied by four friends, had visited a carnival at Jessups, Md., Saturday night, of the gay time they had there, of their winning a set of dishes and of their having a "tintype" picture made and of the quarrel over her showing the picture to an Italian friend in a cafe late that night. It was this quarrel which led up to the shooting, which Mrs. Smith avers was in self-defense.

The only addition to her story as told last Monday night before the coroner's jury was her statement that she and her husband had "been happy except on two occasions." She then proceeded in a rambling manner to relate one of those occasions.

"It happened last fall just after we got back from New York," she said. "We had dinner at my sister's, Mrs. Harrison, in Laurel. I was tired because I had done some of the driving. While we were at my sister's Wade asked her if she would bring him a drink. She said she wouldn't. Then he shouted at me, 'Dottie, go get me a drink.' I got it for him. Then I went home. We were living with my parents at the time. I laid down on the bed. I felt bad because Wade had spoken so nicely to my sister and had been so cross with me."

Alleges He Hit Her.

According to Mrs. Smith's testimony, Wade followed her into the room and began to quarrel with her. She got up to go into her mother's room. He knocked her down in the hall, she said.

At this point in the long-drawn-out recital Mrs. Smith's attorney, Ryon, interrupted her and asked her to "get on with the story."

She embarked on a story of the events of last Saturday night. She told how she and her husband joined friends from Baltimore, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Davis Herberson, to attend the Jessups carnival. The trip was made in the car of Herberson's mother. She was also in the party, as was her friend, Mrs. Violet Skaggs. At the carnival, Mrs. Smith testified, they had a good time and laughed a lot over the "tintype" of herself and Wade.

The party broke up about midnight, but after the Smiths got inside their home they decided to go to a nearby roadside cafe for crabcakes. She had one bottle of beer. He had two. Earlier in the evening she had had another bottle at the carnival in company with Mrs. Herberson.

Beginning of Quarrel.

At the next table in the roadside cafe were four friends of Mrs. Smith's. One of them, she testified, was an Italian boy who works for the father of her first husband, Nuncy Greco, Laurel barber, who is also Italian.

"We had been showing the tintype picture to everybody and laughing about it," said Mrs. Smith. "So I showed it to my friends at the next table. The Italian boy laughed at it. He has a funny laugh—like 'Ha, ha' (Mrs. Smith tried to give a funny laugh), and it made Wade mad. After we got home he began to fuss because I had showed the picture to 'that g— d— wop.'"

Mrs. Smith, in her testimony, abbreviated her husband's swearing.

"I told him," she continued, "not to talk that way, that I couldn't bear for him to call anybody a wop, because it reflected on my son, who is half Italian."

After more wrangling over wops the Smiths went to bed—it was then past 1 o'clock Sunday morning—and the husband attempted to make up with his wife.

But Mrs. Smith, according to her testimony yesterday, was so hurt over the alleged insult to her son that she remained aloof. Efforts at a reconciliation failing, Smith got out of bed, dressed and announced his intention of leaving.

Voice Well Modulated.

"Suddenly he turned on me," said Mrs. Smith in a low, well-modulated voice, "and said, 'No, I'm not going to leave. This is my home. Why should I leave it? You're going to leave.' Then he got a dress out of the clothes closet and threw it at me."

All during this scene, Mrs. Smith testified, she was "scared and didn't know what Wade was going to do next." She started to dress, decided against it and went back to bed, then got up again. She had put on her stockings when he came over to her, she said, and in the brief struggle he made a run in one of the stockings.

"I said to him," Mrs. Smith repeated, "now I hope you're satisfied. You've made a run in my stockings. That was the only way to handle Wade—to talk to him like that."

Suddenly Smith, according to his wife's story, went over to the dresser, took a gun out of the drawer and went in the other room.

Judge Rebukes Jurors Freeing 'Dutch' Schultz

Verdict in Tax Evasion Suit Shakes Public Confidence, Says Jurist.

By the United Press.

Malone, N. Y., Aug. 1.—A Federal jury tonight acquitted Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer, New York's Public Enemy No. 1, of tax evasion and immediately drew a rebuke from Judge Frederick Bryant.

Bryant, a stern, Northy Country judge, bluntly told the jury after it had announced it had freed the one-time powerful Bronx County beer baron:

"It is a verdict like this that shakes the confidence of law-abiding people in the integrity of the juries.

"It is evident that you have reached a verdict based not on the evidence but for other reasons.

"You will go home with the satisfaction—if it is satisfaction—that you have rendered a blow against law enforcement and justice."

Flegenheimer, who entered the tiny, stuffy chamber sullen and scowling, smiled broadly as the jury gave its verdict.

News that "Dutch is out again" spread rapidly through this Adirondack Mountain village and soon hundreds of persons milled about the new courthouse on Main street.

Deadlocked 28 Hours.

The jury, composed of farmers and villagers, returned its verdict after being deadlocked tightly 28½ hours. It voted nine to three for acquittal on an early ballot.

"Gee, I'm happy!" Flegenheimer cried. He grasped the hands of his four attorneys and thanked them.

"What do you plan to do now?" he was asked by newspapermen.

"I don't know," the once powerful overlord of a flourishing prohibition-era beer business, replied.

He had remained in a tiny Franklin County jail since opening of the trial, July 23. A Federal jury which tried Flegenheimer on the same charge six months ago in Syracuse disagreed.

Schultz was tried for failure to pay $92,000 incomes taxes on his beer income of 1929-30-31. He said he thought he didn't have to pay tax on illegal earnings.

Conboy Silent.

Silvery haired Martin Conboy, special assistant attorney general and chief of the Government counsel, refused to comment on the outcome.

"I have nothing to add beyond what the court said," he grinned.

"Will the Government seek to try Flegenheimer again?" he was asked.

He turned on his heels and disappeared into an anteroom, obviously displeased with the jury's action.

The gang leader, who has been ranked near the top of the Nation's public enemies still at large, said prior to the trial that he "gladly" would pay the Government taxes due if acquitted.

Somerset County G.O.P. Voters Lead by 2 to 1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Somerset, Pa., Aug. 1.—Somerset County Republicans maintain a lead of almost two to one in the total number of voters, although Democrats made a substantial gain during the present year.

Figures of the total registration for 1935 were announced yesterday at the office of the Somerset County commissioners. The total Republican registration for 1935 is 23,303, a decrease of 2,594 from the total of last year. The Democrats' total for the county for 1935 is 12,757, or an increase of 3,702 over 1934.

Stonycreek township remains the Republican stronghold, the registration there giving the G. O. P. a six-to-one lead. In Somerset Borough the Republican margin is 4 to 1. Boswell is the Democratic stronghold, with 580 voters being registered against 232 for the Republican Party. Also, 55 registered as Socialists, 90 as Prohibitionists and 352 as no-party.

Laurel Sets Vote On Sunday Shows

The first obstacle in the fight for Sunday motion-picture shows in Laurel, Md., was overcome last night when proponents of the measure persuaded the town council to hold a referendum on the question Monday, September 9.

The ordinance providing for the referendum, which was approved unanimously, was the third one drawn up for consideration during the past year.

Final action was hastened by the Laurel American Legion Post, which told the council, through its representatives, that the local theater corporation had promised 50 per cent of the net profits from the Sunday shows, should the shows be made legal before October 1.

Virginia Faces 50% Increase In Apple Crop

Market Problem Serious, Taylor Tells Session on Rural Affairs.

By the Associated Press.

Blacksburg, Va., Aug. 1.—The commercial apple crop in Virginia this year promises to be the largest since 1931, and consequently the growers will be confronted with a serious marketing problem, Henry M. Taylor, Federal-State agricultural statistician, told the Rural Affairs Institute today.

The crop this year is now estimated at 3,200,000 to 3,600,000 barrels, Mr. Taylor said, a 50 to 60 per cent increase over the 1934 output of 2,187,000 barrels. Reports now indicate that Virginia apples will be above normal size, though the final result depends somewhat on rains during August.

Production throughout the country promises to be 40 per cent above last year's crop and 5 per cent above the five-year average, the statistician said, but, fortunately, for the apple growers, the prospect for oranges and grapefruit in the Gulf States is for a crop under the five-year average.

Last year nearly 2,000,000 bushels of Virginia apples were sold to by-products plants for canning and cider making, Mr. Taylor said, and indications are that the same situation will prevail this fall. Growers answering a questionnaire last year said 11 per cent of their entire crop went into by-products.

In 1934 canners paid growers an average price of 63 cents per hundred pounds and apples pressed for cider brought 43 cents.

An increasing portion of the Virginia crop is being sold in bulk by truck, Mr. Taylor pointed out Another noticeable trend is that the percentage of production by commercial orchards is more pronounced, largely because smaller orchards have not received the scientific treatment they should have had.

'We Have Resigned,' Magistrate Says

Neighbors Becoming Enemies, He Complains.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 1.—Ninety days as a magistrate is enough for John T. Hicks, of Hereford, Baltimore County.

Hicks, who is 79 and a storekeeper by profession, was appointed as magistrate last May by Gov. Nice. The usual traffic cases were brought before him and he got along "fine" with them.

But, when people of the neighborhood trooped to his office to have tangled domestic situations straightened out, Magistrate Hicks found that he was making enemies of people who had been life-long friends.

So, he offered to give the magistrate's job to anybody who wanted it. No takers appeared.

Today he issued this statement: "We have resigned."

Park Pledges Called.

Richmond, Aug. 1 (AP).—R. A. Gilliam, executive secretary and treasurer of the Conservation and Development Commission, today called on about 4,000 subscribers to pay delinquent pledges to the Shenandoah National Park Fund aggregating some $80,000 to $90,000.

Polo-Playing Prince Killed Abroad

Prince Alexis Mdivani, former husband of Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, is shown astride one of the ponies which his wife purchased for him as a wedding present. He was killed yesterday in an auto accident.

Alexis was married to "Babs" Hutton in Paris the following June after literally "following her around the world" on a tour she was making.

The five-and-ten-cent store heiress' father, Franklyn L. Hutton, saw to it that his daughter retained full control of her money after wedding the handsome Georgian, upon whom he made settlements variously reported as $1,000,000 on marriage, a $250,000 settlement, $50,000 annually for life or $40,000 annually while he remained her husband.

Barbara finally divorced him May 13 in Reno and immediately became the Countess Kurt von Haugwitz-Reventlow of Denmark.

His other brothers, meanwhile, were merrily marrying here and there.

David, the eldest, in 1926 wedded Mae Murray, while the next in line, Serge, married Pola Negri a year later. The latter union went on the rocks in April, 1931, upon which Serge turned to Mary McCormic, popular opera star.

The former Texas choir singer gave Serge the air little more than a year later on charges of cruelty.

Mrs. Walker Dead At Herndon Home

Mrs. Mollie Virginia Walker, 76, widow of John Waller, of Horndon, Va., died yesterday at her home in Herndon following a short illness.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. from the residence. Burial will be in the Chestnut Grove Cemetery, at Herndon.

Mrs. Walker had been a life-long resident of Fairfax County, having been born near Chantilly, moving to Herndon about 20 years ago.

She is survived by five sons, John Patton, of Silver Spring, Md.; Charles Patton, Middleburg, Va.; Joseph Patton and Arthur Patton, of Herndon, and Clarence Patton, of Roanoke, Va. Three daughters, Mrs. Mollie R. Flynn, of Middleburg, Va.; Mrs. Joseph Neff and Mrs. Floyd Presgraves, of Herndon. Three brothers, Lindsay Lightfoot, of Seattle, Wash.; Thomas Lightfoot, of St. Louis, Mo.; Joseph Lightfoot, of Vienna, Va., and one sister, Mrs. Laura Cannon, of Seattle, Wash.; 37 grandchildren and 25 great-grandchildren.

New State Police Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Aug. 1.—Trooper H. R. Shields, of the West Virginia State police, arrived in Charles Town today as the first of the State troopers to be sent here for the new police post for Jefferson County. Trooper C. E. Mays, the second to be assigned here, will arrive shortly.

Belt Highway To Skirt Town Is Abandoned

Fredericksburg's Protests to Highway Commission Are Successful.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 1.—Fredericksburg today voiced its protest against the State highway commission's proposal to construct a $235,000 belt line around this city—and got its answer.

There will be no belt line.

Henry G. Shirley, chairman of the commission, gave 400 representatives of local business interests and civic bodies this assurance today after hearing former Senator C. O'Conor Goolrick assert, "No greater economic question has faced our people in the last half-century."

"We believe that traffic is going to increase generally and that Fredericksburg's tourist trade also will increase," Shirley said, "but far be it from the highway commission to do anything against your wishes.

"If you don't want the belt highway, we won't build it," he concluded.

The decision to abandon the projected alternate route around Fredericksburg was the high-light of the commission's busy all-day session here. In the morning they heard complaints and suggestions on tentative allocations for the Fredericksburg district and the afternoon was devoted to Culpeper district allocations. More than 50 speakers addressed the body.

Assisting Senator Goolrick in presenting this city's protest were City Manager L. J. Houston, jr., and Commonwealth's Attorney W. B. F. Cole.

Allocations Protested.

Trial Justice Francis W. Smith, of King and Queen County appeared in behalf of his county and read a letter from Senator William A. Wright of Tappahannock, who was prevented from being present by court business, terming the road funds apportioned his district "so negligible as to be shocking" and registering a "vigorous protest" against them.

Senator Robert O. Norris, of Lancaster County, said people of his and other counties in the Northern Neck were not satisfied with their allotments and asked that they be increased.

Douglas Mitchell, Commonwealth's attorney of King and Queen, advocated the hard surfacing of Route 14 from Newtown to Route 2 in Caroline and construction of a new bridge over the Mattaponi River at Walkerton. He warned the present bridge could not bear its traffic safely.

Direct Route Urged

A large delegation, headed by Senator Henry T. Wickham, appeared from King William County to request paving of the road from midway to a point in Caroline so as to provide direct route from Fredericksburg to Williamsburg.

Essex representatives urged the paving of roads from Lane View to Butylo and Tappahannock to Beazley. A Gloucester group asked improvement of the road linking Glenns and Mathews. Arguments for additional allocations in Middlesex, Mathews, Northumberland, Westmoreland, Stafford and Spotsylvania Counties were heard.

Lingamfelter Funeral Held At Homestead

Member of Old Berkeley County Family Dies at Age of 67.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 1.—Funeral services were conducted at the home near Hedgesville this afternoon, for Walter B. Lingamfelter, 67, member of one of Berkeley County's oldest families, former member of the West Virginia Legislature and widely known over the section as a farmer and orchardist, who died late Tuesday.

The farm on which he spent his lifetime was deeded to the Lingamfelters by Lord Fairfax some 200 years ago.

He was director for years of a local bank and long an active member of Mount Zion Episcopal Church, Hedgesville. In 1914-15 he was a member of the House of Delegates for Berkeley County.

He leaves his wife, Mrs Katie Kilmer Lingamfelter, and two sons and two daughters, Robert Lee, at home; Paul L., North Mountain orchardist; Mrs. Charles Seibert, of Urbana, Ohio, and Miss Mary Hilda, at home. Two brothers survive him, John T. Lingamfelter, of Elkins, W. Va., and William H., of Hedgesville.

Mrs. John D. Marker.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 1.—Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow for Mrs. Lutie G. Marker, 54, wife of John D. Marker, who died at her home near Opequon, Tuesday night.

She is survived by her husband and two children, Ralph and Fay Marker, at home, and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Lula Sutphin, Winchester; Mrs. Florence I. Riehard, Opequon; Loring Funkhouser, Fawcett's Gap; Ernest Funkhouser, Lebanon Church; Guy Funkhouser, Fairfax County, and Mrs. Lorinne Williamson and Miss Annie Funkhouser, of Roanoke.

George M. Morningstr.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 1.—George H. Morningstar, 90, one of the surviving veterans of the Civil War in this county, died at the home of his son, John B. Morningstar, Buckeystown, yesterday after a long period of failing health. He was a son of the late Michael and Catherine Layman Morningstar and was a member of the Methodist Proestant Church. He enlisted in Company K. Twelfth Regiment, Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and was honorably discharged at the close of the war. Four other sons, William T. Morningstar, Pikesville; George H. Morningstar, York; Edgar J. Morningstar, Barnesville, and Daniel M. Morningstar, this city, and seventeen grandchildren and nineteen great-grandchildren survive. Funeral services will be held tomorrow with interment in Mount Olivet Cemetery, this city.

Robert Dunn.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Petersburg, Va., Aug. 1.—Funeral services for Robert Dunn, for 26 years city engineer of Petersburg, who died Tuesday at his home in this city, were held this morning at Blandford Cemetery by the Rev. D. T. Caldwell, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member.

As a mark of respect to Mr. Dunn the city offices were closed from 10:30 until 12:30 o'clock today.

Robert H. Ricketts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 1.—Funeral services for Robert H. Ricketts, of Flint Hill, 85, who died early this morning, will be conducted at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. Ricketts was proprietor of the famous old Ricketts Hotel in Flint Hill.

He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. H. S. Barksdale and Miss Alma Ricketts, postmistress of Flint Hill, and Mrs. H. D. Radcliffe, of Frederick, Md. Mrs. Emma Cary, of Flint Hill, is a sister.

Louis Gingerich.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., Aug. 1.—Louis Gingerich, 71, native of Garrett County, a resident of Frostburg for 18 years, died early yesterday from paralysis. He was a member of the Mennonite Church and was widely known as a salesman for a New Jersey nursery company.

His widow, two sons, Harry, Cumberland, and Clarence, Akron, Ohio, and three daughters, Mrs. Robert E. Mullen, Akron; Mrs. George Timmons, Copley, Ohio, and Mrs. Edgar Frank, survive.

John D. Western.

Staunton, Va., Aug. 1.—Ill since November, John Davis Western, 65, died at his home at Fort Defiance yesterday morning. Funeral services will be held Friday at 11 o'clock at the Middle River Church of the Brethren.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Nannie Shaver Western, at home; two sons, Wayman and Letcher, this county; two daughters, Mrs. M. W. Garber, Harrisonburg; Miss Ruth Western, at home; a brother, Samuel Western, of Indiana, and two sisters, Mrs. Cora and Mrs. Bracie Baber, both of Harriston.

Bittner Spikes Hint He'll Be Candidate

Holt Backer Mentioned for Governorship.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 1.—Discussing his activities in politics and in the relief movement, Van A. Bittner, of Charleston, president of District 17, of the United Mine Workers of America, who played an important part in primary and general campaigns of Rush D. Holt for the United States Senate, refuted in four words a persistent rumor that he would become a gubernatorial candidate next year, when he said, "I want nothing personally."

Bittner made the utterance in connection with a visit this week in this section on official business. He said:

"My entire interest in politics and in relief movements of the Federal Government is to secure recognition, relief and benefits for my friends who are the common people of the State. I want nothing personally."

Law Cuts Police Speed, Suspects Elude Arrest

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Aug. 1.—A new city ordinance limiting police cars to 35 miles an hour was blamed by Police Chief J. H. Martin as a factor in the escape of three men in whose abandoned car was found nitroglycerine, two high-powered rifles, a shotgun and a set of burglar tools.

Chief Martin said if the police cruisers had not been held down in their speed they might have reached the scene two or three minutes earlier and captured the men. As it was, the trio escaped, and a widespread search failed to locate them. Police were called by residents awakened by their efforts to break into a garage. The car was stolen in Roxboro, N. C.

Job Placement Office Opened In Alexandria

Succeeds Reemployment Service; Qualifications First Consideration.

The Alexandria placement office of the State of Virginia, which succeeds the United States Re-employment Service, began to function yesterday in the offices of the old organization in the city hall, with J. William May in charge. Mrs. M. L. West, of Richmond, director of the Virginia State re-employment service, and S. W. Owens, statistical supervisor, were on hand to instruct May and his associates in their new duties.

It was explained by Mrs. West that the establishment of this office followed the passage of the Wagner-Peyser act, approved in June, 1933. The purpose will be to afford employment to residents of Alexandria, who will be given preference over all others.

Funds for the operation of the office are furnished by the State of Virginia and the Federal Government. The State service differs from the Federal Re-employment Service in that the Federal service was set up primarily to take care of PWA and CWA projects which required State service.

All persons seeking work are urged to apply to the local office and register. The registration must be renewed every 30 days to keep the application alive. All referrals on PWA jobs will be through the local office.

It is stated that a person's need does not receive first consideration, but his qualifications. This, it is stated, is not a relief association but a business proposition, and is affiliated with the State department of labor and industry, with headquarters in Richmond.

The number of resident cases in Alexandria involving relief in July was 128, or 12 less than in May, according to the monthly report of Miss Barbara K. Watkins, senior case worker in charge of the Alexandria emergency relief.

During the month $3,035 was spent, of which $2,293 was for work relief, $24 for district relief and $330 for administration. The FERA expenditures amounted to $2,647. Local expenditures included wages for supervision of projects, $382, and warehouse rent, $5.

There has been an increase in requests for domestic help in private families, which has removed a number of persons from work relief projects.

Community gardens have been planted, and the prospects for a successful crop are said to be good. The necessary labor has been provided by eight to 12 colored women. Two canning demonstrations, one for white and the other for colored women, were given during the month.

Added supervision has been provided on both white and colored playground work, under the direction of those placed in charge by the city. This permits longer operation of the grounds.

The regular monthly meeting of the Young Democrats Club was held last night in the George Mason Hotel, with Robert V. Duncan, president of the club, in the chair.

Short addresses were delivered by the various candidates who will come before the voters in the Democratic primary of August 6. The members, after the meeting, joined the Arlington Club on its moonlight excursion down the Potomac River.

Elliott F. Hoffman, clerk of the Corporation Court, reported that during the month of July he collected for the State $702, which included taxes on deeds, suits, marriage licenses and fines. He recorded 186 deeds, 21 suits were filed, and five wills probated. He issued 68 marriage licenses and collected for the city $49 for transfer fees on deeds.

The Daily Vacation Bible School, at the Chapel of the Good Shepherd, will hold its closing exercises at 9:30 o'clock this morning. A feature will be an exhibition of handwork done by the children. Parents and friends of the children have been invited to attend.

Marine Troop in Montgomery Will Enter Training Session

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Members of Company F, Fifth Battalion, Fleet Marine Corps Reserve, of Rockville, Md., will entrain Sunday for their annual two weeks' training encampment at Quantico, Va. The training will be under direct supervision of regular Marine Corps officers and non-commissioned officers.

In accordance with the policy of the Marine Corps in varying training courses each year, the men will sleep in tents this year instead of in barracks, as was done last year. Close-order drill, rifle range work and the duties of ordinary garrison life will be taught the citizen soldiers of the sea.

"Rookies" will be segregated from "veterans" and given an intensive course in the rudiments of the soldier. A non-commissioned officer from the regular Marine Corps will be detailed to each company as an instructor.

The men will take part in intricate and complicated tactical problems, but the problems this year will be based from a permanent base and not in the course of a five-day hike as last year. Maneuvers that can be completed in one day will be the order for this camp.

Friends and relatives will be guests of the camp August 17, when an attractive program of entertainment will be featured by the annual competitive drill and a parade in honor of the post commandant, Maj. Gen. Charles H. Lyman.

Officers and men who will attend the camp are Capt. Ralph M. King, Second Lieut. Robert E. Copes, jr., First Sergt. Louis W. Berry, Gunnery Sergt. Thomas J. Offutt, Sergts. Karl H. Becker and Benjamin F. Reed, Corpls. William D. Barnett, jr., Paul E. Bennett, Andrew E. Craigie, James W. Fisher, William E. Gartner and John S. Gloyd.

Continuing their campaign for the immediate extension of Sixteenth street from its present terminus at the East-West highway to the Rockville pike, representatives of a joint committee from five civic organizations in the Woodside-Forest Glen, Md., area announced yesterday that a delegation of those urging the project will appear before the State roads commission in Baltimore, August 8, at 10 a. m.

In addition to members of the joint committee, the delegation will include members of the Boad of Commissioners for Montgomery County, representatives of the Montgomery County Civic Federation, members of county political committees and prominent business and civic leaders.

The group will present a petition of 600 adult resident of the communithy adjacent to the proposed extension. indorsements of various civic bodies and public officials and a brief with maps and pertinent data.

The project, sponsors of the movement point out, has already been indorsed by the county commissioners who have asked the State roads commission to make this extension the first road construction project in Montgomery County out of Federal funds. A imilar request has also been made of the commission by the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

The proposed extension is approximately threefifth of a mile in length, and would require the construction of a bridge over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The only important arterial highway in Northwest Washington that has not been extended into Montgomery County, the extension would open a direct route from Washington northward to Olney and on to Baltimore, Westminster, Frederick, Philadelphia and other cities in Pennsylvania.

Civic leaders estimate that the project would cost approximately $200,000, including $120,000 for the bridge and fill, $50,000 for the rights of way that would have to be purchased and $30,000 for the construction of the highway proper.

The joint committee sponsoring the drive for the improvement is composed of representatives from the Forest Glen, Woodside, Linden and Woodside Park civic associations and the North Woodside-Montgomery Hill Citizens Association.

Bus service which will supplant street cars Sunday to Rockville, Md., will operate on the same schedule as the present street car line, hourly; except in rush periods, when the buses will run half-hourly.

Service to Alta Vista will be every 15 minutes, with 10-minute headways in rush periods, which is an increase in service. Existing fares and transfer arrangements will remain the same.

The buses will operate along the line of the street car tracks on old Georgetown road to Rockville pike and thence to Rockville. The present Montgomery County Bus Line service will continue to serve the patrons on the Rockville pike. It is a subsidiary of the Capital Transit Co.

Fire early yesterday destroyed a duplex garage and storeroom and three automobiles at the home of George Morris, Glen Echo Heights, Md. The Morris family was awakened by the milkman to find the adjoining building in flames. Mr. Morris reported he had left his pocketbook, containing $25, in one of the cars.

Clothing and furniture in the storeroom above the garage also were destroyed. Two of the cars were covered by insurance.

The auxiliary of the Gaithersburg-Washington Grove Volunteer Fire Department will sponsor an outing August 8 at Bay Ridge. Those attending will furnish their own transportation and will meet at 9 a. m. at the First National Bank corner in Gaithersburg. Mrs. Charles P. Fox is general chairman.

A special room for valuable old manuscripts and books which have been given to the Silver Spring (Md.) Public Library by residents of Montgomery County is being prepared on the second floor of Jesup Blair Community House. These books will be placed in locked cabinets and will be available to the public.

Many of the volumes have belonged to old families in the county and are said to be of considerable value. Among them are an arithmetic book published in 1831, with its quaint illustrations, first editions of volumes published in the ninteenth century, some autographed books and a copy of "The Wandering Jew" illustrated by Gustav Dore.

The collection also included two old scrapbooks with clippings from Washington newspapers published between 1860 and 1880, presenting vivid pictures of conditions at that time. There are also several books which have been repaired in the homes, one with rawhide and another covered with faded flowered silk in which is the inscription, "This was part of my mother's bed curtains in 1832."

O. W. Anderson, county agent for Montgomery County (Md.), has announced a series of meetings to be held next week at which the members of the Montgomery County Wheat Production Control Association will reorganize. Meetings will be held in each of the wheat-producing districts and directors and committeemen will be elected. The schedule of meetings is as follows:

Poolesville District, Wednesday, 10 a. m., at the schoolhouse.

Colesville and Wheaton Districts, August 10, 10 a. m., at the schoolhouse.

According to Mr. Anderson, the 1935 wheat contracts are expected to arrive in time for full discussion at the meetings.

William Hodges, Boyd, Md., was elected president of the newly organized Barnesville 4-H Club, it was announced yesterday by Albert A. Ady, assistant county agent for Montgomery County. Other officers elected were William Day, Dickerson, Md., vice president; Lawrence Price, jr., Barnesville, Md., secretary; Arthur Jones, Barnesville, Md., treasurer; Walter Ricketts, Barnesville, Md., senior sergeant at arms, and Fred Hays, Barnesville, junior sergeant at arms. Sprigg Hays, of Barnesville, was appointed local leader of the club, which plans to meet monthly.

H. C. Jackson Rites Set Today at Clarendon

Funeral services for Herbert C. Jackson, 56, who died Wednesday at his home, 57 North Clarendon avenue, will be conducted from C. J. Ives funeral chapel at Clarendon at 11 a. m. today by the Rev. P. G. Murray, of Washington. Interment will be in Glenwood Cemetery in Washington.

Mr. Jackson was born in Prince Georges County, Md., coming to Arlington County about a year ago. He served as a clerk for more than 30 years in the copyright division of the Library of Congress. He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Dr. Ruth Jackson.

Dietician Named.

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 1.—Miss Sarah Louise Lucas, who had been employed in Washington, has accepted a position as dietician in the Fauquier County Hospital here.

Farmers Seen As Stabilizers By Grange Man

Agriculture Must DoShare, Speaker Tells Group at Field Day.

Industry is passing from private to public control and farmers of the Nation must adjust themselves accordingly, "whether they like it or not," members of the Maryland State Orange were told yesterday.

Howard G. Eisaman, former lecturer of the Pennsylvania Grange, addressing the Maryland organization at its annual outing at Beltsville, stressed the need of cooperation among farmers at this critical period.

"Our hope as a farm group depends on our cooperative ability. We must have confidence," he said.

He pointed out that it is essential for the public to 'step in" to regulate industry. The Grange, if it is to measure up to every opportunity, must fall in line.

"These are epoch-making days. There are baffling economic problems. We are witnessing the passing of the old order. On the one hand there is want. On the other, there is abundance.

Organization Needed.

"When the shuffle is finally made, if agriculture is to measure up the farmers have got to do their part. People fail to realize that progress can be made only through combined expression, which is organization."

He declared some people contend the Nation's salvation lies in going back to "the good old days" before 1929. It was Mr. Eisaman's opinion that "this can not be done."

Referring to the famous painting, "The Man With the Hoe," he declared there were too many farmers leaning on the hoe, "wondering, but not thinking." The Grange must convince them that progress lies in organization, he said.

Mr. Eisaman also quoted census figures to show that 38 per cent of the 196 industries in the United States in 1929 were fabricating agricultural products.

"These industries mean the employment of 2,500,000 workers. Therefore, the stabilizing of agricultural industries will result in the stabilizing of all industries."

500 Grangers Attend.

Approximately 500 Grange members, from all sections of Maryland attended the outing, held on the picnic grounds of the Beltsville Research Center.

Thomas Roy Brooks, of Bel Air, State master, presided and introduced the speakers. H. A. Nelson, acting director of the research center, welcomed the visitors.

R. H. Ellsworth, past master of the Potomac Grange, of Washington, and K. E. Wallace, steward, extended the greetings of Potomac Grange.

During the morning the members visited the various buildings of the huge Beltsville farm. The afternoon was taken up with the speaking, followed by a baseball game and other activities.

Rites for O. R. Carr To Be Held Today

Old Resident of Arlington Died Wednesday.

Services for Oliver R. Carr, 67, a resident of Arlington County for more than 33 years, who died Wednesday at Georgetown University Hospital, will be conducted by the Rev. John H. Pearson, pastor of the Clarendon Methodist Church, this afternoon at 2 o'clock at C. J. Ives funeral chapel at Clarendon. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery.

Mr. Carr was born in Washington and came to Arlington County more than 33 years ago. He was one of the organizers of the Arlington Trust Co. at Rosslyn, the oldest banking institution in the county. He was a retired employe of the Washington Naval Gun Factory, where he served more than 30 years. During his entire residence in the county he was active in county affairs.

He is survived by three sons, Edward B., William F. and Elmer Carr.

Arlington Tops Building Mark; July, $202,945

Seven-Month 1935 Total Nearly Double That of All 1934.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Continuing to register the greatest building boom in the history of the county, records in the office of the county manager show that in July 50 construction permits were issued representing projected total outlay of $202,945.

Closing the first seven months of this year with $2,921,556 in new construction ordered, Arlington County has exceeded any like period in its history, the records reveal.

This is a marked increase over the entire year of 1934. Records show that last year there was a total of 362 permits issued with a total expenditure of $1,150,090.95. A total of 494 permits was issued in the seven months of this year.

The largest single building project ever undertaken in Arlington County is the apartment building now rapidly nearing completion by the Colonial Village Corporation, located on Wilson boulevard at Fort Myer Heights. The permit issued in May for this construction represents an outlay of $895,000.

County Manager Roy S. Braden says that installation of the $2,500,000 county-wide sewerage system is largely responsible for the continued activity in building operations.

Featuring yesterday's luncheon meeting of the Arlington Rotary Club at the Washington Golf and Country Club was the presentation of a medal to Eugene M. Caffey, jr.

The presentation was made by President Philip Talbott on behalf of the Federal Housing Administration to young Caffey, a graduate of the Washington Lee High School, as winner in the entire State in an essay contest. His subject was "Livable Homes for All Americans."

Discussing general conditions of the country, Dan S. Holenga, business manager of the Chamber of Commerce of Alexandria, declared that the "great trouble today" is that thousands of persons refuse work at reasonable salaries for fear of being taken off relief rolls.

He cited a case in his own city, where a person was offered a position of $18 a week and refused because he would have been taken off the city relief roll.

In conclusion he said one of the fundamental causes of existing conditions is that we have lost sight of religion. We need but ten laws, and they are the Ten Commandments, he said.

Edgar W. Pumphrey unanimously was re-elected commander of Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, at its annual meeting in Legion Hall at Clarendon last night.

Other officers elected were W. E. Holmes, first vice commander; John Maycock, second vice commander; A. H. Pearson, finance officer; C. M. Palmer, jr., adjutant; W. L. Covington, assistant adjutant; F. Little, chaplain; J. A. Boston, service officer; H. C. Duckson, athletic officer; J. D. McDonnell, child welfare officer; C. I. Kephart, judge advocate; Robert Weaver, sergeant at arms.

Delegates to the State convention September 4 at Virginia Beach are Commander Pumphrey, Charles W. Hanger, J. D. McDonnell, George D. Ricker, Walter R. Gould, John Maycock, Herbert H. Porter, Stuart Thomson and E. A. Golden.

The name of Thomas Delahanty, member of the local post, will be presented to the convention for the office of departmental vice commander.

Killing in Still Raid Declared Justified

Richmond, Va., Aug. 1 (AP).—John Wickham, director of the Virginia unit of the alcohol unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau, late today announced that John Millan, Federal agent, was justified in killing Dalmas Duncan near Leesburg yesterday in a raid on an illicit still.

Wickham, who made a personal investigation of the case in Loudoun, said Millan shot in self-defense. The director said he expected the agent to be completely exonerated at a coroner's inquest.

Gladioli Show Due Tomorrow At Falls Church

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The annual gladiolus show sponsored by the Garden Club of Falls Church, Va., will be held tomorrow in the town hall from 3 to 9:30 p. m.

The competition is open to all amateur gardeners and all flowers entered must be grown by the exhibitor. Entries will be received between 7 a. m. and noon. Receptacles will be furnished by the club except in classes specifying bowls, baskets or vases.

The show is staged under the direction of an exhibition committee composed of Mrs. L. H. Weld, Miss Bertha Holmes, Mr. H. J. Photis, V. P. Kalmbach, Mrs. H. E. Middleton, Mrs. R. W. Williams, Miss Ethel Reid, E. G. Reinhart, L. A. Jackson.

The Gladiolus exhibits will be judged by Howard R. Watkins, of Somerset, Md., and the other exhibits by Mrs. Margaret Payne, of Barcroft, Va.

The exhibits have been divided into three groups, the first being the gladiolus, of which the various colors will be divided into the grandiflorus type, the primulinus grandiflorus type, the primulinus type, seedlings and those judged for artistic merit and arrangement.

Group two is for garden flowers which includes zinnias, marigolds, tuberoses and lillies.

Group three is for flower arrangements to be judged for artistic merits. This class includes arrangements in bowls, vases and baskets, corsages, minatures, and in the children's department four classes have been listed. In addition to the regular displays a non-competitive educational or novelty exhibit has been planned. Prizes are offered in ecah class, with a sweepstake prize going to the exhibitor winning the largest number of points in the entire show.

William Jeffries Chewning, of Washington, has been named liquidating agent of the defunct National Bank of Herndon, Va., to succeed John M. Garrett who has been transferred to Sardinia, Ohio.

Prior to leaving Herndon Garrett declared that over 50 per cent of the obligations due the bank had been collected.

The Lee District Improvement Association of Fairfax County, Va., meeting in the Lorton School, adopted a definite program for the general improvement of the county roads and the elimination of grade crossings in that section of the county.

J. P. Blincoe, of Burke, member of the county board of supervisors from Lee District, and C. B. Jett were appointed to represent the association in negotiations with the State highway commission. This committee will seek to have the underpass of the R., F. & P. Railroad at Lorton widened and the two grade crossings at Burke eliminated.

The annual carnival sponsored during the past week by the Volunteer Fire Department of McLean, Va., will close tomorrow night. Earlier in the evening the women's auxiliary of the department will serve an old-fashioned fried chicken dinner. In addition to the usual carnival attractions, dancinfi is held each evening in a large open air pavilion. The proceeds of the carnival will be devided between the fire department and the School and Civic League of McLean.

Laurel Methodists Slate Street Carnival Tonight

A street carnival will be held by the Centenary Methodist Church of Laurel, Md., tonight and tomorrow night. A portion of Avondale street will be roped off for the occasion.

Tonight a band concert and chicken supper will be featured. Tomorrow night there will be a baby show with prizes for the best-dressed and best-looking babies.

The committee of arrangements includes Mrs. Bessie Beaver, Miss Gladys Beall, Mrs. Charles Haslup, Miss Christiana Showacre, Patrick Murphy, Edward Vogts, Calvin Donaldson and Arthur Godfrey.

Tobacco's Status Declared Better

Removal of Processing Tax Called Benefit.

By the Associated Press.

Prince Frederick, Md., Aug. 1.—Maryland tobacco growers are in a "more favorable position" due to removal of the processing tax from the State crop, John B. Morsell, Calvert County agent, said today.

Morsell is a member of a committee named to study the possibilities of Maryland tobacco from the manufacturer's standpoint. Other members are Dr. S. H. De Valt, head of the agricultural department of the University of Maryland, and Samuel C. Linton, Charles County farmer.

The committee has studied tobacco conditions in Virginia and North Carolina.

Removal of the processing tax, Morsell said, "has had a tendency to increase the demand for some of the lower grades." He added that Maryland growers should make their product more attractive to the manufacturers by more careful assorting and packing.

Hay Fire Destroys Barn.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 1.—The first fire of the season, caused by the spontaneous combustion of newly mown hay, yesterday destroyed the barn of Floyd Leap, near McGaheysville, causing a loss of $3,500, only partly covered by insurance. A horse was destroyed in the flames.

Virginian Is Victim Of 'Black Widow' Bite

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 1.—C. L. Moyer, 72, West Rockingham farmer, is in Rockingham Memorial Hospital in a serious condition as the result of a black widow spider bite. He appeared unconscious at times but was improved tonight.

Moyer was bitten Sunday night and it was first thought he was bitten by a snake. Then his case developed symptoms of a black widow spider bite. The deadly spiders have been found in many gardens here.

Attempted Assault Is Charged to Negro

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 1.—Police today were holding Alfred Tyler, 24-year-old Negro CCC worker, on a charge of attempted assault upon a local woman on a downtown street last night. He will be arraigned in police court tomorrow.

The Negro was reported to have been drunk when he tried to take hold of the woman as she was walking with her daughter. The woman fought Tyler off and hurried away with the Negro in pursuit. He was arrested later.

try Gulf 3 weeks
IN THE "TRAFFIC COURT"

Wanted: a fair trial

If it's been some time since you've used Gulf, try it 3 short weeks—and then give us your verdict.

Put it on trial in traffic. Starts. Crawls. Get-aways. Climbs. There's no fairer test—and we think you'll confirm a judgment that's already been handed down . . .

750 Turned Judges

We went to owners of average cars—750 of them. We asked them to compare Gulf with their regular brands—judge it on (1) mileage, (2) starting, (3) pick-up, (4) power, (5) all-around performance.

Gulf Won the Verdict!

At the end of the trial, 7 out of 10 voted Gulf superior on one or more of the 5 counts—many on all five.

Reason? Controlled refining makes Gulf 5 good gasolines in one. Gives it not only 2 or 3—but all five qualities of a perfect gasoline.

GULF REFINING COMPANY

Q. What tip on "pick-up" can cut down gasoline bills?

You'll find the answer to this question in this free Gulf booklet, plus 14 other helpful hints on gasoline economy. Drive in and get your free copy today at the Sign of the Orange Disc.

No Cause For Alarm.

With every outbreak of infantile paralysis there is a natural tendency for the public to become unduly alarmed. Not infrequently the dangers of contagion are overemphasized and parents are needlessly worried. All the more welcome, therefore, is the calm analysis of the present situation by Surgeon General Cummings, Health Officer Buhland and Commissioner Allen.

There is no epidemic of poliomyelitis in Washington, northern Virginia or Maryland, nor, as Dr. Cummings says, anything approaching it. A number of isolated cases have been reported in recent months, but the authorities have no reason to believe that they mark the beginning of an epidemic. These deductions are based upon a careful survey of existing conditions as well as broad experience in protecting the public against this terrible malady. Unless conditions change radically before the Boy Scouts assemble for their jamboree, therefore, apprehension over the health of the youngsters and the community that entertains them may be laid aside.

It is assumed, of course, that every reasonable hygienic precaution at the Boy Scout camp will be instituted. Safeguards of this character are always essential when groups, especially of youngsters, assemble in large numbers from many different localities. The prevalence of infantile paralysis in North Carolina and southern Virginia calls for extraordinary carefulness, even though Scouts from infected areas will be forbidden to attend. Preventive measures of this sort will be expected by the public.

But with vigilance against contagion thoroughly established, the 25,000 Scouts expected to converge upon Washington three weeks hence should be allowed to go ahead and have their fun. The minor risks involved by no means balance the positive gains which may be anticipated from the gathering of so many youngsters in a character-building enterprise.

More Currency Scares.

Lack of support for a retrenchment program designed to reduce prices and costs resulted last week in the resignation of the Colijn government in Holland and revived fears that the guilder might be devalued. Since then Premier Colijn has formed a new cabinet and for the time being the guilder appears to be saved.

During the past week, the Italian lira also had a "sinking spell," but for very different reasons. Italy is only nominally on the gold standard, and has not been able to keep the lira at parity for a long time. The exchange decline was due, therefore, to a widespread belief that devaluation is not only imminent but unavoidable. Color is given to this opinion by the government's announcement a few days ago that the 40 per cent gold cover for note issues would not be maintained. Italy's difficulties have been intensified by outlays for increased imports in preparation for war and by the domestic cost of financing the proposed campaign in Africa.

In Holland, as in France and Switzerland, the currency crises which recur at irregular intervals are due primarily to political rather than economic factors. Disaffection toward policies which impose fresh burdens on taxpayers and entail continued deflationary pressure is intensified in gold bloc areas each time a new economy program is presented or the currencies of other countries go to lower levels. With the Italian lira slipping rapidly, with the German free mark in a precarious state and the French franc just recovering from a major attack, the lesser gold bloc currencies are especially vulnerable.

It is still doubtful whether the Laval ministry will be able to enforce its deflationary economy decrees effectively. If the French Parliament should assemble this fall to find the guilder devalued and various other currencies at a lower level in terms of gold, the pressure to devalue the franc would acquire exceptional strength. Moreover, any declines in world commodity prices in terms of gold, resulting from this situation, would make the drastic economy decrees appear to be futile as well as sacrificial.

Defensive devaluation of currencies can not of course provide any ultimate solution of the world monetary problem. Complete disintegration of the European gold bloc would merely increase the existing chaos unless it speeded a general stabilization effort embracing the United States and Great Britain. So far talk of such an agreement has not advanced beyond the stage of hopeful surmise. All that can be said with certainty, therefore, is that the gold bloc can not be expected to hold out indefinitely against the prolonged and relentless pressure of currency devaluation and instability in other countries.

The Tax Bill Under Fire.

Criticism directed at the President's plan for sharing wealth by increased levies upon large incomes, corporations, inheritances and gifts applies with equal force and relevance to most of the proposals contained in the House bill. In two respects, however, that measure is preferable to the tentative recommendations of the President's tax message: It dips lower into the surtax group than was originally intended and it substitutes excess profits levies for steeply graduated corporation taxes.

Unfortunately, however, the Ways and Means Committee provided for a limited graduation of corporation taxes in deference to the President's wishes, instead of rejecting the proposal unreservedly. It is an obnoxious and unjust form of taxation which, once introduced, might later be used to break up large corporations regardless of the social and economic consequences.

The proposed increases in surtaxes are, of course, a mere pretense at taxation for revenue, since they are limited to persons with net incomes in excess of $50,000. According to official estimates, only 8,000 individuals will be affected and only $45,000,000 of additional revenue will be obtained. The new excess-profits taxes upon corporations, while less destructive than the system of graduation according to the amount of net income, would likewise yield only limited returns and would be most unjust to investors who have bought stock in profitable concerns on the basis of their earnings. The methods of computing profits for the purpose of levying taxes are, moreover, seriously defective. And finally, as the dissenting members of the Ways and Means Committee state, "the time to impose an excess-profits tax is when conditions are prosperous, not when industry is struggling to get to its feet."

Apart from the inadequacy of the bill as a means of raising revenue, the economic disturbances created by confiscatory inheritance taxes, combined with existing heavy levies upon estates, are a matter of extreme gravity. The break-up of large fortunes invested in productive enterprises would often be unavoidable if the property were closely held. Forced sales of plant, equipment, real estate and other holdings might entail heavy sacrifices. Under some conditions it might even be necessary for the Government itself to take over the property. In any case, wholesale liquidation of large estates would entail sudden shifts of ownership, thus tending to depress the value of holdings, and indirectly to interfere with the orderly conduct of many businesses.

There is also a glaring inconsistency in the efforts of the Government to obtain more revenue by increasing surtaxes in the upper brackets while continuing to issue tax-exempt securities. The President's slurring references to wealthy men who take advantage of opportunities to escape taxation by investing in tax-exempt issues is entirely unjustified. If the Government wishes to close this avenue of escape so far as its own future issues are concerned, it can do so at once. The adoption of a constitutional amendment is necessary, however, to permit Federal taxation of State and municipal issues—the broadest avenues of escape from exorbitant taxes.

The obstacles to securing approval of such an amendment are admittedly great, and doubtless ratification would be long delayed. But unless and until tax exemption is eliminated, wealthy men can not be blamed for taking advantage of it. As a matter of fact, the House bill if passed, will accelerate the flight to tax-exempt issues, thereby diverting more capital from productive enterprise and further encouraging extravagance in public outlays.

Viewed as a whole, the bill may rightly be called "nothing but a political gesture." On the basis of most optimistic estimates it is expected to yield only $270,000,000. This would pay the running expenses of the Government for less than two weeks, as the minority report points out. As a revenue measure, therefore, it is absurdly inadequate. As a plan for sharing wealth, it is even more contemptible, since the new taxes would constitute but an infinitesimal fraction of the current income of the American people, estimated to be in the neighborhood of $50,000,000,000.

To balance the budget, increased revenue is urgently needed. It can not be obtained in adequate amounts by taxation of the very rich but only by a comprehensive system of levies reaching a considerable proportion of the people. Careful and unhurried consideration is essential to the development of such a well-rounded program. A loosely drafted measure pushed through in response to executive appeals without opportunity for study of its social and economic implications will lead to disappointment if not to disastrous repercussions.

No Prince Of Wales.

Following the example of Great Britain, a group of American promoters are preparing an elaborate commercial expedition to Latin America. An exhibit ship will demonstrate the efficiency of American bathtubs, orange juicers, etc., all the way from Maracaibo to Punta Arenas. The vessel will be equipped with a variety of the instruments that American genius has added to the comfort and complexity of life. Its cuisine will be designed to make a powerful gastronomic appeal to our southern neighbors. Its lounges will be magnificent havens of luxury, and the entire personnel will be trained in the modern art of sales appeal.

But alas! With all these gadgets, exhibits and entertaining, the American trade ship will have no Prince of Wales. It is reasonable to suppose that the promoters of this venture scoured the country in their efforts to overcome this deficiency. The best they could do was to secure the services of Fred Roper, son of the Secretary of Commerce, as a sponsor.

No doubt this selection is intended to suggest that the Department of Commerce is quietly encouraging the expedition. But there is no basis for such an assumption. Indeed it is somewhat ironical to recall that Secretary Roper's department has on numerous occasions actively discouraged such high-pressure promotion as doomed to failure in advance.

Annual Leave.

Representative Young is entirely correct in arguing that the annual leave bills are important measures, requiring careful deliberation. That does not mean, however, that their passage should be blocked at this session. When this legislation is again called up the House ought to analyze and dispose of it.

Annual leave for Government employes was cut from 30 to 15 days as an economy measure. Whether it has served that purpose is doubtful. At any rate, the reasoning then applied no longer holds. Congress may well consider the issue afresh on the basis of sound personnel policy, rather than as a pinch-penny offset to a philosophy of squander. It is not proposed suddenly to double the leave to which Federal employes are entitled, but only to restore the rate at which leave accumulated before the depression. That does not appear to be unreasonable.

Moreover, a companion measure to the Ramspeck bill would reduce sick leave for Government workers from 30 to 15 days. If the two measures are considered and enacted together they would not increase the maximum hours that an employe might be absent with pay. They would, however, make the leave privilege far more valuable to the average employe. Likewise they would minimize cheating and irregularities which are reported to have increased under the present arrangement. Sick leave could be more effectively reserved for periods of actual illness.

Loose administration of the present law has led to very unsatisfactory conditions. In some departments, absence for a few minutes is charged against annual leave. In other cases, employes seem to be at liberty to take an hour and a half for lunch, to arrive late in the morning or otherwise to ignore general regulations. Some executives check up absences on sick leave, and others permit gross abuse of this privilege. Fortunately, employes who are seeking careers in the Government service realize that frequent use of sick leave impairs their efficiency records.

Regardless of how much leave is granted, these inequities ought to be eliminated. The application of uniform rules covering the entire Government service may be an unattainable ideal, but an approach to it can and should be made. Along with the restoration of normal leave, Congress ought to lay down unmistakable standards for bureau chiefs to observe. With such added safeguards, the leave bills should prove beneficial to the Government service as well as to employes.

Wishful Thinking.

Non-violent resistance is the strategy recommended to Haile Selassie by the Fellowship of Reconciliation. An open letter from the organization, which claims a membership of 8,000 with headquarters in New York City, strongly supports the Ethiopian leader in his determination to resist invasion, but submits that if he fights Italy's "unwilling conscript army," he will play into the hands of his enemy by consolidating the whole nation's fighting morale behind a tyrant.

On the other hand, this well-meaning organization contends, if the Ethiopians will merely refuse to recognize Il Duce, to pay taxes or to co-operate in any way with him, then "time and inaction will combine to deliver a powerful attack on the will to war of his army and his people." In other words, Italian troops will come to see that the suffering they endure is inflicted only by their own leaders and refuse further to endure leadership of that sort.

Unfortunately, wishes not yet being horses, the world can not hope to see Ethiopia extricate itself from the enmeshing net of Italian aggression by so simple a device. The Fellowship points out that Napoleon took Moscow, but could not keep it, and that Poincare's soldiers seized the Ruhr coal mines, but could not work them profitably. Thus, the letter concludes, it is demonstrated that "the force of economic circumstances, the might of human sympathy and the strength of man's highest moral nature in alliance with Almighty God can not be defeated." Painful though reality may be, this is merely wishful thinking.

Neither economic circumstances, human sympathy nor man's moral nature, however high, has served to maintain Ethiopia's integrity to date. Not one of these admirable qualities saved Ethiopia from Italy in earlier years, but only the force of swift, death-dealing warriors. Only the strategy of splitting 19,000 Italian troops into several sections and then butchering them individually at Adowa stopped Italy's onward march from the Red Sea inland in 1896. If a new war of aggression breaks out, Ethiopia can not be expected to rely upon any less positive measures.

Another case in point is China which, because of its disorganization, can offer only non-violent resistance to Japan. As a result Japan today is taking province after province from the prostrate commonwealth. The day has not yet dawned—and more's the pity—when an olive branch can be used effectively to fight a fire after the conflagration is once out of control.

Questions And Answers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have noted with great interest the quasi-controversy over Stonewall Jackson and Mr. John Stuart Barrows' letter of correction appearing in The Post of July 27. I, too, noted the incorrect statement, but did not deemed it of sufficient importance to correct; merely passing it off with the soldier's exclamation, through the corner of the mouth, "Sez you!"

However, as long as we are correcting errors, let's get it all straight. Mr. Barrows refers to an account of the battle (Bull Run), "written by G. T. Beauregard, general, C. S. A." As "Pete" Beauregard was quite a dashing and outstanding example of the chest-thumping, proclamation-issuing general, so prevalant on both sides during the first year and a half of the war (yes, I have in mind "Windy-John" Pope), why not give the full initials of Louisiana's illustrious son's rather dignified and impressive name? Pierre (Peter) Gustave Toutant Beauregard. Three initials, not two!

Beauregard also enjoyed the sobriquets of "The Little Napoleon," also facetiously given to McClellan (see Headley, Life and Campaigns of U. S. Grant, (p. 111), and "Old Bory" (see J. E. Cooke, Personal Portraits, p. 84). Says Mr. Cooke: "He superseded Bonham in command of the forces at Manassas about June 1, 1861, and the South Carolinians said one day, 'Old Bory's come!' Soon the Virginia troops had an opportunity of seeing this 'Old Bory,' who seemed so popular with the Palmettese."

Regardless of the above, it would seem that other and more important questions could well be disposed of at this time, viz., what congressional carriage laden with hoop-skirted ladies and their gallant (noncombatant out-to-see-the-fun) escorts had the "honor" of "winning the race," being the first to cross the bridge into the good old District? Or, was Hume Spring the place where the Yankees stopped to fill their canteens on the way to Bull Run, or where they stopped to cool their ankles on the way back? The patriarchs of Del Ray still argue this point. These, and many such interesting questions of great historical importance have never been satisfactorily answered. Apparently they merit attention. As I am a Virginian-Yankee I shall prepare for a brick (or hob nail) barrage from both sides of the Potomac. F. W. HOWARD.

Out On A Limb.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Please give some publicity in your usual sense of fair play and justice to the unfair way in which approximately 302 reserve officers have been recently treated.

We were called to active duty with the CCC's May 1 with the understanding that we would be on duty anywhere from six months to a two-year period. Accordingly when the War Department call came our sense of patriotism and duty compelled us to give up whatever occupation we were in to enter this work. Many of us purchased expensive uniforms, and went to other trouble and expense—only to be relieved after a period of two and one-half months. This leaves many of us in an embarrassing position; out of work, and in debt.

Eventually we may be called back to active duty, but pray tell us how we are to live in the meantime.

ONE OF THE RESERVE OFFICERS.

State of Virginia, July 14.

Inquiry at the War Department reveals that when the expansion of the CCC was first announced a sufficient number of reserve officers to command the new companies was called into active service. Recruiting proceeded at such a slow rate, however, that certain of the officers were placed on inactive status, though retaining a preferred priority. Since that time about 80 have been recalled.—Editor.

Artists and Artisans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

"The Post Impressionist" column today, July 26, is most interesting to one who knew Mr. Whistler's family and artist friends intimately, and it would be enlightening to know what influence the United States postage stamp which Mr. Farley chose (perhaps with the beautiful song, "Mother Machree," going through the din of the Post-office machinery) has had on the American public by causing men and women interested in art, mothers and the Postoffice Department to go to the Freer Gallery to see original exquisites of Whistler.

The fault in the stamp of being added to and taken from is the difficulty one sees everywhere of artisans infringing on genius they can not replace or understand. Because something is verging toward decoration does not mean it is good. I am thinking of the flowers on the stamp and also of the figures on the columns of the Supreme Court and the, I believe, Postoffice Building (it is not the Archives Building), being matched on each side like pairs of candlesticks or bowls on a mantelpiece.

How much more beautiful is the Treasury Building, with simplicity rather than bad sculpture over all, and how unfortunate that so much bad work in all the arts is passed through the Treasury Department.

BLONDELLE MALONE.

Washington, July 26.

Question, Mr. Blanton.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Everyone knows that the State Department is the agency to handle business with foreign countries. However, we would like to ask the honorable Congressman from Texas what department of our District government has charge of police promotions.

JOSEPH S. LEVITAN.

The Fishes Of The Potomac.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I would like to answer the letter printed in your paper and signed "Nell Bass" in which she scored the Tidal Basin fishermen. I agree that there is much to be desired at times in the way the "little park" is left by fishermen and each one should leave the park clean of refuse, but as to her charge that by allowing fishing there promotes laziness and unemployment, I would like to say this:

My husband was one of the relief workers for much longer than I like to think about. He and I are both ardent anglers and the Basin and river along East Potomac Park have furnished meat for many a meal that otherwise would have been meatless, and did not stand in the way of his looking for employment, which he found.

I think if "Nell Bass" will do a bit of investigating, she will find that 90 per cent of the fishermen will drop their line in a hurry for a pick and shovel if they could find them or had them offered. Anyway, fishing is much more desirable than spending their "dole" in beer parlors and surely feeds more worthy mouths. CATFISH.

Washington, July 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial, "Bait for Miss Bass," in The Post of July 30 was particularly pleasing to me, although you were a little hard on the "very old, old, old lady." The few notes and comments which I wish to record here on the subject may be a little prejudiced, for I am a fisherman of a kind and have (and still do) fished in the Potomac, the Washington Channel and the Tidal Basin, but record them in a spirit of constructive criticism.

My own observations, from about 30 evening fishing trips to the Tidal Basin, allow me to say honestly that by far most of the rubbish found in the Basin was thrown there by members of parties held under the cherry blossom trees.

The Tidal Basin is practically a closed body of water. Rubbish, seaweed, etc., are bound to collect on the surface of the water at certain points. All told, there really isn't so much rubbish there that it couldn't be removed easily once every so often by one or two workmen with a truck.

No one ought to have any difficulty in locating a rubbish receptacle in any of our park areas. There are several of them around the Tidal Basin. The great majority of people who have a community pride do locate and use them. The lazy people won't, even if they were painted a bright yellow or red. PETER J. STUPKA.

Washington, July 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The editorial in yesterday's Post entitled "Bait for Miss Bass," although completely beside the point, was most amusing even to one in her dotage. However, since the editor so thoroughly misinterpreted the intent of my letter, to which he was referring, I most humbly apologize for poor construction.

The main issue was trash, untidiness, foul odors and various and sundry other things offensive to one's esthetic sense; such sights and odors being in the vicinity of the south side of the Basin. Our friend the editor disregards all this, and is singing about the thrills of fishing, bright sunny mornings, etc. The editor evidently has the idea that the Basin was opened for fishing to furnish employment to men who have an antipathy for real work. I quote his closing lines, "There's none of our employments with fishing can compare."

The editor states that when it comes to argument he will not concede me a single point, however, when I think of the gallantry with which he gave me the advantage of so many handicaps, I feel obliged to show my appreciation of his rare sportsmanship.

"The flowers that bloom in the spring tra la have nothing to do with the case." NELL BASS.

The Post Impressionist

Dogged Perseverance

Post Office, Friday.

WE DON'T like to dull the fine edge of anticipation for our ultimate decision, but it does just now look as if the Post-Impressionist's Prize for the Best Dog Story of the first three-quarters of 1935 would go to the Connecticut Telephone News—published, we suspect, by the Bell Telephone Co.'s New England outfit.

Anyhow, this popular award of ours is always made for ingenuity rather than style or verity. And that little journal's "Dandy" strikes us as being at least first-cousin to Ben Trovato.

"When Dandy was a puppy, he was owned by Mr. Alden Fish, of Mystic, but later was taken to live at the home of William G. Fish, son of this dog's first owner. The two families live about a quarter of a mile apart, and Dandy insists on spending a good deal of his time at the scene of his younger days. For quite a while, moreover, he declined to go back to the home of his present owner when requested"—by his hostess.

We paraphrase, but we stick tighter than a brother to the alleged facts:

It is asserted that a few weeks ago, when Dandy was among his old haunts, the elder Mrs. Fish—that is, Mrs. Alden Fish—was called to the telephone by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. William Fish, who asked Mrs. Alden, as often before, to "try to send over that dog."

Mrs. Alden told him to go; he wouldn't. She chased him, he returned. Finally she called up Mrs. William and suggested:

"He always obeys when he hears you. Suppose you talk to him over the 'phone."

* * *

Then and there, the experiment was tried. Mrs. Alden held the receiver down to the dog's cocked ear while distant Mrs. William commanded:

"Dandy, you naughty dog—come home!"

And Dandy made a dash for it.

He still visits Mrs. Alden. But now, when Mrs. William wants him, she just telephones to him.

It never fails.

"The Voice with the Smile!" The only canine Dandy we ever knew was a pug—and his real name was Dandelion, however, if you have any doubts about the present Dandy, please recall that the very name of his habitat is Mystic . . .

We can't say why this should bring in Gus. Perhaps it is because he seems to possess certain qualities which, unfortunately, are more frequently observed in a dog than in a man.

"My dear Post-Impressionist," writes his sponsor, whose pen-name is Nemo, "for you to be immersed in what must be the highly rarified atmosphere of the postoffice is a shame. You are cut off from so many interesting characters—or so many that your pen could make interesting. But, anyhow, you aren't here, and Gus is—sometimes—so I give you Gus.

"We call him Gus, although what his real name is none knows, since Gus is modest to the point of fault. The term occurs as generic to the purveyors of comestibles, I suppose—and Gus peddles a confection which he is pleased to designate 'ice cream,' in a peculiar singsong that never changes pitch."

"Nor have we any knowledge of his national origin; when we nailed Poland, at a guess, it was hard to tell whether or not a touch of brightness crept into Gus' incessant grin. Perhaps Gus thinks that grin makes him attractive to his customers, perhaps he has a loose jaw or perhaps he is a numskull.

"We are a hard-bitten lot. In our department of the Government (which shall be nameless to you) we work at tedious tasks and we are ill-paid. So we ride the life out of any other unfortunate who happens to come among us. We are almost sadistic in our treatment of poor people especially: We know that it is only a bitter kind of humor, a sort of self-taunt, and that somehow it eases us through the day.

* * *

"Yes, this is the point: We kidded Gus. We piled it up upon his stocky shoulders for a long time, and he, simple as the soil itself, took it in good part. It may be that he only half understood us; but at long last we touched a vital cord, and now I am not all sure that some of us are not sorry.

* * *

"We began to accuse Gus of being a millionaire. We ran in the rut about the old sock—and Gus took it seriously. His normally silly grin changed to one of which bewilderment composed the major portion. Then he forbore to grin at all, and, as his bright blue eyes threw off a panic beam, the corners of his mouth went downward. He was not attempting what we term a snarl; that, no doubt, would have been funny. No, he just looked sort of beaten—as if we had discovered some secret shame.

* * *

"'Na, na!' he said. 'I make only six, seven dollar week. Can't save more one, two dollar!'"

Max Schmeling's Return.

THERE is more than a tinge of resentment in some of the comment on Max Schmeling's demand for $150,000, f.o.b. Europe, as the price of an appearance in the American ring against either Max Baer, who knocked him out two years ago, or Joe Louis, the colored man who recently interrupted Primo Carnera.

It should be kept in mind, however, that Mr. Schmeling has had wide experience in the prize fight business in America and that he knows much that the layman does not. He has no illusions about Madison Square Garden, for example, realizing that the Garden is not a national American institution but a soulless corporation operated for the purpose of returning a profit to its stockholders. Neither will he have any illusions about the so-called Twentieth Century Club, an adjunct of the Hearst papers, which operates under a guise of charity, using babies for ballyhoo, but is likewise run for profit, including the rich but incalculable profits of the ticket-scalping privilege. The nominal head of this firm is Mike Jacobs, a professional scalper of many years' service, who formerly handled this phase of the business for Tex Rickard in the Garden household. Mr. Jacobs is recognized as a box-office wizard, and no better proof of his wizardry could be asked than his feat of scattering the Negro customers about the premises instead of lumping them in blocks at the Louis-Carnera fight in the Yankee Stadium. This was done to minimize trouble in the event that the fight had wound up in a row or a bad decision like those between Schmeling and Jack Sharkey, or the Dempsey-Sharkey or Paulino-Delaney fights, to mention a few. Mike Jacobs is a master of all the arts and wiles of ticket distribution, and it was a delicate tribute to his genius which appeared on page 1 of Mr. Hearst's New York American the morning after. It was stated there that some of the ringside tickets, bearing the nominal price of $16.50, the price on which the Government tax was paid, had sold for as much as $100 away from the box office. Even dividing this price by 2 and assuming that 1,000 tickets were sold at an excess profit of $33.50, that would indicate a yield of $33,500 which was not included in the figures on which the ballyhoo babies received their dividend. The babies, who carried the sandwich boards for the prize fight, received 10 per cent of the gross receipts after the tax had been deducted and 50 per cent of the net profits to the so-called club. All showmen of any experience have an instinctive suspicion of net figures, but the babies, being inexperienced and not very good bookkeepers, take what they are given without demanding vouchers. They and other babies before them have been doing this for years.

• • • •

SO it will be seen that Mr. Schmeling, though he may be asking more than he is worth and thus defeating his own interests, is not reasonably to be accused of ingratitude to the nation which made him rich or denounced for a lack of charity toward those most pitiful victims of poverty, the hungry babies of the slums. If he were invited to give his services, free, or for a nominal sum to a promotion intended entirely for charity he might do so. He might, but, on his record, probably would not as Mr. Schmeling is not sentimental and his money flows like granite.

The Garden firm has no more claim on public sympathy than the so-called Twentieth Century, except that it makes no philanthropic pretense any more. The Garden used the ballyhoo babes for sales promotion until the babes were kidnaped en masse by another business house and Mr. Jacobs was a familiar figure in the shadowy tunnels of the big house for years in a relationship so vague that he came to be known as Mysterious Mike.

Moreover, the Garden does not hesitate to use the whip on anyone who comes around to rent the big house for an independent sport event such as a track meet, basket ball game or amateur fight show. In this the corporation is within its rights because anyone promoting such a show usually has a desire to make money for himself or for a club which may exist only on paper. It takes no more than a charter, a shack in the suburbs, a couple of chipped and splintered Indian clubs and a flabby punching bag to constitute an athletic club. Athletes are a dime a dozen and gilt medals for prizes only a few cents more, but there is something about the term "athletic club" which puts the public in mind of scrawney children of the slums developing into strong, clear-eyed American citizens who will one day sit behind flat-top desks, denounce foreigners and vote Republican.

• • • •

SO there is no occasion to run a temperature whatever Mr. Schmeling may do.

Patriotism and charity are mere stooges in the plot and the whole question is whether either house wants to hire a man to perform a job of work.

Jonathan Swift

By

William Lyon Phelps

IF I HAD to name the greatest writer of English prose, I should name Jonathan Swift, born 1667, died 1745.

His prose is full of ideas, so that it is a liberal education to read him; and if the best literary style simply means the art of saying what you want to say in the clearest, most emphatic, most sincere manner, then Swift's style is unsurpassed.

The works of Swift are therefore worth reading and studying for two distinct reasons; because he said so many things worth hearing, and because the way he said them is a model for everyone who ever has occasion to write anything.

• • • •

And now appears a collection of some of his most notable works in one handy volume (published by the Random House Nonesuch Press, New York, and printed in England). It is a book of 868 pages, edited by John Hayward.

It contains Gulliver's Travels complete, Selections from A Tale of a Tub, Selections from The Conduct of the Allies, the Argument Against Abolishing Christianity, Selections from Directions to Servants, A Modest Proposal, Selections from the Journal to Stella, The Three Prayers for Stella, which are almost unbearable in their agony of love and sympathy, and, in addition to a vast number of other short essays, a large number of his verses—which are indeed not poetry at all, but are brilliant and trenchant and pungent lines.

• • • •

Among the very short prose pieces, I particularly recommend Letter of Advice to a Very Young Lady on Her Marriage, Letter of Advice to a Young Poet, Letter to a Young Gentleman Lately Entered Into Holy Orders, and Resolutions When I Come to be Old.

The New Tax Program

Proposal To Abolish Exempt Securities Sound But For Politics.

The Post presents herewith the fifth of a series of seven analytical articles on the tax proposals now under congressional consideration. The author is professor of finance at New York University and an outstanding authority in this field.

By Dr. Jules I. Bogen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

AN integral part of the President's proposals to raise surtaxes on higher incomes and to bring about a wider distribution of wealth generally is the suggested elimination of the privilege of Federal tax exemption from new issues of State and municipal securities. It is obviously absurd to persist in raising tax rates applicable to large incomes and at the same time to keep readily available an expanding volume of securities, the income from which is exempt from taxation.

It is probable that no serious student of the subject of taxation would question the wisdom of the President's plan to eliminate tax exemption. The strongest kind of indorsement of this proposal may be found in a letter written by former Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon as long ago as December, 1922. Mr. Mellon there said:

"It is the graduated surtax, of course, that gives the greatest value to the tax exemption. Viewed from this aspect the tax exemption, in substance, constitutes a subsidy from the Federal Government, the cost of which in the long run must fall on those taxpayers who do not or can not take refuge in tax-exempt securities.

"Once it is understood I think no one can raise any valid objection to the proposed constitutional amendment restricting further issues of tax-exempt securities. As a matter of fact, it is almost grotesque to permit the present anomalous situation to continue. As things now stand we have on the one hand a system of highly graduated Federal income surtaxes, and on the other a constantly growing volume of securities issued by States and cities which are fully exempt from these surtaxes. Taxpayers have only to buy tax-exempt securities to make the surtaxes ineffective."

AS a fiscal measure, it would not only give the Government more revenue to tax future issues of these obligations, but it would discourage governmental extravagance by making it rather less easy for these political bodies to raise money. Governments would then have to compete with private issuers of securities for investors' money on a more nearly equal basis, without the artificial attraction of tax exemption which they now possess.

As a measure to aid business recovery, the elimination of tax exemption would be of considerable value. Since even higher surtaxes on income are now being proposed, it stands to reason that wealthy investors will be tempted to divert their capital into tax-exempt securities more than ever. On the other hand, the elimination of tax exemption would attract more strongly into private industry large as well as small fortunes. Now, when every effort is being made to stimulate new long-term investment in private enterprises so as to foster recovery in the durable goods industries, this step is more appropriate than ever.

From the ethical standpoint, there can be no question at all about the propriety of removing tax exemption solely from future issues of Government bonds. The President does not propose to make this change retroactive.

Two questions regarding the plan to end tax exemption remain to be answered, however. First, is it feasible? Secondly, is the Administration taking steps in the meanwhile to fulfill the objective stated by the President as far as possible within the existing legal limitations?

• • • •

AS regards the feasibility of the plan, there is room for very serious doubt. The consensus of legal opinion is that, while Federal and State governments may respectively tax their own obligations, each may not tax the bonds of the other. This is not stated in so many words in the Constitution. However, as long ago as McCulloch versus Maryland, decided in 1819, the United States Supreme Court laid down the doctrine that the sovereignty of the Federal Government and the individual States implies that they cannot tax the instrumentalities or securities of each other.

Some students of the subject still hold that Congress can frame a law designed to tax the interest on State and municipal obligations for the benefit of the Federal Government which would be upheld by the Supreme Court. The weight of authoritative opinion, however, is that a constitutional amendment would be required for the purpose.

Such a constitutional amendment, of course, would require not only a two-thirds vote of Congress, but also ratification by 36 States. Each of these States in turn would be asked to approve a measure that would make it more difficult for them and their municipalities to raise money. In the case of financially weaker entities, the resulting narrowing of the market may jeopardize their ability to finance needed expenditures or to refund maturing obligations. As a direct offset in the form of larger revenues the State governments would obtain little, since State income taxes are relatively light as compared with those of the Federal Government.

• • • •

OF COURSE, very strong arguments could be brought to bear on State legislators to induce them to approve the proposed amendment. They can be told that tax exemption which encourages excessive borrowing in the long run increases the fiscal difficulties of State and municipal governments, for they must then impose taxes to service these bonds. It can be pointed out to them that the population of the States and cities is identical with that of the Federal Government. Hence, when issues of tax-exempt bonds curtail the income of the latter, other classes of citizens in various States and cities must make good the deficiency by paying more taxes to the national Government.

Now it so happens that these very persuasive and valid arguments were made to a congressional committee 13 years ago. Nevertheless, remarkably little progress has been made toward the consummation of this objective in the interim.

Politically, therefore, the President's plan seems to be well-nigh impossible of consummation, unless it could be done through an act of Congress. By comparison, even repeal of the prohibition amendment may prove to have been a relatively easy matter.

• • • •

AS to the second question—the extent to which the Administration, during its period in office, has actually acted to reduce the volume of tax-exempt securities—the record is not reassuring. The net amount of tax-exempt bonds of various kinds outstanding has displayed an alarming tendency to rise rapidly ever since the war. At the end of 1920, there were outstanding $10,142,000,000 of securities of governments and the Federal Farm Loan system, interest on which was exempt from the Federal income and surtaxes. Ten years later, the Secretary of the Treasury reported that the total had risen to $21,571,000,000, an increase of more than 100 per cent. The next two years of widespread governmental deficits expanded the aggregate of such issues outstanding by more than 30 per cent to $28,072,000,000.

During the past two and one-half years, the volume of tax exempts has risen about 5,000,000,000 further, so that they have now reached the unprecedented aggregate of more than $33,000,000,000.

The chief increase has occurred in the outstanding volume of Federal tax-exempt issues, on which Congress now possesses, without question, the power to impose income taxes. At the end of 1933 there were outstanding $9,725,000,000 of United States Government bonds having exemption from both normal and surtax. On June 30, 1935, the total had risen by more than $3,000,000,000 to $12,838,000,000. While it is true that the prewar bonds and the First Liberty 3½s enjoying full tax exemption have been converted, a vast increase in the short-term debt has occurred. By act of Congress, all Federal bonds with a maturity of less than five years are given full exemption from income taxes.

HENCE, if the President really desires to put an end to the abuse of tax exemption for Government bonds, he could make a good start by asking Congress to provide that future issues of short-term Treasury securities shall not enjoy this status. No indication has been given that this practical first step is actually contemplated, however. Here once again, the exigencies of financing a huge deficit seem to prevail against the dictates of sound fiscal policy.

In addition, the present Administration has been responsible for a vast increase in the outstanding amount of bonds exempt from the normal Federal income tax, which is a far less serious matter. At the end of 1932, there were outstanding a total of $12,034,000,000 in Federal obligations with such limited exemption. Including bonds of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, the total now surpasses $20,000,000,000.

In brief, it may be said that the proposal to end tax exemption of Government bonds is a very sound one, but that politically it faces very formidable opposition within the States. In the meanwhile, as an earnest of good faith, the Federal Government might move immediately to end exemption, at least from the surtax, on future issues of such of its securities as now enjoy this privilege.

Cotton Crop Moving; Loan Policy Awaited

New Orleans, La., Aug. 1 (U.P.).—The new cotton season opened officially today in an air of uncertainty, with farmers, traders, merchants and shippers throughout the South, all awaiting word on what the Government plans to do about its loan policy.

Five private estimates published within the last week indicate the new crop will be about 11,600,000 bales, a large increase over the 9,470,000 bales of last season. Pickers already are in the fields. More than 45,000 bales of new cotton already have arrived in ports. The first bale from Mississippi brought 15 cents a pound at an auction in the New Orleans exchange today.

Cruise Set for Aug. 26 As Benefit to Regatta

A benefit cruise on the Wilson line steamer City of Washington is being planned for August 26 by the sponsors' committee of the regatta association to raise money for the annual President's Cup regatta. A floor show as well as dancing and other entertainment will be included in the price of $1. The steamer will leave from the Seventh street wharf at 8:45 p. m.

Tickets are already on sale at the wharf as well as at Dorsey's concert bureau, Willard Hotel, American Automobile Association and the Keystone Automobile Club.

Library Sub-branches Closing for 12 Days

Sub-branches of the Washington Public Library at Chevy Chase, Conduit road, Tenley and Woodbridge will be closed from August 5 to August 17 and the Eastern High sub-branch, which closed July 1, will not reopen until September 2, George F. Bowerman, librarian, announced yesterday.

Research workers desiring to use the Washingtoniana collection at the main library during August are asked to apply at the main desk in the reading and reference rooms at Eighth and K streets.

Bookworm Answers II.

THE answers, pretty confidently correct, of the second batch of Bookworm Questions are given here today. I salute the successful, and commiserate with those who think, with some emotion that they were a pesky lot of tricky questions anyway. Perhaps, from my blind side of knowing the answers before I composed the question, they were.

1. Juvenal was a Latin satirist.

Richard Halliburton tells in a certain book how he dived one night into the pool of the Taj Mahal, which happens to be something less than 18 inches deep. (I trust he made it the shallowest dive ever performed by man!)

James Truslow Adams worked his way up from office boy until he became a partner in a New York Stock Exchange firm.

The New Tax Bill

The Share-the-Wealth or Vacuum-Cleaner-in-Every-Estate bill is now before Congress, and it appears to do everything but look under the rugs and shake out the trousers for cigar coupons.

• • • •

What it does to you while you are alive is plenty, but it is after you are dead that the tax collectors begin to warm up to their work.

• • • •

Under its terms a funeral becomes a Federal picnic.

A widow is lucky if she escapes a Federal summons, a congressional inquiry, an attachment of the estate and confiscation of the larger floral tributes.

An heir becomes a person presumed to be guilty until proven destitute.

An estate becomes merely something with which the boys from the Internal Revenue office can play year-around hockey.

• • • •

And when a man makes a will he will be simply expressing a hope for the best rather than a last will and testament.

• • • •

"I give and bequeath" will be just a comedy line written in so the tax collectors won't criticize the document on the ground it was not funny enough.

Taxes on estates will begin at 4 per cent and run up to 75 per cent. Run is hardly the word; it's really a pole vault.

Tax Bill Meets Strong Attack By Republicans

Measure Has Heavy Going As It Comes Up in House Debate.

tempts to balk the maneuver. Representative Tom Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, made the point that each page in the record cost the Government $50, but Treadway replied that it cost the Government more than that to print Blanton's "political speeches."

With frequent interruptions the reading continued until Majority Leader Ed. Taylor proposed that the House dispense with it and meet two hours earlier today. Even then there were objections by Republicans, bent on thwarting passage by Saturday.

Byrns Brings Peace.

Here Speaker Byrns took the floor, with an intimation that the final vote might go over until Monday, if it were absolutely necessary. Byrns, always effected in the role of conciliator, succeeded, the filibuster temporarily folded and the House adjourned.

Snell made the only Republican speech against the bill yesterday. He said it raises only enough money to pay the running expenses of the Government for ten days and "opens the door to outright concentration of wealth by the State to be used for whatever purposes those who sit in the seats of the mighty might determine."

The bill marks "ruthless" application of the political axiom that "power to tax is power to destroy," he contended.

Blames 'Class Hatred.'

He declared the measure uneconomic, un-American, and based on appeal to "class hatred and prejudice."

"It may be instrumental in helping the present Administration in the next Presidential campaign," he said.

"But it will be infinitely more instrumental in destroying all hope of economic recovery and of fastening upon this nation and its people a new form of Government which will destroy our material prosperity, kill all human incentive to work in order to acquire a competence; wipe out the profit system, which is the mainspring of human endeavor and national progress; and, finally, destroy individual freedom of action in this country by making every citizen a ward of the Federal Government."

Snell's speech was described as "the opening gun" in the next Republican campaign by Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee.

"If that be so, we welcome the issues presented in this bill," said O'Connor. "If that is socialism, the country will accept it before going back to the old Republican regime."

Denies Responsibility.

Chairman Pat Harrison made every attempt to draw from Morgenthau the admission that the House measure is an Administration bill, and that it largely expressed the views of the Treasury.

The Cabinet member, who only Tuesday went over the entire tax question with the President, insisted that neither the rates for inheritance taxes submitted to Congress when the bonus bill was under discussion nor estimates on schedules submitted to the House Ways and Means Committee were Treasury recommendations.

"So you think then," said Harrison, "that the Administration will be satisfied with any kind of a bill Congress writes?"

"Not only that," replied Morgenthau, "I think the Administration would have to be satisfied."

Insisting that the House bill had been written by the Treasury, Harrison said:

"Whether or not I accept the President's philosophy, and I have talked to him many times, as I am sure you have, it is apparent to me that this tax bill has been based on the Treasury's recommendations."

Morgenthau let the statement go without challenge and Harrison went on:

"If the Administration has changed its attitude since the time of the President's message, I am willing to go along, but I don't want to get caught coming and going on this proposition."

His remark was pungent with meaning. Colleagues recalled that Harrison, who brought a $340,000,000 "share the wealth" bill out of his finance committee several weeks ago following a White House conference of congressional leaders, found the Administration withdrawing its backing in favor of House initiation of the measure.

Morgenthau Evades Quiz.

The finance committee chairman produced a letter Morgenthau sent him last April, when the bonus was pending, proposing inheritance and gift taxes estimated to yield from $300,000,000 to $600,000,000.

At first Morgenthau said he had changed his mind about the inheritance taxes, and then modified this by saying the letter was only a suggestion.

"Well," asked Harrison, "do you think the exemptions on inheritance taxes ought to go down to $1,000?"

"It is all a matter of statistics," replied Morgenthau.

"What did you intend in your letter?"

"Just what I said—no more, no less."

Ford Estate Implied.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, wanted to know what policy Morgenthau favored as to settlement of estates before paying taxes.

"We favor a liberal policy," the witness said. He referred detailed questions to Robert H. Jackson, general counsel for the Internal Revenue Bureau, who accompanied him before the committee.

Senator Augustine Lonergan inquired what would happen to a $500,000,000 estate of a manufacturer who died and left a sole heir, with most of the property tied up in factory, machinery and products. He clearly had in mind the estate of Henry Ford.

Jackson answered for Morgenthau.

"If it were free from debt," he replied, "it would be comparatively simple to collect the taxes. There would be earnings. Plenty of people would be willing to underwrite a bond issue."

Bond Issue Suggested.

Lonergan had assumed the inheritance levy on such an estate would be $440,000,000.

"You mean a $440,000,000 bond issue on a $500,000,000 estate?" asked Lonergan.

"Well," replied Jackson, "figuring on a ten-year basis, the earnings would take care of it."

"Have you ever seen a business put on a forced sale that sold for more than 10 or 20 cents on the dollar?" countered Lonergan.

Jackson replied that the ten-year collection period would prevent a forced liquidation.

Senator Byrd pressed Morgenthau on his suggestion that the proposed new tax revenues be applied to retirement of the public debt.

"What is this year's deficit," asked the Virginian.

"The President's message fixes it at $4,000,000,000," said Morgenthau.

"Well, then," remarked Byrd, "this tax program amounts to about 7 per cent on the deficit."

"Seven per cent is 7 per cent," Morgenthau came back.

"Why don't you go out and tell the country frankly that this thing is a farce?" asked Byrd. Morgenthau did not reply.

Roosevelt Loses Again.

Earlier, Secretary Morgenthau read a prepared statement in which he said that "additional revenue, which will necessarily fall short of meeting our full needs, will not warrant new or additional expenditures outside our budget plans."

He again urged that new revenues "be preserved scrupulously for the purpose, first, of reducing the deficit and, later, of reducing the public debt."

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, speaking for community chests and other welfare agencies, urged the committee specifically to exempt corporation gifts to charity from taxation. While he was speaking, the House Ways and Means Committee approved a Democratic amendment to the tax bill, exempting such gifts up to 10 per cent of a company's income, over the President's emphatic opposition.

Kiwanis Reports Care Of 85 Underprivileged

Eighty-five unfortunate children are having life made happier for them by the Washington Kiwanis Club, Robert F. Fleming, chairman of the club's underprivileged child committee, yesterday told the annual meeting of District Kiwanians.

The club has handled 500 such children since it became interested in them back in 1923.

This summer the transportation committee of the Kiwanians has transported 375 passengers, including parents, to summer camps maintained in the Washington area for underprivileged children. The club has also supplied poor children with many pairs of shoes.

J.F.Grindle, Jr., Winner Of Harvard Club Award

John F. Grindle, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Grindle, 4215 Seventh street northwest, a graduate of St. John's College, is winner of a freshman scholarship award offered annually by the Harvard Club of Washington.

Young Grindle will enter Harvard in September, having already passed his entrance examination. At present he is employed as a bank messenger for the Union Trust Co. In school he was senior class valedictorian, winner of the oratorical contest and prominent among the school cadets. Charles V. Imley, Henry C. Doyle, Howard Le Roy and John H. Pratt were the committee making the award.

Rainbow Room At Hamilton Lures Public

By Chanticleer.

Wednesday he opened the Rainbow Room . . . Washington's newest cocktailery . . . and announced among other things that the orchestra would be present each evening at 10 for dancing.

Well, the people came . . . and they looked about and drank their cocktails . . . and apparently they liked the whole idea. Because today comes the announcement that to meet the demands of the pay customers . . . the Milton Davis band will also play for dancing in the afternoons.

* * * *

Frankly, it seems a little unreasonable to like a spot so well that you are responsible for calling the band in off the golf course in the afternoons.

The Hamilton's Rainbow Room lounges are so comfortable . . . and those cold, baked turkey sandwiches so delicious . . . and the juleps so cooling . . . it really should be enough.

But in some quarters it is whispered that Dick Butler's concession to the approval of the public is only begun. They do say the Rainbow Room sooner or later will have to be enlarged to accommodate the citizenry.

* * * *

If you didn't see Gracie Barry this last week . . . it's your own fault. Because Gracie had to leave Maryland Club Gardens last night to meet an engagement at the Fox Theater in Philadelphia . . . opening today.

Wednesday night the after-dark fraternity assembled at the Gardens in Gracie's honor . . . and it was rumored that Master Richard Koons, of Bill Strickland's Lotus Capitolians . . . came under La Barrie's approving eye . . . he being appraised as the peak of perfection in professional accompanying . . . (on the piano).

* * * *

Shoreham's Terrace presents plenty of action these evenings, what with Audrey and Severin doing Continentals and Cariocas all over the floor . . . and Marta Kay high-kicking and toe-dancing from the minuet right up or down the dance years to the present day . . . and Paul and Pettit doing handbalances just to show that feet aren't necessary for smart supper floor gyrations. Audrey and Severin were seen not so long ago in Al Jolson's "Wonder Bar" in New York.

* * * *

Maestro Strickland deserted his young men at the Lotus Restaurant a night or two ago . . . and did betake himself to Washington's leading night spots . . . just like the conductor who rides the street cars on his day off. But it was all a big celebration . . . it being the wedding anniversary of the Stricklands. A bit befuddling, withal, however, for Al Norton . . . who occasionally would turn from bringing on a bit of floor show and call confidently to "Take it, Bill" . . . only to find that a strange face where Strickland's should have been over the bass drum.

* * * *

From now on the Hangar Club is not to be included in the category of "after-dark spots" . . . its a "just-before-the-dawn spot" . . . Guy Scott is trying to hide away at Rehoboth for a vacation . . . and just sleep and figger . . . the figgering being plans for the reopening of the Habana at the old Connecticut avenue stand . . . That being the way Host Scott's life goes . . . figuring all winter on plans for the Club Habana's summer on the Arlington Roof . . . and figuring in the summer on plans for the winter Club Habana on the Avenue.

There is the story of the gentleman who became intrigued with the murals at the Mayfair . . . appraising each with an appreciative eye . . . until he suddenly rose and dashed his cocktail at the colorful map of India . . . on the wall directly opposite the new Mayfair bar. After the excitement had died down . . . it developed the patron was a great admirer of Mussolini . . . and had confused the dark figure astride the map of India . . . symbolical of the Hindu . . . thinking it was an Ethiopian touch on the adjacent map of Italy. If that happens again . . . the Mayfair will remove Italy to another wall . . . far from the Hindu gentleman.

* * * *

If you are a newcomer to Washington . . . don't let the sophisticated old-timer of six or eight months' residence . . . who sometimes goes to New York for a weekend . . . fool you into thinking there's no place for a delightful evening in the local precincts. For example, for sea food, there's Hall's, down Seventh street way southwest . . . the Club Habana and Powhatan Roof for under-the-stars dining and dancing . . . Maryland Club Gardens, Dude Ranch, River Bend, Griffith Farms and other comfortable and cool places just a few miles from the downtown section . . . and the Lotus, Madrillon, Mayfair, Ambassador Hi-Hat, Harrington Pink Elephant . . . and a score of inviting downtown spots for a dining or cocktail hour rendezvous.

Novelty Dancers in Novel Pose

Posts Take Off, Moscow Bound, Toward Alaska

'No Schedule,' Flier Says of Pleasure Jaunt; Seattle Is First Stop.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Aug. 1.—Wiley Post, piloting a new red plane and accompanied by his wife, roared northward today on the start of an 8,000-mile pleasure trip to Moscow.

With Russian Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky out to extend best wishes for a pleasant journey, the round-the-world flier got away at 12:55 p. m., Pacific standard time (3:55 p. m., E. S. T.), after obtaining passports here.

The Ambassador is here awaiting the arrival of three Soviet ambassadors planning a flight from Moscow to San Francisco.

"There isn't any set schedule for this trip," Post said. "It is just a leisurely pleasure trip across Siberia to Moscow."

He has consistently denied reports he was making the flight to survey routes for a commercial aviation company.

Post declined to say when he expected to reach Moscow.

His present plans call for stops at Juneau, Fairbanks and Nome, from where he will cross the 40 miles of water to the Siberian shores.

Ambassador Troyanovsky said Post would be warmly welcomed in Moscow, where he was well known for his stops on his world-girding flights. The Soviet official described Post as "very popular" with the Russian people.

Mrs. Post, who has made many short flights with her noted husband, had little to say concerning the present one, beyond saying she was thrilled at prospects of such a long flight over new territory.

"Lady Tubbs", Opening Yesterday at RKO-Keith's, Is Breezy Comedy of Exposure

Alice Brady in Title Role Has Congenial Task

Alan Mowbray Plays Lead; Besier Cheers Cornell; Amusement Chatter.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"LADY TUBBS." Universal picturization of the story by Homer Croy, adapted to the screen by Barry Trivers, starring Alice Brady, with Alan Mowbray, Douglass Montgomery, Hedda Hopper, Lumsden Hare, Minor Watson, June Clayworth, Walter Long, Virginia Hammond and Russell Hicks. Directed by Alan Crosland. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon.

Peculiarly adapted to its star's fluttery and overstressed type of humor, this comedy of the railroad construction camps and the drawing rooms of the nouveau riche affords Alice Brady an uncommonly fine outlet for her brittle wit and penchant for impersonating affected and slightly acidulous young women with a "mission."

Encountered first as the hard-boiled, but roughly motherly, "Mom" of railroad construction camp No. 1, where she made the boys behave, even if she had to syphon the fuel out of their gas tanks to keep them from going to town on pay nights and smashing up all of the better barrooms, Henrietta Tubbs turns up finally in the swanky Long Island home of the Ash-Orcutts, who have gravely slighted her niece, Wynne Howard, and puts all of the four-flushing aristocracy in its place!

It was a roundabout route Henrietta had to travel to arrive amid all this spurious grandeur. It seems, a beneficiary of her bounty had gone home to England, come into a fortune and estates, died and left all to her. Accumulating this vast wealth, under the guidance of Elyot Wembsleigh, British barrister, and a smattering of proper social usage that might have thrown a mild shock into Emily Post, but did very well in her own set, Henrietta, with the "Lady" prefixed to her name, arrived among the snobbery just in time for a fox hunt and one thing and another.

Tubbsy Turns Tables.

Lady Tubbs on a fox hunt is really something to write home, or somewhere, about. Of course, after the manner of all good journeyman screen comedies, they give her the only horse in the stable that nobody can ride. However, by a subterfuge that the cattiest of the hunt party detects, she is in at the kill and awarded the brush. At the hunt dinner, it is the plan of the catty young woman—there is one on every house party—to expose the counterfeit aristocrat for the impostor she seems to be, but good old Tubbsy beats her to it and turns up some very down-to-earth brothers of her host and hostess—one a veterinarian, the other a hot-dog man.

You get the idea. Hot weather entertainment, pure and simple, literally. It is very, very pure and very, very simple. And, withal, amusing enough to satisfy any reasonable craving for an opportunity to do a little unabashed, Grade A chuckling. I recall no time when the temptation to break into lusty guffaws was so overpowering that it could not be resisted with a moderate application of will power.

Miss Brady plays the title role in about the same spirit, and at the same brisk pace, that she portrayed the role of Bridget in the camera version of "When Ladies Meet." Her high-powered, gushing, semi-hysterical style is admirably attuned to the requirements of the present chore and her supporting cast plays up to her nicely, if not always with complete conviction.

Support and Subsidiaries.

Alan Mowbray, as Henrietta's mentor, Elyot Wembsleigh, turns in one of the suavest of his broad "a" performances and finds a fine running mate in many of the so-British intervals of the story in Lumsden Hare, another English actor who knows where the accents belong and how to put them there. Hedda Hopper is the chatelaine of the counterfeit establishment that attempts to put one over on Lady Tubbs, and Anita Louise appears as the niece, wooed by Douglass Montgomery as the only "regular" member of an inexcusably upstage family.

Minor Watson, former member of the National Theater Players, is cast in the important role of a railroad executive whom Henrietta saves a deal of dolor and dollars and June Clayworth, a newcomer to these eyes, is that catty young woman we were speaking of a moment ago.

Production values are rather high in this subject, which, in a manner of speaking, is to say that it is well staged, directed and photographed. In the fox-hunting scenes there are in evidence some fine horses and hounds and a reynard who knows his way around the countryside.

A natural color cartoon comedy, "Little Rover" depicting the adventures of a vagrant pup in a big city with none too keen an eye for the subject's possibilities; the Pathe News, giving the New Deal a "break;" "The Last Wilderness," a colorful study in nature and archery, quite out of the ordinary, and an interesting issue of "Screen Snapshots" are the auxiliary features of a bill that affords an hour or two of thoroughly innocuous midsummer entertainment.

So with all the talk of mergers going around, they had to sell Carl Laemmle and his Universal company down the river again. Only this time it didn't "take" any more than it ever has before. When "Papa Carl" heard that his company had been merged with another major producing outfit for the umpty-steenth time since he founded it, he had this to say: "I have found, after giving 30 years of struggle and vitality to the building of the organization, that I have a greater pride in continuing to direct it than in the mere possession of a big bank roll."

That is all very well, but the popular impression is that Laemmle, pere, has his pride in direction and the big bank roll, both—which makes it still easier to hang on!

Is Occidental in Racial Drama

When "Shanghai" comes to the screen at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow as chief film feature of the bill, Loretta Young, whose smiling countenance peers out at you from above, will be seen as the young American girl whose love for a half-caste Chinese forms the crux of the play. Charles Boyer appears in the opposite role and a strong cast is announced for the supporting parts. This film has been proclaimed one of the most interesting of the year, although many have resented its failure to provide a tragic ending such as the trend of pictured events would seem to warrant.

Mons. Besier Speaks.

An interesting bulletin comes to hand from that unfailingly helpful oracle of the drama, Mr. Ray Henderson, who taps his current typewriter on behalf of Miss Katharine Cornell in the breeze-swept lounges of the Hotel Beau-Rivage, Ouchy-Lausanne, Switzerland, the lucky so-and-so. The bulletin seems to have been written in its entirety by Rudolf Besier, author of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," at that, and to wit:

Vevey, Switzerland: "I have refused to permit amateur societies, little theaters and everyone else to produce 'The Barretts of Wimpole Street' in the United States because I intend that only Katharine Cornell shall act Elizabeth Barrett in my drama on the stage in that country while she lives. It is a character she can play until she is 80 if she cares to do so and it is hers exclusively," said Rudolf Besier, who is spending several weeks in this city. Asked why he has not written another drama for her since this successful romance, he replied:

"I am both too ill and too lazy, but America has the finest living dramatists and all of them must be writing plays for Miss Cornell. If they aren't, why aren't they? She not only is a great artist, but she is a gold mine to an author. Now that the biography of Lola Montez has been published, many dramas will be written about her, but I advise all these playwrights to keep both eyes on Miss Cornell. She was born to act that strange woman.

Started a "Cycle."

"It may have been 'The Barretts' which began anew the flood of historical dramas, for there have been many since that play first was produced. There was an epidemic of the Bronte sisters in the London theaters. I was asked to write about them, but I do not like Charlotte: my love goes to Emily. It seems to me the commonest error playwrights make in biographical drama is to attempt to encompass a whole life-time in a play instead of treating only one outstanding episode.

"I am delighted that Miss Cornell is to appear in Bernard Shaw's 'Saint Joan,' an idea that is an inspiration on her part. I look forward to the time when she will act Shakespeare's Cleopatra and Ibsen's 'Rosmersholm.' Some day she must play Hedda Gabler, and a law must be enacted prohibiting anyone else presenting that drama until she gets around to doing it."

One begins to suspect that Mons. Besier holds Miss Cornell in high esteem—as who doesn't?

So the postman rang twice and left one pretty postage card for each ring. One was from Dan "Bridegroom" Terrell, of the Warner publicity staff presided over by Prof. Frank LaFalce, showing a full moon peeping through silver-lined clouds, rampant, over the surf at Bethany Beach, Del.; the other a woodland scene at Dansville, N. Y., showing the Physical Culture Hotel, founded by Bernarr MacFadden, from Matt Mannix, conductor of the orchestra at Col. James J. Lake's Gayety Theater, when that temple of pulchritude is functioning during the regular season. Both boys are having a swell time, according to the legends penned upon the front elevations of their respective pasteboards.

Mr. Kipling Objects.

Rudyard Kipling is a stickler for realism. His own works ought to be evidence enough of that, but his marginal notes on the working script of the film version of "The Light That Failed" is said to bear even more eloquent testimony of this admirable quirk in his nature.

Arthur Hornblow, producer of the film based on the Kipling story, is the proud possessor of the script upon which Kipling has indicated his personal reactions to the tentative screen version of one of his most popular writings, and so valuable does he deem it that it is his present purpose to present it to the British Museum, where he feels it rightfully belongs as the first document of its kind on which the personal chirography of the famous author and poet appears.

The script reveals Kipling, as a movie "trouble-shooter" of some proportions.

The crisp notations in Kipling's own handwriting often call attention to the use of expressions or references which could not have been used until years after the time of the story.

An Alert Editor.

Where Dick (Gary Cooper) says to his nurse: "I go to bed on my own power," Kipling rings the word "power" and comments: "thirty years before internal combustion engines. It was the horse and foot age."

Many of his criticisms weed out "Americanisms" from supposedly English dialogue. "Are we a team? is one. "If your talents measure up to your self assurance," is another. "Measure up" gives way to "match," which is more English.

Where Torpenhow (as yet uncast) says: "He had some very important personal business," Kipling's question is: "What does this word personal mean?" he substitutes "private."

In certain stage directions a bus is driven in, and Kipling marginally reminds: "A horse bus, remember."

Maisie (also uncast to date) is described as "full grown and passingly lovely." To which Kipling comments: "very important: She's striking, but not lovely. Remember this."

Kipling should have been a supervisor!

For those who enjoy keeping track of the screen stars in their private as well as professional activities, "Screen Snapshots" may be relied upon to present a long list of luminaries in its every issue. The one now on view at RKO-Keith's is no exception. As nearly as memory and a few scribbled notes can recall, Keith patrons this week will be regaled with informal close-ups of Mary Carlisle, Frances Dee, Barbara Kent, Sally Eilers, Mr. and Mrs. John Lodge—she was Francesca Braggioti, the dancer; Gene Raymond, Helen Ferguson, Warren Williams, Carl Brisson, Lola Lane, Joan Bennett, Al Jolson, Conrad Nagel, Jack Holt, Fred Stone, Wendy Barrie, Roger Pryor, George Meeker, Buster Collier, Clark Gable and Jimmie Gleason.

So that's what they call a snapshot!

Getting-Hot-Again Note.

Murder Suspect Back, Greeted by Mother

Jail officials said the two did not discuss the fatal stabbing on June 29. Ellis' home is in Chester, Pa.

The appearance of Terry's widow and her brother in the jail at the time, however, created some excitement.

"You killed my husband!" shouted Mrs. Terry. The prisoner said nothing. Ellis, however, ducked behind a deputy sheriff when Mrs. Terry's brother, Dudley Everett, made a move toward him.

Bills for New Show Week Are Rich in Names

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

"Front Page Woman," a screen adaptation of the story, "Women Are Bum Newspapermen," is announced as chief screen feature of the bill beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. Bette Davis and George Brent are the co-stars, supported by Wini Shaw, recently seen in person with Phil Regan on the Earle stage, Gordon Westcott and Roscoe Karns. On the stage, Leo Carrillo, co-star with Grace Moore in "Love Me Forever," will headline the vaudevill bill in person. Other acts will be supplied by Irene Vermillion, with the Dart Ensemble, and Mason and Yvonne. The Universal News, with Graham McNamee, and Freddie Clark's orchestral contributions will complete the bill.

• • • •

Loretta Young and Charles Boyer are the co-stars of "Shanghai," the Walter Wanger production for Paramount, to be seen as chief screen feature at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The story is one of inter-racial love in which Miss Young is seen as a beautiful young Occidental and Mr. Boyer as a half-caste Chinese laborer who achieves great wealth and power. Leon Belasco and His Orchestra will headline the stage portion of the entertainment. Roy Tracy, The Three Marshalls and Smith Howard are featured with the band. Other stage acts will be offered by Cliff Hall, the Sharlie of Jack Pearl's broadcasts, and Sidney Marion, the "Cousin Hugo;" Sylvia and Clemence and James Evans & Co., jugglers. Fox movietone News and Phil Lampkin's music will complete the program.

• • • •

Mystery on the high seas, punctuated with laughter and romance, is the basis of "Black Sheep," the film play to be presented for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Columbia Theater, with Claire Trevor, Tom Brown and Eugene Pallette in the principal roles. The story is described as a thrilling, fun-capped adventure aboard a luxurious ocean liner, involving a professional gambler, a beautiful actress and a misguided playboy. Short sound subjects and newsreel will round out the bill.

• • • •

Guy Kibbee and ZaSu Pitts are the pictured stars of "Going Highbrow," the film play based on the stage success, "Social Pirates," by Ralph Spence, to be seen on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. June Martel, Warners' new ingenue discovery, and Ross Alexander lead the supporting cast. Judy Canova, of the hillbilly family, plays her first character part in films in this subject. Special music for the production was written by Louis Alter and John Scholl. Universal News and short sound subjects will complete the bill.

• • • •

Shirley Temple will continue the downtown first-run engagement of "Curly Top" at Loew's Palace Theater through a second week, beginning tomorrow. In this engaging subject—in which she does by far the best work she has brought to the screen—Shirley is supported by Rochelle Hudson, John Boles, Jane Darwell, Rafaela Ottiano, Etienne Girardot, Arthur Treacher and numerous others. Charley Chase in "Four Star Boarded" and the other supplementaries also will be continued.

• • • •

Crystal pool and the Spanish garden ballroom probably are the winners in popular favor among the 50-odd amusements provided at Glen Echo Park. In addition, there are the thrilling and cooling rides, scores of concessions and the midway, ever-popular fun palace for the youngsters. A new short cut for motorists and ample parking space are added attractions of this free-admission playground.

Hood College Engineer Is Sued for Divorce

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 1.—Mrs. Mary E. Zimmerman filed suit in the Circuit Court yesterday for a partial divorce and alimony from her husband, Alvey O. Zimmerman, an engineer at Hood College. She alleges that they were married here in 1910, and that he deserted her in 1930. She also requested an injunction to prevent her husband from obtaining money from joint accounts which she says they have in two banks. The court passed an order requiring Zimmerman to pay his wife $25 a month alimony and $30 counsel fees pending hearing of the suit unless he shows cause to the contrary by August 19.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Aug. 1.

Hollywords and Paragraphs

AMONG the many Hollywood feuds was the one between Gloria Swanson and Constance Bennett. They speak to each other now, and sitting in on one of their pow-wows, you'd never believe they were bitter rivals.

Miss Swanson and Miss Bennett once fought to be the queen of the promising Pathe Studio. Each tried to outdo the other in splendor. Gloria had a special five-room bungalow built at this studio. It was a fully equipped house and featured an onyx bathtub. Miss Swanson was proud of this house—a star's dressing room. It made her queen of the studio.

The other day the troupe making the flicker, "The Last Days of Pompeii," for Radio Pictures were on location at this Pathe Studio. Lunch time came and Preston Foster, a couple of members of the cast, the assistant director and the cameraman marched off to the deserted Gloria Swanson shack.

• • • •

They took possession of the place. The assistant director prepared lunch for the crowd and they sat around the table where Miss Swanson entertained only the exclusive at lunch.

The large onyx bathtub was filled with stray objects. Preston Foster and several of the other players used a room as their dressing room the days they worked at the studio. A few of the prop men moved in and used Gloria's make-up table for a desk. The room became their office.

An attendant of the studio who worked there during the Gloria Swanson reign was amused by the change. A lot of film has gone through the camera since those days.

• • • •

NOEL COWARD has confided to friends that he will never appear on the screen again as an actor. He made this decision before "The Scoundrel" was released. This flicker opened in London, and Coward, who saw it there, was highly praised by the press. Even after this, however, he still maintained that he wouldn't be a screen actor. Coward is now busy writing a play, a comedy, in which he will appear with Gertrude Lawrence.

In Reno, lately, attending to the business that people go to Reno for, were Nancy Carroll and Jayne Shadduck, each ex-Mrs. Jack Kirkland.

The best show in Hollywood these days is Marlene Dietrich walking about the Paramount Studio in shorts. It is possible to see even more of her shapely legs than was put on view in "The Blue Angel," the flicker that made her famous. If Von Sternberg had only turned the camera on her in her current attire he wouldn't have needed a scenario—something he doesn't have.

• • • •

Often, directors in making a mystery flicker, take no chances of having you discover who the guilty person is. The guilty person may be seen fighting in a dark room, or his shadow may be seen as he walks near the window and you try to distinguish who it is by his form, his clothes or some mannerism. But to make certain you don't, a director will use another actor to play these scenes; an actor who doesn't appear in the picture except in these sequences, to keep you off the track.

The latest gag to keep visitors off sets is being used at United Artists. There is a sign at the entrance to every stage, which says: "Please keep out. It is very embarrassing to have to ask you to leave the set."

• • • •

EVERY actress wants as many close-ups in a flicker as she can get. Many have their sly tricks for getting additional close-ups. It was Anna Sten however, who wanted to do all her acting in close-ups. She didn't believe she would register in long shots.

Miss Sten had her own method for obtaining additional close-ups. A single scene is photographed from many angles and is taken many times. Miss Sten would play a scene without any effort until it was time to take it in the close-ups; then she would turn on the best of her acting ability. When these scenes were viewed in the projection room to select the best one to be used in the released picture, it was generally the close-up which had to be selected.

• • • •

Lillian Roth is making a screen test for the Ethel Merman role in the flicker version of "Anything Goes." When "Anything Goes" is produced on the stage here the Merman role will probably be played by Shirley Ross, who was selected for the part by Cole Porter.

The Paramount Theater here did great business one night last week. The manager wondered why the sudden increase. He discovered later that in the billing on the marquee the electric bulbs forming the letter E in the words "Stage Show" were not shining.

Phone Company Fails in Augusta

Farmers Mutual Was One of Few Independents.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., Aug. 1.—The Augusta County Farmers' Mutual Telephone Co. closed last night, and today few of its 106 subscribers had completed arrangements for continued service.

Approximately 40 subscribers in the county have signed up for services through the Chesapeake and Potomac Co.'s central station here. Some have petitioned the New Hope switchboard for service.

Fifteen days ago stockholders of the mutual company—one of the last of the smaller independent units in Virginia to bow to the inroads of "big business" competition—voted to close their switchboard at midnight July 31, because of decreased patronage and mounting debt. At one time the company had nearly 440 subscribers.

"For the time being we are going to hold on to our charter," C. V. Parkins, president of the mutual company, said.

Lynch Inquiry Put Off.

Louisburg, N. C., Aug. 1 (AP).—After questioning of several witnesses failed to develop evidence connecting anyone with the lynching of Roosevelt Govan Ward, colored, Judge W. C. Harris today recessed indefinitely his judicial inquiry into the mob violence.

Seidel Receives Youth-Move Post

Towson Man Named State Director for Maryland.

Aubrey W. Williams, executive director of the National Youth Administration, yesterday announced the appointment of John J. Seidel, of Towson, Md., as State director of N. Y. A. for the State of Maryland.

Mr. Seidel served for seven years as State supervisor of trade and industrial education of the Maryland State department of education. He was instructor in industrial education in summer schools at Johns Hopkins and the University of Maryland. For three years he was assistant superintendent in the shops of the Bethlehem Steel Co. at Sparrows Point, Md.

Obtaining a leave of absence from the State department of education from January to June, 1934, he served in Washington as executive secretary of the national committee which organized the national program of apprentice training.

Crab Shortage Seen Because of Sponging

Solomons, Md., Aug. 1 (AP).—The supply of crabs along the western shore of the Chesapeake Bay is only about 30 per cent of normal and three packing plants here have closed.

Dr. R. V. Truitt, director of the Chesapeake biological laboratory here, said he believed the shortage of crabs this year was due to too long a season in past years and the taking of sponge crabs in Virginia waters of the bay.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth Visits Countess in England

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

From London comes news of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who with her young daughter, Paulina, is visiting with the Countess of Berkeley at Berkeley Castle. The countess is an old friend of Mrs. Longworth, and during the visit many interesting guests have been entertained at the castle to meet the distinguished "Princess Alice." Mrs. Longworth and her daughter will leave England August 6 for Paris where they will be the guests of Count Adelbert de Chambrun and Countess de Chambrun, the former Miss Clara Longworth, of Cincinnati, and a sister-in-law of Mrs. Longworth. Mrs. Longworth and Paulina will remain in Paris until after the marriage August 23 of young Count Rene de Chambrun and Mlle. Josette Laval, daughter of the Premier of France, M. Pierre Laval. They will sail August 28 aboard the Manhattan to return to this country and then will go to Cincinnati to spend the early autumn.

Other Americans to Attend.

Mrs. J. Buckner Wallingford, of Cincinnati, a sister of the Countess de Chambrun and the late Speaker of the House, Mr. Nicholas Longworth, also will be among American guests at the marriage. Mrs. Truxtun Beale, who sailed this week for Europe, plans to be in Paris for the event. The former United States Ambassador to France, Mr. Walter Evans Edge, has sailed for Europe, and Mrs. Edge and their daughter, Madge, and Walter, jr., will sail soon to join Mr. Edge. They will in all probability arrange to be in Paris for the marriage, which will be an outstanding social event of the summer in the French capital.

Count de Chambrun and his bride will come to this country early in September on their wedding trip, and will visit not only Washington, the birthplace of the former, but will go to Cincinnati to spend some time at Rookwood, the Longworth estate.

The bridegroom's parents were married in this country more than a quarter of a century ago and as all descendents of the Marquis de Lafayette, among whom Count Rene is numbered, are honorary American citizens, the young count and his bride will be more or less coming to their own country. Count Rene came to this country some years ago to practice law for two years as a member of the firm of Davis, Pope, Wordell, Gardiner and Reed.

Father Is Colonial Official.

His father, Gen. Count Adelbert de Chambrun, is the former French military commander at Fez in Tunis and is one of France's most distinguished colonial administrators.

Countess de Chambrun has spent so little time in this country since her marriage that she is best known here through her literary work, notable on two continents, and for her work towards establishing a permanent Franco-American memorial at La Grange, the Marquis de Lafayette's estate, which is now the property of a kinsman, Count Louis de Lasteyrie. Neither Count de Lasteyrie nor his brother, the Marquis de Lasteyrie, have any descendants, but they, aided by the Count and Countess de Chambrun, have made a shrine similar to Mount Vernon at La Grange, assembling there many relics and heirlooms.

The Countess de Chambrun's most interesting literary work as far as this country is concerned, is the "Making of Nicholas Longworth" a biography of her brother.

Marvin Gives Fete for Couple Soon to Wed

The company included Dean Robert W. Bolwell and Mrs. Bolwell, Dean Elmer Louis Kayser and Mrs. Kayser, Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, Comptroller of G. W. U., and Mrs. Charles Holmes, Prof. Willard Hayes Yeager and Mrs Yeager, Dr. Clyde Reeves, Mrs. Minnie G. Barrows, Miss Helen Newman, Mrs. Marcelle Lane and Miss Roberta Wright.

Miss Reeves, the niece of Miss Catherine Robinson, with whom she makes her home, is associated with Dean Kayser in his work at the university.

Mr. Green Weds Virginia Brown

Couple Will Make Home in Pennsylvania After Wedding Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Janney Brown have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Virginia Neal Brown, to Mr. Robert Bratton Greer, of Rose Valley, Pa., son of Judge Charles Coover Greer, of Johnstown, which took place July 27 at the Florida Avenue Friends Meeting House here. The bride, who was unattended, was given in marriage by her father.

The best man was Mr. Edmund Rowland, of Drexel Hill, Pa., and the ushers were Mr. Charles Asbury Greer, of Johnstown, brother of the bridegroom; Mr. Hans Georg Fiedler, of Reading; Mr. William Kay Rhodes, Mr. Allen Seymour Olmsted, 2d, of Rose Valley; Mr. Thomas Edward Callaghan and Mr. Thomas McPherson Brown, of Baltimore, brother of the bride.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Greer will reside in Rose Valley.

Males Admonished to Adopt Their Drinking Maxim of 'Don't Mix 'Em' to Clothes

Editor Urges Cabinet Post To Foster Art

Only Hope for Poets, Says Mrs. Green-Leach, the Circle's Founder.

SHE REFUSES to publish poems of tribute to infants "because every grandmother in the country would be a contributor, and my magazine would be about nothing but babies." She sends rejection slips instead of acceptances for all verse having more sentimentality than sentiment, and she doesn't read past the first line if a bit of verse is shallow and impertinent.

Yet Mrs. Leacy Naylor Green-Leach, of New York, founder and president of the American Poetry Circle and editor of the Circle, a verse journal, finds plenty of poetry to fill her magazine each quarter because she looks "for good verse instead of big names."

A desire to discover and encourage promising bards led her to found the American Poetry Circle more than a decade ago, she said yesterday at the Women's University Club. "At that time there was far too little space for verse in the big magazines," she went on. "Then, as now, few poets except the established ones were finding their way into print. I knew from experience that there was nothing so encouraging as having one's work published; so I started the Circle, a quarterly magazine explicitly designed for good verse from comparatively unknown poets.

Magazine Weathers Depression.

Since 1923, when the first number of the magazine appeared, however, many widely known poets, as well as amateurs, have become contributors. At a time when many publications, Arab-like, folded their tents and slipped into obscurity, the Circle weathered the depression and flourished. Contributors to it have organized into groups in 18 States and there are branches of the American Poetry Circle in New York, Baltimore, Washington and Chevy Chase.

Now, with her organization well under way and her verse journal still growing, Mrs. Green-Leach is looking for other worlds to conquer. Yesterday she admitted she had already discovered one of those "other worlds." She is convinced, in fact, that the establishment of a department of art, headed by a cabinet officer should serve as a goal for every person interested in art and literature in the United States.

"England, France and Japan have portfolios for art and literature," she pointed out, "so why shouldn't we? A secretary of art might prove as beneficial to the United States as any other cabinet officer; a department of art would undoubtedly uncover reservoirs of talent that will otherwise remain concealed."

Would Provide Employment.

If such a department were designated according to Mrs. Green-Leach's ideas, it would have divisions to include literature — both prose and poetry—music, painting, sculpture, drama, architecture and the dance. It would provide protection and employment for all creative artists, "even those who aren't geniuses, and would be a definite recognition of the function of art in national life. The latter, within itself, would be enough encouragement for many persons," said Mrs. Green-Leach.

Such a department is the sole hope of poets in the future, she believes. "Of course there will always be some fortunate and highly talented individuals who can win acclaim regardless of all difficulties," she continued, "but there is a far greater number of worthy poets, painters and musicians who have something to give the world, without a chance to give it. A department of art would provide that chance."

Typhoid Peril On Trips Cited

Inoculation Recommended Before Departure on Vacation Tour.

WARNINGS against typhoid fever and ways to avoid it on vacation are set forth by Dr. Walter H. Eddy, director of Good Housekeeping Bureau.

"Typhoid inoculations may produce a temporary soreness of the arm or a mild fever," he says in the August issue of the magazine, "but they will immunize you from the disease for at least two years. And since statistics show that the prevalence of typhoid in all parts of the country coincides with vacation periods, it is apparent that going back to nature has its health hazards as well as its fun.

"At home you and I are pretty well protected from contamination. We live in screened houses and flies are few—they can't contaminate our food by tracking germs on it. We drink the public water supply, and while it may not seem so attractive as that rushing brook, bubbling spring, or mossy well, it is probably much safer. In town we get our milk out of a bottle, and it is Grade A or B pasteurized; that is, heated to destroy disease germs. The plumbing in homes and public places, the disposal of sewage and garbage, are under board of health control, as is also the inspection of food and meat dispensaries and their employes.

"We leave much of this protection behind when we go on vacations. We drink milk straight from the cow and it may be contaminated by the hands of the milker. The mossy spring with its refreshingly cool water may be a drainage center for the dread typhoid germ. We eat in the open, and that fly we brush off our sandwich may have just visited a depository of germs."

New Gabardine Raincoat Should Help; It Goes With Tennis Slacks or Tuxedo

The tan gabardine raincoat above is recommended for the man who would be well dressed even in wet weather. Also pictured are a covered pipe for wind-blown pastimes, cool crinkle crepe shirts with matching tie, an inexpensive Gladstone bag, convertible watch strap, plain silver studs for evening wear, and a luxurious bath set for men, including a back-scratcher.

By John Q. Alexander.

IF IGNORANCE is bliss, most men should be in a dovecote as far as clothes are concerned. They mix their wardrobes with an utter abandon they would never dare in mixing their drinks, and the result is often acutely depressing.

There's one article, you should be particularly careful of—your raincoat. Reason for this is, you wear it with everything from tennis slacks to evening clothes and it must not clash with any of them. Well, remember all those stories about the farmer's daughter? Here's one about a city slicker. It's of tan gabardine, which is infinitely superior to most waterproof fabrics and has no pride—it goes with anything. Raglan shoulders and generous slash pockets, a dashing balmacan collar and full draped back. Fly front—no buttons visible, and a plaid lining. Garbardine, if you must know, is usually expensive, especially in raincoats. Which is another reason why this one should get the trousered gender's dry vote. It has youth, verve, swagger and everything that most raincoats haven't. Your's for $12.50.

Another good item at a ridiculously low (we're still giggling) price is a Gladstone bag of genuine heavy leather, rough grained, in black or brown. It has a washable keratol lining, with two large bellows pockets for small accessories and a shirt compartment. The world, praise be, is becoming more and more luggage conscious, and gone are the days when grandfather's portmanteau was acceptable as a traveling companion. It won't do, me lads, it simply won't do. So toss it away, and get yourself one of these expensive-looking, durable, masculine Gladstones. Quality? It's in the bag—take it home for $7.95.

This is the last syllable we'll utter regarding cool fabrics. But we've seen so many hard-guys soft-boiled in the summer sun that we just can't resist one final word. There's a soft cotton crinkly crepe shirt available, light as a whisper. One of the better features is that this shirt requires no starching and no ironing—it has a special collar that remains fresh and sturdy, come what may. And you can get ties of the same material to match—a smart, new idea. The fad for ties that blind seems to be dying; we're going conservative again. The shirts are $1.95, in plain shades or thin stripes. Ties to match, 35 cents. Wash them along with the shirt.

* * * *

Something swell for anything in pants (except Marlene Dietrich, perhaps) would be a set of the new plain gold or silver shirt studs for evening wear. Diamonds, pearls and other fancy jools are now out. Simplicity is the keynote and not only that, but have you heard? Silver studs (shirt and cuff) for full dress; gold studs for dinner jacket. Ho hum. You won't lose caste if you slip on that rule, and we mention these studs only because they are unusually good. Perfectly round, instead of octagonal or elliptical, and so simple that they actually reek of quiet elegance. Three dollars and fifty cents a set for either silver or gold. Plated, of course, and guaranteed not to tarnish.

Another smart idea which has been welcomed enthusiastically is the English style watch chain which transforms your wrist watch into a pocket watch and vice versa. Wrist watches are a great nuisance during warm weather causing perspiration, getting caught in wilted cuffs, slipping about on your wrist and in general, making you uncomfortable. This ingenious gadget fastens in your coat lapel, and you drop the watch (which it holds flat) in your breast pocket. Available in plain and braided leather, in various colors, $1.

* * * *

Smoking a pipe in the wind is a pastime fraught with danger—ask the man who owns one. With every gust, a shower of hot ashes comes forth, burning holes in your clothes, getting in your eyes and causing havoc. Cheer up, though—it is all over now. There is a new covered pipe which really draws. It is fine for fishing, sailing, motoring, golf and other wind-blown activities.

Constructed of briar root, it has a sliding perforated nickel cap over the bowl, which not only keeps the ashes where they should be while you are smoking, but protects your clothes when the pipe is carried in your pocket. $2.50 each.

One More Word About Hot-Weather Shirts; Gold Studs Return.

Neatest outfit we've seen for some time is a bath set of two immense, luxurious towels, two immense luxurious wash clothes, and, of all things, a backscratcher. Ittsy bittsy towels are the bane of many an otherwise well-kept man's existence. And what husband, father, son or brother doesn't love having his back scratched?

This back-scratcher is a band of heavy woven material with an insert of linen terry, and a loop at each end for you to grasp. Five minutes of this sort of thing after a cold shower will make you put the glow-worm to shame, and you will feel healthy and fit that you will probably become a Success, like the men in the magazines who take Courses. The whole handsome kit—two towels, two washcloths and that wunnerful, wunnerful back-scratcher, costs $5.00.

Mr. Alexander's articles, written exclusively for The Post, appear every Friday on this page. For information on men's fashions, or for the names of the shops carrying the apparel described above, call National 4200, branch 323, or write, inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a girl 23 years old and until recently never had a real beau in my life. I am the eldest girl in a family of six children, and my parents live in a country town. I worked my way through college and got a job here a year ago. At the place where I stay I met a man who is 35 years old. He was supposed to dislike women, but I think what really ailed him is that he is shy. Anyway, he has been very nice to me, and has taken me to theaters, to dinners, to concerts and sight-seeing to places I might never have seen unless I had someone to take me. Also, he is constantly making me gifts.

* * * *

And that is what I want to ask you about. Should I accept gifts from him? Am I obligating myself to him in any way, or making him believe I am seriously interested in him? I am very grateful to him for being so kind to me, but of course I couldn't love him. He is much too old, for one thing, and isn't my idea of the man I hope to marry, for another thing.

* * * *

He gives me boxes of candy, books, flowers, perfume, cigarettes, has given me a litlte bracelet and on a recent trip to New York he brought me back a very elaborate evening bag, fitted up with cosmetics and cigarette case. I'm sure it must have been very expensive. I have been going out with this man for about four months. Am I doing right in accepting these gifts? If I shouldn't take them, how should I decline them? I mean, what should I say, so as not to hurt his feelings, for I'm sure he means them in a spirit of kindness.

COUNTRY GIRL.

Inexpensive Gifts Acceptable.

DEAR COUNTRY GIRL: There's no reason why you shouldn't accept comparatively inexpensive gifts of a conventional type from a man who chooses this method of expressing his friendship and contributing to your happiness. Since your primary feeling for him is one of gratitude, and you are quite convinced you could never love him, I think it might be well to make this known to him, in a very tactful manner. Then, if he is giving you gifts with the idea of ingratiating himself in your affections, either he can stop the practice, or continue it at his own risk.

* * * *

Inasmuch as the man is shy and has heretofore avoided women, it may be he is discovering a great deal of belated pleasure in lavishing gifts on a warmly appreciative and guileless girl. He may be no more interested in you, from the romantic standpoint, than you are in him. There are a great many lonely persons longing to go places and do things, who procrastinate about the going and the doing simply because there is no one to accompany them on such excursions. This man may have longed for such a companion and found her in you, and it's possible the gifts may be his way of expressing gratitude to you for going.

* * * *

I think you should protest his giving you obviously expensive gifts, however. Such protest, honestly made, should not offend, however worded. Just phrase the sentiment as it occurs to you, telling him why you would be happier to have only inexpensive remembrances from him.

Women in Revolt Against Age, But Efforts Should Encompass Service and Self-Expression

By Malvina Lindsay.

AT A TIME when the job-getting problems of the woman past 40 are exciting wide concern, some significant items stand out in the day's news.

* * * *

Maude Adams, aged 63, has announced she will return to the Broadway stage this fall.

Sophie Tucker, 47-year-old trouper and torch singer, has turned to the baseball field, and is seeking to buy the Boston Braves.

Mary Garden, still glamorous at 63, has returned to Chicago to begin work as a music teacher.

Mrs. Lillian G. Gist, 80-year-old great-grandmother, has been awarded her master of arts degree from Claremont College in California. Her 28,000-word thesis on "Lucretius as a Poet," based on her studies in six seminars during the last year, she typed herself.

* * * *

These are only a few examples of how women are pooh-poohing the age phobia to start new ventures. Other numerous instances could be cited of women who are defying it to carry on work already begun. Evangeline Booth, 69-year-old international commander of the Salvation Army is launching a world revival of evangelism. Carrie Chapman Catt at 76 is looked to by women throughout the world for peace leadership. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, 77-year-old world president of the W. C. T. U. is mapping a new offensive against alcohol.

FROM a woman's magazine comes the following: ". . . you are over 50; maybe you are a slim, hard-muscled woman who can dress with enviable rhythm and who can buy your clothes in the misses' department . . ."

Five years ago the above statement would have begun ". . . you are over 40." Fifteen years ago it would have opened, ". . . you are over 30." A quarter century ago it would have started ". . . you are over 25."

* * * *

Such has been the quiet, almost undercover revolution that women within the present century have been staging against age. But it has been too largely a physical revolution. It is significant that cosmetic and fashion writers are now concerning themselves with the woman past 50. But it is more significant that women past 50 and even 60, 70 and 80 are increasingly showing the daring to begin new studies, start new pursuits, plunge into new business ventures, undertake new social challenges.

* * * *

The emancipation of youth that followed the World War has been hailed, and rightly, with loud rejoicing. One of the chief things needed now, however, is the emancipation of age. Too many older persons, women particularly, are held back from their fullest self-expression and their fullest service in the world by the tradition that youth must be served. Too many mothers fail to step out and do things—go to college, enter business, undertake movements—any of the things they've always wanted to do—for fear of what their children will say and their children's friends think.

NOW THAT YOUTH has had its chance, it should vouchsafe the same privilege to age. And age should be sporty enough to take the chance. Women from 30 on up to 80—and possibly 90—should show a little more of the spirit that the flappers and cake-eaters of the early 1920's showed. They should shout to high heaven that they want to live their own lives and they should go out and live them.

* * * *

It is not so much that the world gives the older woman a bad deal as that she is too rabbity to assert herself. At a time when she is ready to make her richest contribution to the world she holds back obsessed with the idea that she is "getting along." One of women's greatest handicaps is her age phobia, Dr. Karen Horney, noted psychiatrist, recently asserted: Certainly if a woman holds the idea that she is through at 40 or 50 or 70, other people also will hold it. Her first step is to assert her own inward triumph over the age tradition, her next to step out boldly and do the things she wants to do.

* * * *

While each day's news brings encouraging reports of older women asserting themselves, yet women generally need to make war mentally on the age phobia as relentlessly as they have on it physically. They need to develop more of the spirit of the late Mrs. Florence Kendall, the heroic "Lady Florence" of the World War, who, at the age of 66, mentally lopped off 21 years from her age and went to France to drive an ambulance. They particularly need to emulate the attitude she displayed in her famous cablegram to her son who, at the end of the war, sent her word he would come to France to bring her home. She cabled back: "For God's sake stay where you are. You aren't even born yet."

Cutter Warns Against Poison In Beauty Aids

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

BEAUTY at any price is the goal of many women and "cosmetologists" vie with each other in producing subtle and effective beauty aids. Some of these attempt to paint the lily, while under the beneficient effects of others, years drop away. Goodness knows we must have them. How drab and colorless many of our most charming matrons would appear without them! More power to the cosmeticians if they will make certain that the ingredients of their powders, pomades and perfumes are harmless and free from noxious materials.

Of the tremendous number of beauty aids to which our lady friends have such frequent recourse the majority are harmless. A few, however, may cause skin irritations or even constitutional symptoms, while a still smaller number have been reported to be definitely poisonous.

There are several substances which will remove superfluous hair One of these is thallium acetate, the incorporation of which into hair-removing creams has led to many cases of poisoning. Thallium is one of the metals that closely resembles mercury and lead, and has many of the properties of each of these elements.

Most cases of poisoning appear to have followed the use of thallium paste about the lips. No doubt some of this material entered the mouth and was there absorbed or, in some cases, the ointment may have been swallowed.

For many years thallium has been used as one of the principal ingredients of certain rat poisons, and several instances have been reported in which this element gained entrance to food. The metal is also used in the preparation of a sirup designed to destroy ants. Accidental consumption of these concoctions by children has caused a few deaths.

Among the earliest indications of thallium poisoning is loss of hair from the scalp. This may be very extensive, although hair on the body, the eyebrows, and the eyelashes is not affected. Mild pains in the joints, drowsiness, lack of appetite, and weakness in the lower extremities are quite characteristic. If the cause is not promptly recognized and poisoning continues, the skin of the legs becomes dry and scaly and increases in thickness. Occasionally purplish or bluish spots appear on other parts of the body. Later there may be a marked paralysis of the muscles leading to foot drop. Following the ingestion of a large dose there will be severe cramps with diarrhea and all the symptoms of an acute intestinal intoxication or infection.

Few, if any, depilatories containing thallium are on the market today. Nevertheless, new preparations are constantly appearing. It would be well if every purchaser of a hair remover could make certain that the particular compound secured does not contain this metal in any form Beauty at the price of thallium is too costly.

Such films as "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "The House of Rothschild" are analyzed as pictures of historical and economic conditions.

Fashion Group to Hold Fall Preview in N. Y.

The Fashion Group, a non-commercial organization founded to advance good taste in fashion in America will present "Fashion Futures for Fall, 1935," September 11, at the Hotel Astor in New York.

"Our object is to give a reliable and complete picture of the fall and winter fashions," said Mary Brooks Picken, president of the group. Paris fashion news will predominate.

17th Century Beauty Hints Revealed

Secrets Told in Volume at Herb Garden of Cathedral Here.

By Pattie Ellicott.

THE PLACE of Queen Elizabeth of England in history is secure through her statecraft, intellect, and patriotism, she had her gentler moments when she must have worried about facial blemishes and defects.

How do we know this? The proof lies in a small volume in the library of the Cottage Herb Garden, Washington Cathedral Close. It is entitled "A Little Booke of Conceited Secrets of Delights for Ladies." It was compiled by Moira Meighn, an Englishwoman and published by the Medici Society of London. In it is included "a recipe for a cosmetick water used by Queen Elizabeth," which is taken from a small ancient volume called "The True Preserver," by a writer of the Elizabethan age named Hartman.

Queen Elizabeth Recipe.

"Take the whites of two new layd eggs, beat the shells of them to powder and put them in a quart bottle with the whites and let them be beaten together for three hours; then put into it 4 ounces of burnt allum in fine powder, beat it two hours longer; then put into 3 ounces of white sugar candy in powder. and beat it also for two hours, then put in it 4 ounces of borax also in powder, and beat it also; then take a pynte of water that runs from under the wheel of a mill, and put into it 4 ounces of white poppy seeds well beaten, mix them well together, so that it be like milk, then pour that into a quart bottle with the other things; at four several times, beating it every time the space of two hours; then strain it through a fine white linnen cloath, and having put it into the bottle again let it be beaten for two or three hours longer. And to know when it is well made and well beaten is, when it froths the breadth of three fingers above it. It will keep a 12 month.

Book Contains the Recipe Queen Elizabeth Used for Blemishes.

King Philip, the consort of Queen Mary, lent his name and his royal prestige as well as skill to the compounding of this perfume.

King Philip's Perfume.

"Six spoonfuls of rosewater, of Ambergreece and Civet, two Barley corns weight of ether, a little musk and two pennyweight of sugar, beaten fine; beat these together and mold them up with a little Gum dragon, steeped in rosewater, and so dry them and keep them to burn in perfumery pan."

Miss Meighn's book, which is greatly enjoyed by visitors to the Cottage Herb Garden, opens a vista into the days when knighthood was in flower. Glimpses may be caught of court ladies exchanging such secrets as a method to take away spots and freckles from the face and hands, precious ointments for all manner of aches and bruises and also "for the richness of the face," and, to "make one slender."

Thomas Dawson wrote in "The Good Housewife's Jewell," in 1596:

"Take Fennell, and seeth it in water, a very good quantity, and wringing out the juice thereof when it is sodde, drink it first and last and it shall swage either man or woman."

Translated into modern English with the help of Dr. Samuel Johnson and his dictionary, it means just this:

"Take fennel and boil it in water and when it is well boiled, strained out the juice and drink, and it will swage or soften the avoirdupois of man or woman."

Open-Air Cafe With a Rustic Setting Opened

Background Is Picturesque and Prices of Meals Are Reasonable.

By Dudley Harmon.
Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

HAVING WRITTEN about several restaurants in this column recently, we resolved the other day to ignore them entirely for at least a month. However, our resolution was short-lived, and we find ourselves back on the subject again. It happened this way. The other night we were taken to dine at such a delightful and attractive little eating place that we just can't resist letting others in on the secret. An enterprising woman here has just opened a charming out-of-doors place to dine which has the advantage of being near the center of town. Thus it combines the charm of fresh, cool air and a place under the stars with the convenience of a handy location.

Diners are surrounded on three sides by picturesque, ivy-hung, red brick walls, which eliminates the view of unsightly back yards and fences. The only light comes from picturesque red lanterns hung on poles, which gleam rosily in the moonlit dusk. Tables and chairs are made in rustic style, and the former are covered with bright checked table cloths, which will remind you of picturesque rathskellers in Germany.

On certain nights in the week an orchestra, consisting of piano and two violins, plays softly in the distance.

The food is excellent. The hostess specializes in cool, refreshing salads, and the night we were there served an elegant concoction of luscious fruits and lettuce. Those who like to eat heartily will find plenty of delicious hot food as well. And the biscuits! Piping hot, crisp and flaky, they're so good that you find yourself eating one after the other in glorious abandon. It's an ideal place to take the children, as there are smaller-sized tables just right for them. A special vegetarian plate is served for the youngsters, as well.

Bargains in Luggage.

THOSE LUCKIES who can still look forward to vacation should run right down to an F street store and snap up some of the swell luggage bargains they are featuring this week. They've got a whole set of bags made up in a new material called cordovan cord. This material is so tough it can stand bumping and thumping and continue to look just the same. The color scheme is a light tan background with a herringbone zigzag pattern in darker brown running across. It comes in all imaginable varieties: shoe boxes which hold six pairs, dress cases with a rack for dresses and pullman cases, which hold everything under the sun. The bags are lined with brown silk and are carefully stitched and finished. Prices start at $15.

Milled Soap on Sale.

A RICH, nourishing cold cream forms the base of the French milled soap on sale at reduced prices in a local department store. In the event you're wondering what milled soap is, we hasten to explain that it's soap which contains no excess moisture or air. So many soaps are so largely filled with air bubbles that they melt away before you can say "Jack Robinson." But this particular brand is so carefully made that you'll wonder if it isn't going to last forever.

Another good thing: These cakes are molded to fit the hand, which enables you to get a good grip and use each one right down to the last bit.

Delicately perfumed with the scent of wild flowers, this soap will leave you fragrant for several hours after your bath. It comes in the perfume of four different flowers; Lavender, gardenia, jasmine and lilac.

This soap is made up according to special qualifications drawn up by the store which puts it out. Among the ingredients is a lotion which has the revitalizing qualities of a skin tonic. By stimulating the circulation and toning up the tissues, it brings a healthy pink glow to your face.

You'd better hurry if you want to take advantage of this special sale. The cakes have been reduced from $1.49 to $1 for a box of 12, but the price is due to go shooting up again soon.

Knee-Length Stockings.

ARE YOU KNEE conscious on hot days? When the thermometer shoots up to 90, do warm and sticky stockings make you feel all knees? For summer discomforts are quite as aggravating as the feeling that one's legs have suddenly become mountain size. But sufferers from knee trouble will have only themselves to blame in the future, for an enterprising manufacturer has gotten out some stockings which are just knee-length. They leave plenty of room for the breezes, if any.

These hose are edged with lastex, so that those who wear them can forego the nuisance of fussing with garters. The fancier ones have lace around the top in addition to the lastex. They come in medium sheer for street wear, and real sheer for evening.

Raspberry Marsh Ice Is Ideal Dish For Grand Finale to Sunday Dinner

Crush red-ripe raspberries and partially melted marshmallows plus a dash of salt and a smattering of lemon juice form the ingredients for a refreshing and delectable dessert that can be frozen to perfection in the trays of a mechanical refrigerator. See recipe in accompanying story.

Flavor of Veal Roast Aided by Inserting Stuffed Olives.

By Dorothea Duncan.

YOU HAVE HEARD the old saying, "Don't put off until tomorrow what you can do today." That is just the way we feel about this recipe for raspberry marsh ice. Try it today, for if you don't you will have to live in anticipation until next summer when fresh raspberries again make their appearance on the market. This week-end may be the last opportunity this year of obtaining luscious red ripe raspberries in Washington.

If you want to bring your Sunday dinner to a grand finale plan to serve for dessert raspberry marsh ice and angel cake.

Raspberry Marsh Ice.

3 cups ripe red raspberries
32 marshmallows
2 tablespoons lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt.

Wash the raspberries and crush them thoroughly. Heat, but do not melt entirely, the marshmallows in the top of a double boiler, together with four tablespoons of raspberry juice and pulp. Remove from stove, cool, add lemon juice and salt. Turn mixture into a tray of the mechanical refrigerator and freeze, stirring once when partly frozen. Serves six to eight.

Buy a shoulder of veal for Sunday's dinner and have the butcher remove the blade and backbone. Then while the butcher is rolling and tying the roast have him insert stuffed olives into the crevices of the roast. The olives will enhance the flavor of the meat and add an attractive touch of color to the slices. This is a particularly good suggestion if the meat is to be served in thin slices for a cold platter.

Imperial Deviled Crab.

Simmer the flakes of two crabs and half a chopped onion in butter, season with salt and cayenne pepper, add two cups of thick white sauce, a dash of Worcestershire sauce, a teaspoon of English mustard, a little chopped chives, bring to a boil and bind with the yolks of two eggs. Add a little green and Spanish pepper chopped fine. Fill crab shells, spread a little French mustard over the top. Place a small piece of butter on each and bake in the oven until brown. Serve with lemon.

Lemon Filling for Cake.

2 tablespoons flour
¾ cup cold water
1 egg yolk
Juice and grated rind of 1 lemon
2 teaspoons butter
½ cup sugar

Make a smooth paste of the flour and two tablespoons of the cold water. Cook the rest of the water, the sugar, grated lemon rind and butter. When the sugar is dissolved and mixture boiling, stir in the flour mixture slowly. Cook until clear and smooth, about 15 minutes. Add lemon juice and beaten egg yolk and cook about 2 minutes. Cool before spreading on cake.

For culinary assistance, call Dorothea Duncan, National 4200, or write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

Corn and Potatoes Are Best Aids on Clambake

When you start on a clambake be sure to take along the right food accoutrements which include corn on the cob and potatoes. Butter, of course, should be included and also something to drink. If you intend to dig your own clams take along a creel and shovel. And, of course, include a tarpaulin and a box of matches.

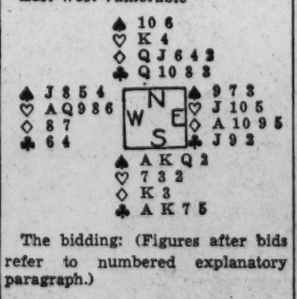
The Rule of Eleven.

There are many cases in defending against notrump contracts when a player is faced with a choice between taking a trick immediately or waiting. By waiting he may sacrifice a stopper in declarer's strong suit, but this is often offset by the advantage of gaining an immediate entry and thus getting the jump on declarer by establishing a suit before declarer can establish his.

In the deal below a player was faced with a difficult decision. A slip on his part would have meant the loss of the contract. Fortunately, the rule of eleven came to his assistance and he made the correct play.

South, Dealer
East-West vulnerable



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

South	West	North	East
1♣(1)	Pass(2)	1◇(3)	Pass
2NT(4)	Pass	3NT(5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—One spade would have been a better opening bid, but South was the type of player who likes to play notrump contracts. He had decided that if North could respond in hearts he would immediately go to game in notrump.
2—If West had not been vulnerable, he could have bid one heart; vulnerable, he feared North might double and defeat him two or three tricks.
3—North properly preferred the One-over-One response to a raise in clubs.
4—Still suffering from the notrump complex, South suppressed his spade suit and bid notrump, despite his lack of a heart stopper.
5—North still prefers a constructive bid to a raise in a minor suit.

The Play.

West opened the eight of hearts and declarer made the only play which gave him hope of stopping the suit—he went up with dummy's King. This won the trick and East unblocked by playing the Jack, though with the cards as they were, the unblocking play was unnecessary. Now a small diamond was led from dummy and East could see that since South undoubtedly held the King he would have only one diamond stopper if he put up the Ace, whereas if he played the nine he would have two diamond stoppers remaining. But another consideration was that West's lead of the heart eight showed South to have no higher card than the eight, so the heart suit must now be established. There was more chance West had led from a five-card suit than from a four-card suit, so that the setting tricks were in sight. East plunged in with the Ace of diamonds and led a heart. West took four heart tricks, defeating the contract. The King of diamonds would have been South's ninth trick when added to one heart, four clubs and three spades.

Pan American Child Congress Starts Oct. 12

Mexico City Will Be Host; D. C. Women to Aid U. S. Participation.

THE SEVENTH Pan-American Child Congress will be held October 12 to 19 in Mexico City. The Children's Bureau here has been officially notified that the President of Mexico, Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, has designated these dates.

Official invitations to participate in the congress have been transmitted to the governments of all the countries of the Pan-American Union.

In setting the date of the Congress, President Cardenas authorized the Mexican Department of Health to appoint an organizing committee. The present chairman of this committee is the new head of the Department of Health, Dr. Gen. Jose Siurob.

Six Units of Committee.

The six sections of the committee are as follows: (1) Medical-pediatric problems; (2) Surgical and orthopedic pediatric problems; (3) Child hygiene; (4) Social Welfare; (5) Legislation; (6) Education.

President Cardenas plans to attend the formal opening session. Co-operation is being given by the department of health, the department of public education, the department of the Federal district, and the board of public welfare, which is arranging social events and visits to child welfare agencies for the delegates.

Other agencies assisting are the Pan-American Union, the Pan-American Sanitary Bureau, the Internation Institute for the Protection of Childhood, and the United States Children's Bureau. A national committee to co-operate with the organizing committee in making plans for the participation of the United States has been appointed by the Department of State.

Youths Now Realize Benefit of Manners, Educators Assert

Manners are coming back into favor among the younger generation, educators report. Boys particularly are enrolling in high school classes to learn how to act properly in social groups.

Boys are discovering, according to Miss Carlotta C. Greer, of John Hay High School, Cleveland, that manners may be an aid in getting and holding jobs.

"Investigations have shown," Miss Greer said, "that young people often fail in business more because of a lack of social understanding than because of faulty training in business technique."

Miss Greer maintains that part of a high school's contribution to solving the youth problem should be training in good grooming, selection of suitable clothes, developing good manners and a pleasing personality.

WOMEN The WORLD OVER

By Vylla Poe Wilson.

REPRESENTATIVE EDITH NOURSE ROGERS, of Massachusetts, has earned the title, "Angel of Walter Reed," because of her work for the veterans in that hospital.

MRS. WILLIAM S. SPENCER, of Washington, has worked as a volunteer for the American Red Cross since the Spanish-American War.

LADY NANCY ASTOR, American-born member of the British Parliament, slips away from its sessions every day to say her prayers in a little Christian Science Church near historic Parliament House.

MRS. EUGENE STRONG, "The Peace Dollar Girl," whose face was chosen to adorn a special issue of silver dollars, died in Hollywood last week.

MISS JOYCE WETHERED, English woman golfer, four times winner of the British women's championship, will play 40 exhibition games in America this fall. Miss Wethered arrived in New York the other day, keen about the larger ball used on American links.

DOLORES DEL RIO, cinema star, has a glass room in her Hollywood home. It has a plate glass outside wall, giving a view of a lovely garden, a wall that's a huge mirror, and a ceiling that's a pyramid of mirrors.

HELEN PRISCILLA STAM, whose missionary parents were executed by Chinese Communists last winter, although only 9 months old, is the proud possessor of a scholarship at Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa. Her mother, Mrs. John C. Stam, was an alumna of that college and the scholarship has been given to the orphan in her memory.

MISS LENA MADESIN PHILLIPS, president of the National Council of Women, is presiding over a Consumers School at Chautauqua, N. Y., where women are taught how to spend their household budgets to better advantage and get full value for their money.

MISS ANNE MAHONEY, attired as a Hindu goddess, was declared the most artistically garbed woman at the recent artists' ball at Provincetown, Mass. The ball kept up until dawn and fire whistles and sirens announced the opening of the ball.

MARY HOERGER, 11 years old, of Miami Beach, Fla., won over all competitors in national woman's springboard diving contest one day last week. She is the youngest national champion in any sport.

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK grand old lady of opera, sang the "Star-Spangled Banner" at the San Diego Fair on the day set aside in her honor on the exposition program.

MRS. JENNIE MARCY HOMER, New York widow, formed a Merry Widow Club in that town. Its 31 widow members agreed not to marry within a year. If a member marries, she pays a fine and loses her membership in the bargain.

MRS. FRANK HIRAM SNELL, of Washington, proposed a plan by which a President's medal would be given yearly to the citizen of the United States who writes the best book of poetry. The plan is sponsored by the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women.

MRS. HENRIETTA NESBITT, housekeeper at the White House, was a neighbor of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park, and is responsible for all the domestic arrangements of the Executive Mansion.

MRS. BENJAMIN HARRISON, widow of former President Benjamin Harrison, returned recently to an Adirondack lake where her husband and she passed their honeymoon nearly 40 years ago.

Strictly Speaking

A Query.

Dear S. S.:

Will you please give me some information on the word finaigling? I found it—for the first time—in The Washington Post, July 27, but I can't find it in the dictionary. M. H. G.

The Answer.

Although this word is in common use, it has been omitted in a number of dictionaries. If you look in Webster's New International (Second Edition), however, you will find it. Fanaigue and finagle are defined as follows: "to revoke at cards; hence, to shirk; to use underhand methods; to cheat; to resort to devious methods; to intrigue." Finaigling is merely another way of spelling the same verb. All these are derived from dialect English words, fainaiguer and finagler.

Sleeveless Summer Frock Simple and Comfortable

Pattern No. 986.

NO COLLAR, practically no sleeves, no tight armholes—what a joy this dress will be on a torrid day. And isn't it pretty, too? The simple way the bow slips through, the way the belt ties—they are details, but what a difference they make. Incidentally, this pattern also includes an autumn version with long sleeves and a peplum.

This design is available in sizes 14 to 42. It would be attractive in one of the new seersuckers, handkerchief linen, or a novelty cotton. The yardage is given on the pattern envelope.

Paper Clothes Are Prophesied For 1980 Mode

Public Also Will Dictate Its Own Styles, Says Designer.

WHAT WILL women wear in 1980?

Miss Elizabeth Hawes, dress designer, recently traced the current revolution in style trend, which began during the World War, and made the following predictions:

Paper underclothing and paper sports costumes for men and women will have been generally accepted by that time.

Mass production of clothes will have been developed to such an extent every woman can be sure of finding a perfect fit in any dress she chooses.

The public will have become clothes conscious to the extent it, rather than the manufacturers, will dictate fashions and materials.

Miss Hawes also pointed out that important transitions in style take place at intervals of approximately every seven years. She mentioned that corsets were worn in 1914, were out of use in 1921, and came back into style in 1928 when a definite trend to feminine creations was under way.

"The chic figure of 1925 required dieting," she said, "but the figure of 1935 requires only a proper amount of exercise."

"I think most of us will agree that we are now in the midst of some sort of social revolution," she continued, "and it doesn't seem impossible that by 1980 the matter will have been settled. The current revolution really began during the World War with a gradual breaking away from tight-fitting garments in favor of costumes assuring comfort and freedom of movement. By 1980 that trend will have been completed."

Senate Forces Goldsborough To Apologize

Maryland Representative Opens Way to Resume Banking Conferences.

By the Associated Press.

Faced by an ultimatum from angry Senators, Representative Goldsborough (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday apologized publicly for an assertion that "influences" dominated the Senate Banking Subcommittee which handled the omnibus banking bill.

It was disclosed that the Senate conferees on the measure, led by Chairman Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, of the Banking Subcommittee, refused to sit down with House conferees when they met on Wednesday to settle differences between the House and Senate measures. A demand was made that Goldsborough retract his statement.

To avert a stalemate over the bill, the Maryland Representative, referring to his charge Monday on the floor, yesterday told the House: "I intended no reflection upon the loyalty, patriotism or integrity of any member of the Senate."

Calls New Conference.

Immediately Senator Glass called another conference for Monday afternoon.

When the conferees assembled Wednesday the Senate managers told Representative Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the House group, there could be no meeting until Goldsborough apologized. Goldsborough and Representative Hollister (Republican), of Ohio, both on the conference committee, had to wait in the next room during this exchange.

In his Monday speech, Goldsborough did not identify the alleged "influences." He said, however, he would illustrate "what they must have been" by explaining how a Senate Banking sub-committee rewrote a credit control provision of the bill passed by the House.

The House measure, he said, provided that the seven-man Federal Reserve Board should act as an open market committee to buy and sell Government bonds" in an attempt to stabilize the price level.

12-Man Committee.

But the Senate sub-committee, he said, agreed on a 12-man open market committee, "seven members of which must, as a matter of law, be bankers—be members of a class whose interest it is to have the people's money as scarce as possible and to have it cost as much as posible."

"You can reach your own conclusion," he added, "as to the influences which surrounded the Senate committee in writing a provision of that kind into this legislation."

Then he remarked that the House conferees faced a difficult task in preserving "a management which will not be in the interest of the banks, * * * the industrialist and * * * any one class, but which will be in the interest of all the people."

Earlier Goldsborough accused the "great New York bankers" of having begun a systematic effort to "coerce" House members into coercing their conferees to accept the bill as approved by the Senate.

3,500 Tax Returns Mailed at Deadline

Swamped under last-minute returns of personal tax reports, neither William P. Richards, District assessor, nor Charles Russell, deputy assessor, yesterday would venture an estimate of the total returns which had been made.

Deadline for making personal tax returns was midnight July 31, but District officials winked at delinquents who had a reasonable excuse and came in yesterday to file their returns. Something like 3,500 returns were put into the mail at the last minute, Mr. Russell said. A rough estimate of the number of persons who filed returns was 30,000. Legal action is to be taken against delinquents, Russell said.

Two Arrested As Fists Fly In Strike Zone

Weinman, Accused of Hitting Women Strikers, Faces 4 Charges.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

A minor riot, resulting in the arrest of two men charged with disorderly conduct, and the filing of four warrants charging Sidney Weinman, manager of the Century Manufacturing Co., whose employes have been on strike for ten days, marked the strike situation at Alexandria yesterday.

On a previous occasion, Morris Weinman, proprietor of the shirt manufacturing company, had demanded that Police Capt. Arnold furnish a police escort for Weinman's trucks while they were removing goods from the plant at Columbus and Wythe streets. This Capt. Arnold had declined to do, but assured Weinman that any police protection necessary would be furnished.

Truck Goes to Plant.

Yesterday one of Weinman's trucks came from Baltimore to remove goods. Capt. Arnold heard that the truck was en route to the plant, and he and Mayor E. O. Davison went to the plant. The truck was backed up to the door and loaded, while Capt. Arnold required the strikers, of whom there were about a dozen present, to stand to one side.

After the truck was loaded, and was pulling out, Sidney Weinman, according to Capt. Arnold and the mayor, rushed out a side door into the assembled strikers, and "came out swinging," according to the officials.

Mayor Davison said he saw Weinman strike one woman, and other bystanders claimed he struck several. George Arnold and Bernard Hammill, spectators, then seized Weinman, and were placed under arrest by Capt. Arnold. Weinman was placed in Capt. Arnold's car and taken to police headquarters for his protection against the women.

Women File Charges.

Shortly after Weinman was taken to headquarters, four of the women appeared and swore out warrants against him, three charging minor assault, and the fourth minor assault and the use of abusive and profane language. Mrs. Bessie Shelton, 338 South Patrick street, charged minor assault and abusive language; Mrs. Valeria Padgett, 715 Gibbon street, charged minor assault, claiming that Weinman struck her and a ring on his finger inflicted a cut on her face; Mrs. Ethel Mahoney, 918 Franklin street, and Mrs. Lucille Gardiner, 717 Gibbon street, charged minor assault. Mrs. Gardiner is not an employe of the plant.

Arnold and Hammill claimed they were holding Weinman to prevent further attacks on the women. They were released on their own recognizance for a hearing in Police Court today.

House Rejects 'Death Clause' In New Rebuff

gers insist upon a conference being held under just and fair conditions" and the House conferees are authorized, "if in their judgment it is desirable * * * that such conference be held without the presence there of any person not a manager upon the part of either the House or Senate."

Huddleston Ridiculed.

Both Rayburn and Wheeler sought to ridicule Huddleston's protests against Cohen and called attention to the almost invariable custom of calling in departmental experts at all legislative conferences.

Senator Wheeler asserted that the "House hasn't any authority to tell the Senate what they may do regarding their conferees any more than the Senate has authority to dictate to the House. This action is unprecedented in the history of legislation."

Wheeler added that the presence or absence of Cohen "means nothing to me except I don't like the idea of three of ten conferees trying to tell the others who they shall or shall not have at a conference."

Huddleston, a meek-looking fellow of small stature, emerged as the hero of yesterday's hectic session in the House after twice defeating the stocky and well-groomed chairman of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, Rayburn.

Hits Senate Probe.

Chiding Rayburn unmercifully for "surrendering" to the Senate, he assailed the Senate Lobby Committee for "raising a cloud of suspicion against every member of the House and against all utilities and everybody else they could besmirch."

Later he invoked sarcasm to charge that "Cohen, Corcoran & Co." wrote the utility holding company bill.

Rayburn, in one of his two impassioned appeals to the House to vote to instruct the conferees, said with regard to the authorship of the bill:

"The men who handed this bill around to Senator Wheeler and myself wrote what they were told to write by the President of the United States."

Representative Cooper (Republican), of Ohio, one of the conferees, challenged an implication by Rayburn that the House bill would leave the utility holding companies unrestricted.

By the Associated Press.

Delving into admitted efforts to overthrow the New Deal politically, the Senate lobby committee yesterday disclosed a letter to a utilities concern suggesting a "whispering campaign" that President Roosevelt was insane.

From its author, E. P. Cramer, Plainfield, N. J., advertising man, the committee drew a frankly shame-faced admission that he had proposed such a course and that the "whispering campaign" later developed.

His letter was written to C. E. Groesbeck, chairman of the board of Electric Bond & Share.

Promptly, Groesbeck issued through the committee of public utility executives a statement that he had never heard of Cramer or of the letter in question until yesterday.

White House Silent.

There was no outward evidence that the White House was taking cognizance of the disclosures.

Meanwhile, the House Rules Committee, also investigating lobbying on the public utilities bill, heard E. V. Sellers repeat his story of seeing Representative Patton (Democrat), Texas, emerge from the hotel room of John W. Carpenter, president of Texas Power & Light, with a small box in his hand.

Cramer's letter, written on March 28, was followed up a few days later by a personal discussion with G. G. Walker, Groesbeck's assistant. The letter listed a series of proposals for discrediting the New Deal and the President.

But committee members leaned forward in amazement at this particular suggestion:

"A whispering campaign to create popular suspicion that the New Dealers and especially the New-Dealer-in-chief are either incompetent or insane, discrediting them in the same way that Michelson so successfully discredited Hoover."

Letter Forces Admission.

The reference was to Charles Michelson director of publicity for the Democratic National Committee prior to and during the 1932 campaign.

At the very outset, Cramer said he didn't "recall" having suggested a "whispering campaign," but persistent questioning changed this story.

Black produced the letter to Groesbeck. He read it, while Cramer, slender and pale, nervously licked his lips.

"It was not long after this letter was written that you began to hear of a whispering campaign that the President was crazy, was it not?"

"I sent that letter in March. The whispering campaign was only during the last two or three weeks, as I recall it."

"Did you have any basis for proposing a 'whispering campaign' intended to give the country an idea that its President was insane?" Black asked.

"None whatever."

"You knew it was false?"

"I don't know——"

"Did you ever hear a doctor make such a statement?"

"No; certainly not."

"It was intended to be purely false?"

"I intended it to be analogous to the campaign against Hoover."

"Michelson."

"Do you swear to that?"

"No," Cramer replied, with a slight laugh.

Referring to language in the Cramer letter urging a "sound and constructive" campaign," Black asked if he considered that description might fit the "whispering campaign prtoposal?"

"I am quite agreed that was unsound——"

"Despicable!" Minton burst in.

"Yes, I don't approve it at all now."

Cramer testified that he worked for the Edison industries at Orange, N. J., preparing advertising and a house magazine, and that he also had other advertising clients. He had, he said, a rent-free office in the Edison Building.

By the Associated Press.

Orange, N. J., Aug. 1.—C. S. Williams, jr., executive vice president of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., in a statement tonight declared E. P. Cramer, witness before the Senate lobby committee, is "employed in a minor position in our company" and vigorously criticized Cramer's admitted proposal to start a whispering campaign against President Roosevelt.

"It is not sufficient," said Williams, "to state that we do not sympathize with Cramer's views. Please make it clear that we consider his reported plan to be puerile and that section of it which referred to a whispering campaign to be simply contemptible."

Williams added that his company "has faithfully and continuously supported the Administration's efforts to promote the welfare of business and the Nation."

Move to End State Truck War Started

West Virginia Governor Makes Overtures to Neighbors.

Road Commission Told to Seek Reciprocal Tag Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., Aug 1.—Gov. Kump today ordered James P. Tierney, supervisor of transportation for the State road commission, to open "truce negotiations" with Maryland and Virginia in an attempt to end the "truck war" which has been in progress for several weeks.

Gov. Kump informed Tierney that a 1933 statute, which never had been repealed, empowered the road commission to negotiate reciprocal license agreements with other States. The Governor's formal authorization of the negotiations was:

"You will please consult the attorney general of this State and under his advice promptly take such steps as may be proper to secure reasonable and suitable reciprocable agreements with the proper authorities of other States. In taking this action, you will keep in mind those who have already paid license fees in other States as well as within this State, under provisions of the act referred to, and provide for the refunding of such fees, in order that there may be no injustice or discrimination worked against those who have paid such fees."

The "war" began when West Virginia officials ordered enforcement of a 1935 law requiring that "commercial for hire" vehicles of other States must show West Virginia tags when in this State. Trucks from Maryland and Virginia were seized in this State and officials of those States retaliated by ordering that West Virginia trucks be seized.

Truck Accord Reached By Two States

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 1.—John Q. Rhodes, jr., director of the State motor vehicles division, announced this afternoon that a new reciprocal agreement regarding commercial trucks had been reached by Virginia and West Virginia. The new arrangement goes into effect immediately, Rhodes said.

A former reciprocal agreement between the two States was abrogated on July 1, when a new West Virginia law requiring truck operators from other States to buy tags there became effective.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 1.—As peace negotiations were opened today in one truck war, another appeared possible for Maryland as South Carolina stiffened the regulations covering Maryland trucks in that State.

Maryland operators have protested to the commissioner of motor vehicles that their truck drivers in South Carolina have been stopped and ordered to obtain South Carolina licenses. Commissioner Walter R. Rudy said that he had taken no countersteps against the trucks from the Southern State, although several lines run from there into Maryland.

South Carolina permits out-of-State trucks to enter the State once a month if they do not run on regular lines or regular schedules. Maryland gives South Carolina trucks the same privileges.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 1.—Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Walter R. Rudy, following a telegraphic conference with West Virginia motor vehicle officials today, countermanded orders that Maryland State policemen hold West Virginia trucks not showing Maryland licenses.

Rudy expressed relief that the "truck war" was at an end and said Maryland would co-operate with West Virginia and Virginia officials in any manner in drawing up reciprocal agreements.

New Camp to Open; Third This Month

New CCC Projects Near Cumberland Occupied.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 1.—District Forester Henry C. Buckingham announced that Camp S-65 on Backbone Mountain, Garrett County, will be opened tomorrow, marking the third of the five new camps of the Civilian Conservation Corps occupied this month. Each of the camps will have 200 men enrolled, with the quota of the five new camps set at 1,000 foresters.

Camp S-51, near Deer Park, opened several weeks ago, is a tent camp, for summer occupancy. The men will be moved to barracks at another camp in the State when cold weather arrives. Camp S-63 was opened this month on Meadow Mountain.

When the five new camps are completed, there will be a total of eleven in this section.

The Backbone Mountain camp will be devoted to timber stand improvement work and other forest conservation projects. The foresters will also construct a small fish hatchery.

Trinkle Causes Surprise With Price Support

Former Governor's Statement on Virginia Race Causes Comment.

By the Associated Press.

Former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle's announcement in Roanoke that he would support Lieut. Gov. James H. Price for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination two years hence was received yesterday by his fellow townsman, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, as a "surprise."

The announcement by the former Governor Wednesday caught some other Virginians in Washington by surprise, and they pondered "off the record" what heights the gubernatorial campaign would reach before August, 1937.

Byrd, Burch Silent.

Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Berryville, and Representative T. G. Burch, of Martinsville, who frequently has been mentioned as "the organization's choice," were not among these so far as their comment went. They kept a rigid silence.

"Gov. Trinkle's announcement came as a surprise to me," Woodrum said. "So far as I am concerned it is much too early for any commitment."

Woodrum yesterday reiterated there was "no breach between him and the Virginia Senators," but he emphasized that in conventions and other presidential campaign preliminaries he would "not be found sitting on the sidelines."

As the Trinkle announcement circulated among Virginians, one, officially disconnected from State politics, wondered, "off the record," whether Trinkle's membership on the State board of education "would indicate Price's nomination would be favored by the 17,000 school teachers in the State."

Noted With Interest.

Representative Patrick H. Drewry, of Petersburg, said he had noted the announcement with interest.

He admitted he had been thinking about Virginia politics "many years, and especially since January."

He said he had been thinking about the Virginia situation, "presidentially, senatorially, congressionally and gubernatorially," and about all he had concluded was that Roosevelt will be renominated and re-elected and Congress again will be overwhelmingly Democratic."

"Gubernatorially," he said, "I am making no statements, commitments, or predictions for publication now. It is too early. Too much can happen in two years."

Woodrum yesterday was chosen by Speaker Byrnes to preside over the House during debate on the Administration tax bill.

State Jobs Reported Dependent on Price

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 1.—The News Leader today published a report that State office holders had been told that they would remain on the State pay roll if James H. Price received the Democratic nomination for Governor without opposition from the party "organization," but there would be a shake-up if he had to campaign against an organization candidate.

The paper said belief was expressed that some of Price's friends had circulated the rumor without his sanction. He was reported on the way back to Richmond from Seattle, Wash.

Former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle's announcement that he would support Price for Governor was received calmly by the organization leaders here, the paper said.

Victim Sees Train Cut Off His Leg

Pinioned by Rail, Worker Watches Own Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 1.—His left leg pinned under a railroad track, John Tracy, 44-year-old Pennsylvania Railroad track workman, today watched a train amputate the leg.

Tracy's fellow workmen, knowing that a train was due, worked feverishly to free him and jumped clear only to save their own lives. The workman was trapped when a jack, used to raise the track, slipped. The track snapped back into place and pinned Tracy's leg under it.

Tobacco Festival Sept. 25-26; Dairy Exhibition Following

Special Dispatch to The Post.

South Boston, Aug. 1.—All of Southside Virginia and parts of North Carolina are being invited to participate in the first national tobacco festival, to be held here September 25 and 26, just prior to the opening of the tobacco markets.

A parade, the theme of which will be the history of tobacco and its growth today, will be one of the features and a tobacco queen will be named and crowned during the event. Princesses will be named to represent nearby counties and towns and a committee is now preparing to costume the participants in clothing of tobacco. The national tobacco festival will be the opening event of the Virginia Autumn Travelogue, which will be State-wide in nature.

Tobacco exhibits will be one of the festival features, including a demonstration of a tobacco auction for visitors, while arrangements are being made to install cigarette machines to show visitors how tobacco is turned into this product. The process of manufacture will be explained and demonstrated.

J. S. McRae, president of South Boston Lions Club, which is sponsoring the event, has named an executive committee, headed by Page H. Vaughan.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., Aug. 2.—Virginia's growing dairy industry will have its hour in the spotlight here on September 27, which has been selected for the presentation of the fifth Piedmont Virginia Dairy Festival—an event which has grown in importance until it ranks as one of the outstanding annual events to be held in the State.

The program will include a pageant, parade, crowning of the queen, two balls and tours of the dairy region adjacent and of the surrounding battlefields of the Civil War. It is the second event of the Virginia Autumn Travelogue, following the national tobacco festival at South Boston.

Preliminary festival meetings have been called by R. S. Hynson, president of the festival association, for this week, and shortly committees will name the fifth Piedmont Virginia Dairy Queen, her maids of honor and princesses representing the counties of Arlington, Culpeper, Fauquier, Loudoun, Madison, Orange, Prince William, Rappahannock, Stafford, Spotsylvania, and the cities of Alexandria, Fredericksburg and Washington, D. C.

Candidates Eye U. S. Judgeship For Virginia

Dozen Listed for Place as Roosevelt Plans to Sign Bill.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 1.—Lines of support for the dozen or more candidates for the new Federal judgeship for the Eastern District of Virginia were more clearly established today as the deadline for the presidential signature of the bill approached.

President Roosevelt has said he will sign the measure before expiration of the 10-day period tomorrow at midnight. If he does not do so by then it will become law anyway.

Although Virginia's Senators have steered clear of the contest, certain of the State's representatives were to arrange interviews for candidates from their own areas with Attorney General Cummings as soon as the bill becomes effective.

Delegations Press Claims.

In Petersburg it was said that Representative Patrick H. Drewry would get an interview for a delegation pushing the candidacy of Judge R. T. Wilson, of Petersburg Hustings Court. A file of indorsements and petitions from the Fourth District and elsewhere was being made up at Petersburg.

Washington reports said developments in behalf of Thomas W. Ozlin, Lunenburg County attorney and former Speaker of the House of Delegates, "were interesting."

Friends of Judge James Corbitt, of Suffolk, were said to have visited the Capital in his behalf.

Mayor J. Fulmer Bright, of Richmond, also visited Washington for Col. John Cutchins, present director of public safety, who was understood to have taken the municipal job with the understanding that he would quit if he could secure the judgeship.

Norris Mentioned.

The Northern Neck Bar Association, which includes some of Virginia's best known attorneys, has been active for Senator R. O. Norris, of Lancaster. Members of the Richmond bar said they would seek an interview with Cummings in behalf of Judge Robert Pollard, of Richmond, as soon as the bill is signed. It was not known what efforts had been made for Virginius Shackleford, who has the support of the Orange County bar.

Others mentioned for the place include Allan Jones, of Newport News, a member of Cummings' staff; Eastern District Attorney Sterling Hutcheson, of Boydton, and Randolph Tucker and Brockenbrough Lamb, of Richmond.

Virginia Aid Scouts Fear Of Paralysis

No Reason to Restrict Travel, Says State Health Officer.

12 New Cases Reported; Total Is Now 310 Since June 1.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 1.—Although 12 new cases of infantile paralysis today brought Virginia's total to 310 since June 1 and 298 since July 1, Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, said "at the present time there is no reason to restrict travel in Virginia or to advise those planning to come to Virginia not to come."

At the same time, it was announced that two conventions of adults planned in the State in August and September would be held on schedule.

The cases reported today were from Accomac, 1; Albemarle, 2; Alleghany, 1; Buckingham, 1; Dinwiddie, 1; Pittsylvania, 1; Prince Edward, 2; Pulaski, 1; Richmond City, 1. The diagnosis has been changed on one case of poliomyelitis reported from Pittsylvania on July 19, the health department announced.

Letter Is Reassuring.

Dr. Riggin's advice that restrictions on travel were not necessary was contained in a letter written to Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the conservation and development commission, which distributes Virginia literature to tourists and maintains an information bureau in Washington.

In making Dr. Riggin's letter public, Hall said he had received inquiries as to how travelers should make their plans in view of the prevalence of poliomyelitis, and had asked the health commission's advice.

The Navy Department meanwhile has suspended recruiting in Virginia for the duration of the infantile paralysis epidemic, it was learned here today. The order stopping recruiting was applicable also to North Carolina.

Newport News' second case of infantile paralysis was under quarantine today. The victim is a 10-year-old boy, living in the east-end section of the city.

Festival to Be Held.

The Virginia State Chamber of Commerce today said it had been advised by the director of the White Top folk music festival that the event would not be called off because of infantile paralysis.

"Mrs. James P. Buchanan, director of the White Top folk music festival, today denied that the festival scheduled for August 16 and 17 would be postponed or called off because of infantile paralysis," the chamber said. "After conferring with Southwest Virginia headquarters of the State board of health, Mrs. Buchanan issued a statement saying that no case of infantile paralysis has been reported from Grayson County, where the festival is to be held, and that health authorities advised her that there is no reason whatever for calling off the festival at this time."

Judge Appoints 25 Boys To Attend Miller School

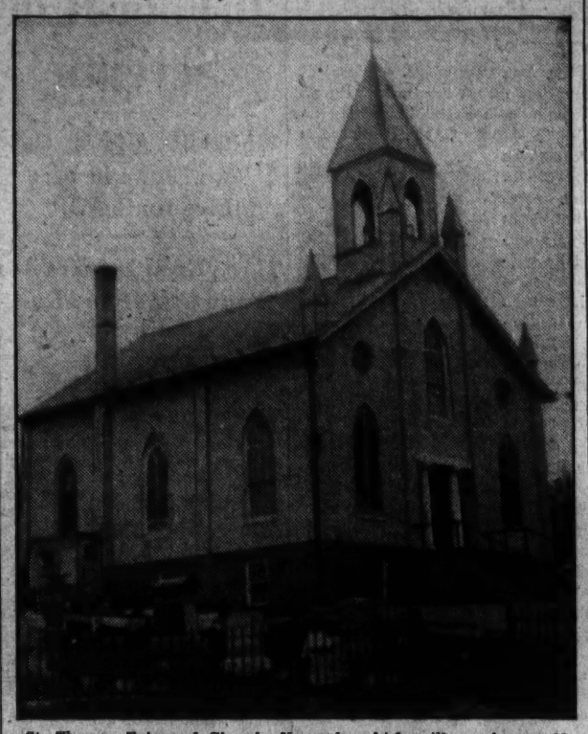
Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 1.—Judge Lemuel F. Smith, of the Circuit Court, has appointed 25 boys to the Miller School, widely known institution endowed by the late Samuel Miller, of Albemarle, and located near Batesville, this county. Those appointed from the county are:

Raymond R. Easton, Thomas Richard Payne, James A. Via, James H. Slatcher, Andrew J. Yates, John R. Harding, John William Key, Louis H. Mohler, John M. Snead, Alvin R. Maupin, Carter H. Payne, Marion A. Pitts, Royce D. Tooley, Earl E. Fisher, James Huffman, Hunter C. Munday, and Douglas R. Munday.

Those appointed from the city are:

Edward Brown, George Durham, Harvey H. Fleming, Jack Johnson, Warren Harding Landes, Gordon Marion Madison, Clyde Edward Morris and Robert Tyree.

Hancock, Md., Church 100 Years Old



St. Thomas Episcopal Church, Hancock, which will on August 25 celebrate the 100th anniversary of the founding of the church there. Gov. Harry W. Nice will take part in the celebration. During the Civil War the church building was used as a hospital, while the basement was used to stable horses of Union troops. The church was struck by cannon shot from a battery of Stonewall Jackson's troops.

Gov. Nice to Help Celebrate Centenary of Hancock Church

St. Thomas' Old Organ Is Now in Smithsonian Institution.

Hancock, Md., Aug. 1.—Gov. Harry W. Nice will be one of the guests of honor at the one-hundredth anniversary here August 25 of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church.

Dr. Homer L. Tabler, chairman of the State roads commission, a vestryman of the church, heads a committee arranging for the celebration, which will include a pageant portraying the history of the church.

It was on May 18, 1835, that a small group of churchmen petitioned that a parish be established here.

St. Thomas' Church has had 31 rectors, the Rev. John Delaplane being the first. Prior to formation of the church, L. H. Johns came here as early as 1829 from Cumberland in the capacity of missionary.

The parish was organized with 30 members and the following year the adjacent graveyard was purchased.

Records show that the first bell used by the church was cast in Frederick in 1835 and cost $89.37½. The original church cost $3,335.15½ and most of the money was raised here.

During the Civil War the church was occupied by Union batteries. The church building was used as a hospital and the basement for stabling mules and horses. The church building was struck by shells fired by a battery commanded by Stonewall Jackson.

In the early days vestrymen were assessed $20 to be such, and such an obligation was the same as a debt incurred and a vestryman could be sued if he did not pay.

The organ which once graced St. Thomas' Church is now in the Smithsonian Museum, Washington, and is supposed to be the first pipe organ brought to the United States. It was purchased in 1700, in England, by a Port Royal (Va.) church and later sold to Christ Church, Alexandria, Va. Then Trinity Church, Shepherdstown, W. Va., bought it, and in 1889 it was purchased by St. Thomas' Church and moved from Shepherdstown by canal boat.

Bishop Edward Helfenstein of Maryland will have charge of the dedicatory program.

Etched Word Found On Back of Turtle

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Aug. 1.—A captive turtle with the word "God" between two anchors etched on its back and also bearing two lines of figures attracted considerable attention when exhibited here. The turtle was found by Max Lipscomb, colored, a farmer of near Milton, N. C.

Lipscomb reasoned that the turtle's shell bore a symbolic sermon, the theme of which he opined was "Anchor to God." He had no explanation relative to the numbers which appeared plainly as 55,559 in one row and 42,221 in another. Numbers players seized upon the opportunity of what they viewed as a hunch, and two playing a combination of figures from the turtle's back are said by Lipscomb to have made hits, one for $100 and another for $10.

Postoffice Considered For Fredericksburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 1.—Postmaster Horace F. Crismond announced today that erection of a new $150,000 postoffice here is being considered by Postoffice Department officials, following an investigation of local conditions last week by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Purdum. Purdum has made no recommendations, Crismond said, and may return later for a more detailed study.

If a new postoffice is erected, the local personnel will be increased, he said. Further steps to secure a new building will be made Saturday, when a delegation composed of W. Marshall King, S. Bernard Coleman and James A. Payne goes to Washington to interview Representative S. Otis Bland.

Rule Extends Receipts Tax To Used Cars

July's $413,123 Biggest Sum Collected in One Month.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Aug. 1.—A source of additional revenue from the State's 1 per cent gross receipt tax was opened today when Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor ruled that registered automobile dealers must pay the tax on all used cars sold.

Daniel L. Clayland, 3d, director of the gross receipt tax division in the comptroller's office, said the additional revenue would be "considerable," but could not estimate how much the taxes would total annually.

A companion measure to the gross receipt tax law levies a 1 per cent tax on automobiles registered with the State commissioner of motor vechicles. This tax is collected by the commissioner and remitted to the comptroller.

Clayland pointed out that the tax applied when original titles were issued by the motor vehicle commissioner. He said that automobile dealers had not been paying any gross receipt tax on used-car sales and that, under the ruling, they would be required to make the payment, shifting the tax to the purchaser if they desired.

Collections from the gross receipts and automobile titling taxes reached their highest point in July, when a total of $413,123.80 was collected, including $40,424.23 from the automobile tax.

This compares to $386,024.56 collected in June, including automobile taxes of $42,583.99. Both the June and July figures include some delinquent taxes that will be applied to previous months, when the figures are broken down on the books of the collection division.

Clayland pointed out that 25,404 retailers paid in July, as compared to 22,490 in June. He attributed the increase to work done in Baltimore City by investigators sent out from the collecting office.

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

IN a nearby column on this page, Mr. Avery Brundage, president of the United States Olympic Committee, rushes into print with an appeal for the support of "all patriotic interests" in sending an American team to the 1936 Olympiad in Germany. Mr. Brundage is the gentleman who said last week that he saw no reason for withdrawing the United States team from the German games.

POVICH.

For some time now, Mr. Brundage has been insisting that the Jewish and Catholic athletes on the American team would be welcome in Germany. And for some time now, Mr. A. Hitler and his henchmen have been insisting that Jews are the curse of Germany, that Catholics are the Public Enemy No. 1 of the German state. As to whether or not Jews and Catholics, even though they be members of the United States team, are welcome in Germany, the matter seems to simmer down to the simple question of who should know best—Mr. Brundage or Mr. Hitler. Take your choice.

This department is quite at a loss to define Mr. Brundage's reaction in the face of the persecutions to which Jews and Catholics have been subjected in Germany. On the part of Mr. Brundage, I don't know whether it is blindness or blandness. If he knows of no discrimination against Jewish and Catholic athletes in Germany, then his sight is indeed failing him. He might at least have read the official German communiques dissolving Catholic sports clubs and excluding Jews from the Olympic squads.

Anyway, the guy has a nerve in appealing for "patriotic support" in the raising of funds to send the United States team to Germany. Mr. Noah T. Webster in his newest dictionary defines a patriot as: "One who loves his country and upholds its institutions; hence any defender of popular liberty, civil or religious." Mr. Brundage seems to be addressing the wrong people.

THE worst thing a ball player has to fear is any friend he might have in the press box. He may be able to save himself from his enemies, but all is lost once he is adopted by the boys in the press box. They can stop him colder than a frost-bitten Eskimo. It's baseball history.

Let a baseball writer tap out a flattering piece reeking with superlatives in praise of any given ball player and, presto, that ball player is washed up, at least for the day. On the field that afternoon, he's a bum, seemingly preordained. He can't hit and he can't field, and if he's a pitcher, he can't pitch. And, he gets all the tough breaks. It's sure fire that he could save himself a lot of grief if he pleads sicks the day he gets a good write-up.

We guys stopped Heinie Manush once. It was back in 1933 when Heinie was hitting safely in 34 consecutive games and shooting at George Sisler's record of hitting in 41 straight games. The Washington correspondents with the Nats in Chicago finally awoke to the fact that Manush was a great hitter. The Washington morning papers that day were devoted to four-column pictures and detailed records of Manush's prowess as a hitter. The guy was great.

We stopped him that afternoon. Heinie Manush didn't get a hit. He went to bat six times and "went for the collar," as the boys says, his streak finished. Pitchers couldn't stop him but we could. We had to convert Luke Appling into the most sensational shortstop baseball has ever seen for a day, but we did it. Appling robbed Manush of hits three times with spectacular stops and it was tough on Heinie. But he didn't have a chance after what we said about him.

In Short—

All is not milk and honey between Lefty Grove and Joe Cronin on the Red Sox . . . in a recent game at Boston, Grove resented Cronin's orders to pass a man and fill the bases . . . especially when the next fellow singled to drive in two runs . . . With the coming series with the A's in view, Clark Griffith yesterday interrogated Wes Ferrell at great length on how he pitches to the A's . . . Ferrell recommended a change of pace . . . Chattanooga fans hailed with delight the departure of President Joe Engel on a scouting tour . . . he is regarded as a "jonah" to the club . . . Al Schacht yesterday declared that the feud with Ed Linke is at an end . . . "If a line drive to the head can't knock him out," said Schacht, "then I'm only wasting my time" . . . Boston newspapers were ignorant of the Schacht-Linke fight until two days later . . . If the Cardinals lose the National League pennant by a game, they have themselves to blame . . . for playing that night game with the Reds and getting licked . . . Big league scoring rules have been revised and pitchers who accidentally deflect a batted ball into the hands of a fielder with a putout following, do not get credit for an assist . . . The only man who has squawked as yet against a decision by Umpire Fred Marberry is Jimmy Austin, St. Louis coach . . . the ball players are pulling for Marberry to make good in his new role and have been lenient with him thus far . . . but if Marberry is still in the league, the next generation of ball players will have no sympathy for him . . . George Moriarty used to be a player, too, but that was long ago . . . they don't pull their punches against Moriarty, you'll notice.

Decathlon Should Determine Nation's Outstanding Mermaid

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

JONES BEACH, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Today at Jones Beach, in conjunction with the four-ring water circus under the direction of the A. A. U., there will begin the most interesting and exciting event of women's swimming—the now famous invitation decathlon swim, in which eight of the foremost girl swimmers and divers in the United States compete for three days steadily in a ten-event program. When late Sunday night the winner is tabulated you may pretty well decide that there is the foremost water woman in the world.

They don't run the decathlon abroad. I doubt whether anywhere else but the United States could you find any girls capable of competing in it.

To handle the decathlon assignment a girl must be able to swim free style at 50, 100 and 200 meters, breast stroke at 50 and 100, the difficult but beautiful backstroke at 50 and 100, a medley race of 150 meters combining all three, a rescue race at 50 meters and a 10-foot dive. Here is practically everything that a real water woman should be able to do.

The rescue race is itself a novelty in the decathlon and is certainly a useful water event. You wouldn't think much of a girl swimmer that

Plenty of Tonnage In Next Fight Card

Tow-Mitchell Bout Tops Stadium Program.

Tons, more or less, of punching power will be unleashed in the ring at Griffith Stadium next Monday night o nthe fight card featured by a 10-round encounter between Bob Tow, the Alexandria Adonis, and Terry Mitchell, the New York knockerout.

In a six-round preliminary, Joe Lipps, who made a good impression in bowing to Mitchell in a recent bout, will duel one Buck Edkorlak, a giant French-Canadian from the Bull Moose country.

Another six-rounder will find two old heavyweight rivals, Kirkwood Burke and Steve Kadash swapping swats. Roy Manley, a local welterweight, will engage Frankie Blair, conqueror of Phil Furr, in another six-rounder.

An opening four is being arranged.

Kress Spark In Four-Run Seventh

Whitehill Allows Only Two Blows in Last Five Innings.

Three Rival Hurlers Are Pounded; Home Run Blasted by Myer.

By Shirley Povich.

EARL WHITEHILL, swooning rapidly from the effects of seven Boston base hits in the third and fourth innings, looked contemptuously at the pair of relief pitchers Manager Bucky Harris was frantically rushing to the bull pen, took a hitch in his belt, and safely delivered the ball game unto the Nats yesterday.

Taking heart from Whitehill's two-hit pitching over the last five innings, the Nats assaulted three Boston pitchers for 17 hits, tied the score in the fifth inning and won the game, 9 to 5, with a four-run disturbance in the seventh.

Fighting to stay in the big leagues, Red Kress, the Nats' Cinderella man whose release to the minors was hastily canceled last week, was no handicap in that seventh inning. It was he who delivered the winning hit, a line drive single to center that brought the Nats their decisive sixth run.

Whitehill Doubles.

Whitehill, himself, was not content with that 6-5 lead. He followed Kress' hit with a terrific double off Rube Walberg that smashed high against the right-field fence to score the Nats' second run of the inning and place the third and fourth runs of the frame in position to score.

But back in the fourth inning, Whitehill was on the verge of the showers. He had pitched away the Nats' 2-to-0 lead when the Red Sox socked him for three runs and three hits in the third inning, and after the Nats had tied the score for him, he encountered more trouble in the fourth.

Four Boston hits, two of 'em doubles, had Whitehill wavering in the fourth before he could get the second man out and the Red Sox had taken a 5-to-3 lead when Harris frantically ordered Jack Russell and Leon Pettit to the bull pen. One more hit off Whitehill and he would be out of there, a dismal failure.

Two Hits in Five Innings.

Then it was that Whitehill pulled himself together with a sneering glance at the bull pen. During those last five innings, he permitted only two hits, one a bunt by Williams that might have been scored as an error. Only one of the Red Sox reached second base after the fourth.

The Nats had gained a 2-to-0 lead off the left-handed George Hockette in the first inning when Buddy Myer followed Kuhel's single with a drive into centerfield that developed into a fluke home run when it took a high bounce over Dusty Cooke's head.

Boston stepped away to a 3-to-2 lead in the third when Max Bishop drove in two runs with a single and scored on Cronin's double to right, but the score was tied at 3 to 3 in the same inning after Myer and Powell led off with singles. Walberg, who relieved Hockette, saw the tying run score on Manush's infield out.

Cooke opened the 2-run rally against Whitehill in the fourth with a double to left, and, with one out, Dahlgren doubled to center and Walberg singled to right to drive in the second run. Bishop followed with a single, but in his darkest moment, Whitehill tightened, disposed of Almada on a fly and struck out Johnson.

Jake Powell's safe bunt sent the Nats on their way toward tying the score and Ossie Bluege drove him to third with a single to right. Powell scored on Kress' long fly to U. S. Olympic Head Says Germany Is Acting in Good Faith.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Steps designed to combat a revival of opposition to American participation in the 1936 Olympic games at Berlin, growing out of the latest anti-Jewish and anti-Catholic activities in Germany, were taken today by Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic Committee.

Brundage took sharp issue with his successor in the national presidency of the Amateur Athletic Union, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, a former New York Supreme Court justice, who came out today with a reiteration of his opposition to this country's entry into the Olympics, if racial discrimination is proved, and strongly condemned the German government's existing policies.

"Regardless in what country the Olympic games are held, there will be some group, some religion or some race which can register a protest because of the action of the government of that country, past or present," said Brundage. "Pledges satisfactory to the International and American Olympic committees have been made by Germany, respecting the treatment of its own athletes as well as those of visiting countries.

Defends Government.

"If it develops these promises have been broken, further consideration can be given to the subject by the American Olympic committee. So far we have had no reports whatsoever, official or otherwise, that Germany has failed to give Jewish athletes a fair opportunity to qualify for Olympic teams. It is my understanding, in fact, that in the case of Helene Mayer, champion woman fencer, German sports leaders have sought earnestly to have her return from the United States in time to represent Germany in the Olympics.

"The Olympics are an international event and must be kept free from outside interference or entanglements—racial, religious or political—if we are to achieve the main objective of spreading democracy and the high standards of amateur sport throughout the world."

Brundage repeated these views this afternoon in an international broadcast, carried over a Nation-wide hook-up, which included a first-hand picture of Olympic preparations in Berlin. He appealed for the support of "all patriotic interests" in sending the strongest possible American teams to Berlin next year, after listening to the voices of Karl Diem, general secretary of the German Olympic committee, and Bill Henry, of Los An-

Zachary Is Effective; Dodgers Top Braves, 4-2

Boston, August 1 (AP).—Tom Zachary was more effective in the pinches than Ben Cantwell today and the Brooklyn Dodgers took the final game of the series with the Boston Braves, 4 to 2.

Each team made 11 hits, but Zachary kept the Braves' blows well spaced except in the third and sixth, when they bunched three in each inning to score their runs.

Browns Bow; Tigers Keep Gaining

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 1.—The Detroit Tigers battered three St. Louis pitchers for a 6-to-3 victory in the rubber game of their series today, choking off a Brownie rally in the ninth to gain half a game over the idle New York Yanks.

Alvin Crowder held St. Louis to four scattered hits until the ninth, when the heat got him and he was nicked for four blows and three runs. With one gone and one on, Elon Hogsett was called from the bull-pen to stave off defeat. He got the first man to face him, but walked Pinch Hitter Heath and Lary to fill the bases. Then the old "chief" bore down and fanned Burns to retire the side.

Van Atta started and faced only three men, issuing a walk and two hits for the first Tiger run. Detroit climbed on Walkup next for 11 hits and 5 runs. Fay Thomas finished.

Putting Off, Rippy Bows, 4 and 2

Stefanchik, Conqueror, Is Later Eliminated by 5-and-3 Score.

Dave Mitchell Is Upset by Amandoles; Tomes Is Victorious.

By Dave Herman,

A Staff Correspondent.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 1.—Claude Rippy, young Washington municipal golf champion, is no longer a challenger for the National Public Links Championship.

He was eliminated here today in the third round of the tournament by a 21-year-old fitter's helper, Mike Stefanchik, of Gary, Ind., 4 and 2, and thus wrote finis to the District of Columbia's chances for having one of her golfing sons win a national title.

Rippy handed the match to his Indiana adversary on the proverbial silver platter, missing short putts at critical moments, and being unable to capitalize on Stefanchik's mistakes on hole after hole.

Is Later Defeated.

A trifle cocky and over-confident following his victory over the Washington boy, Stefanchik met up with the hometown survivor, Bill Russell, 21-year-old lad, a member of the vast army of unemployed, in the afternoon and was knocked out of the picture, 5 and 3.

Joining Russell in the semifinals were Joe Coria, a 24-year-old St. Paul picnic grounds policeman, who swung some mean clubs today; Bob Tomes, of Long Beach, Calif., 34, also unemployed, and 19-year-old Frank Strafaci, Brooklyn High School student who has been scoring well because he hasn't had enough tournament experience to learn to worry about his shots.

The day was not without its customary upsets. Defending Champion Dave Mitchell, pride and joy of Indianapolis, is out of the championship. He was eliminated this morning by an unknown, Charlie Amandoles, a slim little 21-year-old Staten Island machinist, who won, 2 up, after one of the strangest finishes in the history of the championship as far as the defending titleholder is concerned.

Called Down by Foe.

It was a peculiar match. Holding his opponent even through the turn, Amandoles found himself the victim of a "calling down" by his rival for teeing past the white marker on the fourteenth hole. He played another ball, and won the hole with a five to a six to go 1 up. They halved the fifteenth in par 3s.

On the treacherous sixteenth, a 445-yarder, the Staten Islander dumped two shots into the lagoon to the right, and wound up with 8 to Mitchell's 6 after players and spectators had engaged in a lively dispute.

Amandoles fired a great iron approach to the seventeenth, and won the hole with a birdie to go 1 up. He was to the right of the green with his tee shot on the eighteenth, and Mitchell was in a trap in front of the green. After Amandoles missed his second, Mitchell fired three consecutive shots in a futile attempt to blast out of the trap.

Loses Opportunity.

The gallery looked on in wide-eyed amazement as the curly-haired champion cracked up at the precious moment, losing his opportunity to win the hole and necessitate an extra hole match.

Armstrong Eliminated.

Another favorite to fall was Arthur Armstrong, the young Hawaiian star, finalist last year, who bowed out at the hands of Tomes, 5 and 3, after shooting par golf in his morning match to eliminate

Candimate, $12.20 Shot, Is Four-Length Victor at Suffolk

Red Ensign's Spurt Fails In Stretch

Hilltown Finishes Third; 12,000 Bet $42,965 on Feature.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, Aug. 1.—The evil spell which has been cast upon the efforts of the stable of William H. Gallagher at this track were dispelled here today when Candimate romped home four lengths in front for the first victory of the colors of that New York owner in the Westfield, the 1-mile feature of the twentieth day of racing at Suffolk Downs.

The winner was a 5-1 choice at the windows and returned $12.20 for $2.

Mrs. Paul Shaw's Up And Up got out of the gate a hop in front of the field, but was outfooted for the first turn by Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Hilltown, that had plenty of early lick to hold the command until the stretch was reached.

Determined Bid.

There the winner, that had been held off the pace by Joe Wagner, made his determined bid and ran the opposition into the ground before a furlong of the front panel had been traversed. Behind Candimate came Red Ensign with a length and a half lead on the fading Hilltown, that held the show position by four lengths from the rushing Miss Premier.

Nick Wall piloted Red Ensign well after a slow getaway and coming into the stretch he had that horse out in the good footing, showing plenty of power after the field had pulled wide on the turn and allowed him through. The distance left, however, was not long enough for him to overtake Candimate.

By the Associated Press.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Devotees of the cross-country sport turned out in force to witness the thirty-seventh running of the Beverwyck Handicap, a steeplechase test of about 2 miles, that topped today's card. They saw F. Ambrose Clark's Red Flash, which receded to 9 to 2 in the betting, score a rather lucky victory over Thomas Hitchcock's Amagansett. The latter was beaten a head while saving the place by a half-dozen lengths from Mrs. Arthur White's Spinach.

The Greentree entry of Jungle King and Border Warrant was favorite at 8 to 5. Jungle King fell at the third jump after a fast beginning, while his stablemate dropped far back after the first mile and a half. The time was 4:18 3-5.

L. E. Stoddard, jr., who rode Amagansett, registered a claim of foul against the winner, which the stewards disallowed. Red Flash came to the last jump daylight in front of Amagansett. The latter's rider ran his mount up to the obstacle and onto the heels of the leader. Amagansett appeared the best horse in the race had he been more judiciously ridden.

Water Carnival Set By Scouts Tomorrow

Washington Boy Scouts at Camp Roosevelt, near Chesapeake Beach, will be provided with an elaborate aquatic sports carnival tomorrow when the Coast Guard cutter Apache visits the camp and its crew stages a succession of races and demonstrations.

Commander Merlin O'Neill who, through the courtesy of Admiral H. G. Hamlet, is taking the craft to the camp promises surf boat races between members of the crew, diving demonstrations in full diving regalia and life-saving displays. Teams among the campers will stage a number of races also. An illuminated night pageant will be staged.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT COURT, $38.60, $20.80, $10.00; WEE LAD, $14.60, $7.00; ONUS, $3.60.

NIGHT COURT went into command immediately, drew clear in the initial quarter-mile and, dominating the running the entire way, won with speed in reserve. WEE LAD, prominently placed all the way, closed in determined fashion through the stretch. ONUS moved through on the inside down the back stretch and finished gamely under urging. ATTAQUECHEE, shuffled back at the start, improved his position steadily, though unable to reach the leaders.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:00½. Winner, Harry Knight's ch. g. (3), by Petee-Wrack—Chickadee. Trained by G. C. Milton. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:46 2-5, 1:12, 1:38 2-5, 1:44 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK WAR, $6.20, $3.40, $2.80; KING'S PLEASURE, $6.00, $3.40; SQUEEZE OUT, $3.00.

DARK WAR followed the early pace under steadying restraint, moved up on the outside of KING'S PLEASURE when reaching the stretch, wore the latter down and drew out steadily at the end. KING'S PLEASURE moved up to ALBUQUERQUE nearing the far turn, fought it out for the lead with the latter, disposed of him and weakened in the stretch turn. SQUEEZE OUT came willingly under urging in the last quarter-mile. GREAT HASTE was unable to reach the leaders.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. The Westfield. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:40. Off at once. Winner, W. H. Gallagher's b. c. (3), by Westy Hogan—Candy May. Trained by J. L. Donovan. Value to winner, $800; second, $250; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:48, 1:12 3-5, 1:39.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANDIMATE, $12.20, $4.60, $3.40; RED ENSIGN, $3.80, $3.20; HILLTOWN, $4.40.

CANDIMATE followed the pace under slight restraint for the first five furlongs, moved up fast on the inside when making his bid, went to the front when reaching the stretch and drew out steadily at the end. RED ENSIGN, restrained early, closed with good energy in the last quarter-mile. HILLTOWN went to the front in the run to the first turn, was rated along under slight restraint, faltering after going six furlongs. MISS PREMIER showed good speed in forcing the pace, tiring when the real racing began.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Stoughton. Purse, $1,200. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:11. Off at 5:14. Winner, Greentree Stable's blk. g. (2), by High Time—Chere Yvonne. Trained by M. C. Lilly. Value to winner, $800; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 3-5, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMBOREE, $2.60, $2.20, $2.20; TUGBOAT FRANK, $2.60, $2.20; BARNSLEY, $2.60.

JAMBOREE, in close quarters between TUGBOAT FRANK and NEDVIVE in the run down the back stretch, was forced to take up at the far turn, moved around on the outside in the stretch, responded gamely to punishment and, wearing down TUGBOAT FRANK inside the last 70 yards, drew clear at the line. TUGBOAT FRANK, prominent from the start, moved into a good lead when the winner was forced to take up, fought it out gamely, but was unable to keep pace in the final test. BARNSLEY, outrun early, came to the outside in the stretch and closed with a belated rush. NIGHTMARE went evenly all the way. NEDVIVE faded early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:43. Off at 3:43½. Winner, J. McNamara's b. m. (5), by The Wanderer—Elusina. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:39 3-5, 1:53 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WANDREL, $7.40, $3.60, $2.80; SKIPSEA, $4.60, $3.60; FLAT ROCK, $4.00.

WANDREL, permitted to settle into her best stride and not hurried during the first five furlongs, began moving up steadily thereafter, came to the outside in the stretch and, closing determinedly, was going away at the end. SKIPSEA, never far from the pace and lightly restrained early, held on stubbornly in the final drive. FLAT ROCK moved up on the inside and closed gamely in the stretch run. TEENIE R. showed good speed, faltering slightly in the last furlong.

NRA Trims Sleuths, 10-3, Ties for Government Loop Lead

5-Run Attack In 6th Routs Davidson

Teams Face Two More Games Apiece; May Go Into Play-Off.

BLASTING the offerings of Ray Davidson and Jim Tennant for 14 hits, the NRA team came from behind to defeat Bureau of Investigation, 10to 3, yesterday and tie the Sleuths for first place in the second series Post Association race in the U. S. Government League.

Each team has two more games to play in the second-half schedule and unless the other contenders, District Repair Shop and Treasury, should spring an upset, these leaders will meet in a play-off for the second-half title the end of next week.

Investigation contributed to its downfall in no small measure in the sixth inning, when its infield support collapsed. Bobby Stevens, Bill Rapp and Joe Freschi were the leaders in the five-run assault upon Davidson in the sixth, which sewed up the game.

Back Up Pitchers.

In contrast to the unsteady fielding of the Sleuths was the sparkling way NRA backed up Bennie Speigel and John "Lefty" Stevens. Stevens, relieving Speigel in the fourth, got credit for the victory—hns fifth of the season over Invstigation.

Joe Freschi made a sensational catch of Leverton's bid for a hit in the fourth, when he raced far behind second base to spear the ball and hold onto it while turning tumble several times.

Cards Toss Reds Back In Sixth Place, 7 to 5

Cincinnati, Aug. 1 (AP).—Cincinnati's Reds slipped back to sixth place after a day in fifth position today as the St. Louis Cardinals beat them, 7 to 5, while the Brooklyn Dodgers were disposing of the Boston Braves.

A four-run drive off Emmett Nelson in the first inning, aided by successive triples by Medwick and Collins and Gelbert's double, gave the Cards victory. Double plays in the eighth and ninth, the first with the bases loaded and only one out, killed Cincinnati's chances.

The game was played in 95-degree heat that forced Umpire "Dolly" Stark to the clubhouse, leaving Rigler and Stewart to carry on alone.

24-7 Beating Topples Mt. Jackson From Top

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 1.—Strasburg today administered Mount Jackson the worst defeat ever recorded in local baseball circles, taking a 24-to-7 count in a slow and one-sided marathon, in which the losers fell from the top of the Shenandoah County League. Strasburg was master of the game from the second inning, when they tallied four runs off Jim Shannon, who started on the hill for the former league leaders.

The game was marked by the hitting of Fisher, who pounded out six hits in six trips to the platter, and by Racey's home run in the sixth.

Hustlers vs. Union Bridge.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Aug 1.—Frederick Hustlers and Union Bridge will meet at McCurdy Field Sunday. Frank Fraley, mainstay of the Hustler pitching staff, who has been out of the game three weeks with a sore arm and injured finger, will start on the mound. It is likely that George Skinner, Western Maryland College right-hander, will pitch for Union Bridge.

O'Mahoney-Savoldi Bout Turner's Best Feat

District Promoter Pulls Wires, Gets Bout as Chicagoan Fails.

By Bill McCormick.

SHOULD a boxing promoter land a heavyweight championship bout between Jim Braddock and Joe Louis for Washington, the boys behind the typewriters in the press boxes undoubtedly would start a concerted rush toward their dictionaries in search of glowing adjectives to describe that promoter.

In booking Danno O'Mahoney, recently crowned ruler of the heavyweight wrestling ranks, to meet Jumping Joe Savoldi at Griffith Stadium next Tuesday night, Joe Turner has accomplished a feat just as great in the field of grapple and grunt—and no one has given him a tumble, except the cash customers who have been swarming about the ticket office since pasteboards for the prize performance were first placed on sale.

The story behind the story of the booking of that match for the Capital not only is interesting, but it brings out more forcibly than ever the fact that Turner is the Jimmy Johnston or Mike Jacobs of the wrestling world.

In the first place, it is quite doubtful if Danno would chose Savoldi as an opponent in any man's ring if the choice were left entirely up to him. Not that the 21-year-old dead-pan Irisher could be accused of coddling his newly acquired crown at any time, but Jumping Joe has earned quite a reputation as an upsetter of champions and that reputation alone would make him a formidable opponent for one who only recently has slammed his way to way to the top.

Back in 1933, when only a mere novice in the mat racket, Savoldi was matched with the then invulnerable Jimmy Londos in Chicago. Much to the surprise of every one but himself, Jumping Joe mauled the daylights out of the then champion, finally pinning him for the necessary 1-2-3 count. The bout created a terrific furore in wrestling ranks, and the public cried long and loud for a return bout.

Savoldi expressed a willingness to the return immediately, but Londos refused to meet the former Notre Dame football star until the Illinois commission had banned the drop kick—Savoldi's favorite, and at that time practically only—weapon of offense. Deprived of the right to kick his opposition into submission, Savoldi was defeated by Londos in 1934, when the rematch finally was made.

Since that day, Savoldi has increased his repertoire of holds and now is generally considered one of the best wrestlers in the game. Under the circumstances, it is hardly possible that O'Mahoney would care to meet Jumping Joe so quickly after his hard bouts with Jim Londos, Chief Little Wolf and the recent affair in which he won undisputed claim to the crown from Ed (Don) George.

Ed White, once Londos' manager, who now is promoting in Chicago, attempted to secure the Savoldi-O'Mahoney bout for the Windy City. He tempted O'Mahoney with the information that the Illinois commission again would prohibit the drop kick, thus depriving Savoldi of his still most impressive weapon. O'Mahoney seemed on the verge of accepting the Chicago engagement, when Turner and Savoldi himself stepped into the picture.

"Lissen, Joe," Savoldi told Turner. "I don't wanna rassle this guy if I can't use my drop kick, and I'd rather work for you than anyone I know in the game. See if you can get the bout for here and that'll give evrybody a break. If this O'Mahoney's so good, let him meet me where I can shoot the works, then we'll know."

Faced with what seemed an impossible task, Turner nevertheless started pulling wires in an effort to land the match here. He flooded the New York and Boston offices with wires and phone calls explaining what a great thing a Savoldi-O'Mahoney bout would be for Washington. He sat up many a night pouring convincing arguments into the cauliflowered ears of those who pull the strings on the wrestling circuit. He practically talked himself hoarse trying to sell the idea to Jack McGrath, O'Mahoney's manager.

Finally all concerned capitulated, perhaps as much to keep from being waked up in the middle of the night by a Turner phone call as for any other reason. And that's how the Capital's impresario of maul finally succeeded in landing O'Mahoney and Savoldi for their first ring appearance together.

Bucs Win, 6-5, Check Cubs' Flag Drive

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 1.—The Pittsburgh Pirates again came to the aid of the faltering New York Giants today when they turned back the challenging Chicago Cubs, 6 to 5, in the final game of their long home stand. The defeat dropped the Cubs a full game back of the Giants, who were not scheduled.

Striking early and hard, the Pirates scored all of their runs in the second inning, Arky Vaughan climaxing the five-hit attack off Lon Warneke by hitting his sixteenth home run of the season with the bases loaded. The Cubs rallied and had the tying run on first when Waite Hoyt came to the rescue of Bill Swift in the ninth and squelched the outburst.

Tommy Thevenow and Gus Suhr led off the Pirates' big frame with singles. Earl Grace fanned, but Swift came through with another one-bagger, scoring Thevenow with the first run. Forest Jensen kept pace, also hitting a single to score the Pittsburgh first baseman. Lloyd Waner was tossed out but Warneke hit Brother Paul with a pitched ball, filling the bases and setting the stage for the major leagues' leading batter's act.

Starts Argument.

Vaughan's homer into the upper deck of the right field stands caused considerable argument as the Chicago players claimed the ball was a foul, but the umpires ruled it was fair as it passed into the stands.

The Cubs picked up a run in each of the fourth and eighth innings and then made the game close by counting three times in the ninth. Freddy Lindstrom's triple was the big blow of the rally, the hit scoring two runs. Hoyt then replaced Swift. Lindstrom scored on an infield out but after walking Herman, the veteran hurler easily retired Cavarretta and O'Dea.

Orme-McDowell Pair Retains Girls' Playground Net Crown

FOR the second successive year the girls' City Playground doubles championships went to Helen Orme and Lucille McDowell, of Burroughs Playground, yesterday. The 1934 champions definitely stamped themselves the class of girls' tennis in the Capital by setting back Barbara Boose and Edith Goodwin, of Takoma, 6—1, 6—2, in the final round. The match was played at Crevy Chase Playground.

Finals in the junior and senior divisions of the Boys' Playground championships will be played at 9:30 a. m. today, with Harry March, Tech High's No. 1 man facing his teammate, Billy Spanton, in the junior class, and Ballisario Contreras, Eastern High's No. 1 man, facing Eugene Owens, Western's No. 1 star, in the senior match.

Represent Burroughs.

March, Maryland junior champion, is the favorite to win from Spanton and Owens, No. 1 man on Western High's championship team, is expected to take the senior title in his match with Contreras. Nate Ritzenberg won the senior title last year; Allie Ritzenberg, the junior.

Miss Orme, the 17-year-old Roosevelt High School girl who was repulsed in the final round of the singles tournament after being favored to win, came through with a fine all-around game, well-balanced by the play of her partner. Having teamed together for more than a year, the girls are expected to form a definite threat in the forthcoming Women's Tennis League championships.

Offer Stubborn Battle.

Miss Boose and Miss Goodwin offered a battle much more stubborn than the score indicates. The greater experience and team-play of their opponents proved important, however, in taking by far the majority of the many deuced games. The Takoma girls often found themselves unable to pull out the necessary two points for the game.

The teams will be presented tropnies by Miss Maude N. Parker, director of girls' activities for the department, at Central Stadium, August 29, the date for the annual girls' field day.

Baer Still Best Heavy, Avers Old Jess Willard

Rapid City, S. Dak., Aug. 1.—Jess Willard, former world heavyweight champion, believes that Max Baer is still the ranking heavyweight boxer of the world, despite his recent defeat by James J. Braddock.

On a vacation at a tourist camp just outside the city limits, Willard today listed Baer as first in his ranking of present day heavyweights. He placed Joe Louis, detroit Negro, second, Braddock, the champion, third, and Max Schmeling fourth.

Miss Heintz Winner.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 1.—Miss Elizabeth Heintz won the Lichtenstein Trophy for one year yesterday by capturing first place in the handicap golf tournament held at the Cumberland Country Club. Miss Heintz had a gross of 97, handicap of 22 and a net score of 75. Mrs. Lee B. Mathews was the runner-up with a gross of 105, handicap of 27 and a net score of 78.

Staunton Nemesis To Charlottesville

University City Nine Is Slaughtered, 14-0.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., Aug. 1.—Staunton submerged Charlottesville here this afternoon, 14-0, in one of the most one-sided contests played in the Valley League this season. Charlottesville called on three pitchers to stem the terrific batting spree of the Staunton hitters, but the move was fuile. Harry Dey, Staunton player-manager, led his teammates in slugging with a triple and a home run.

Berger Is Star As Tribe Tops White Sox

Slams Three Doubles and Single; Chicago Fails to Tie for 2d.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—Ganging on Carl Fischer and Johnny Salveson for 14 hits, including a homer and double by Odell Hale and three doubles and a single by Bozie Berger, the Cleveland Indians salvaged the final game of the series from the Chicago White Sox, 8 to 3, today.

The defeat kept the Sox from advancing into a second-place tie with the idle Yankees, dropping them a full game back of the New Yorkers and four and one-half games to the rear of the league-leading Detroit Tigers.

With their infield accounting for eight hits, totaling 17 bases, the Indians touched Fischer for three runs on Knickerbocker's triple, a pass, Berger's first double and singles by Lee and Phillips in the second inning. They routed the former Detroit pitcher in the fourth when doubles by Berger and Phillips and singles by Vosmik and Averill sent two more runs across the plate.

Hale Hits Homer.

Hale's fifth-inning homer with the bases empty, and Berger's third double, coming with the bases loaded and scoring two runs, finished the Cleveland scoring off Salveson in the ninth.

The Sox got to Thornton Lee for ten hits but were able to get more than one in only two frames. They scored twice in the third on singles by Hopkins, Fischer, Radcliff and Piet and added their last run in the fourth on Sewell's one-bagger after Salveson's double.

Cameron, Casey Lead Creek League Batters

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 1.—Arch Cameron, of the Lonaconing Athletics, and John Casey, of the Keyser Golden Knights, are the leading hitters in the Cumberland and Georges Creek Baseball League, according to figures compiled by Secretary John J. Cavanaugh. Both players have batting averages of .500, or 15 hits in 30 attempts.

Eddie Diehl, catcher of the Cumberland Colts, and Ray Middleton, of the Frostburg Giants, are tied for the runner-up position in batting, with percentages of .444.

Matmen Renew Grudge Battle Tomorrow

COWBOY ANDY MEISNER, said to be the only rassler a mob ever tried to lynch, reveals his Texas tendons to the Washington public tomorrow night when he grapples Chattanooga Gene Bowsman, warm favorite of the South, in the co-feature match of the American Legion's mat program.

Andy and Gene will renew relations which left off a short time ago when Texas Andy bounced a stool off Bowsman's thick skull at Chattanooga, Tenn. Although pro-Bowsman fans quickly and effectively wiped up Meisner and his seconds in true old Southern style, they failed to wipe out the injured feelings of the young Tornado from Texas.

Consequently, the Meisner-Bowsman conflict to head the bill at the Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast coliseum tomorrow is labeled a "grudge match" of the first water. Meisner also is said to resent particularly what Bowsman insisted on saying about Texas Greenhorns which resulted in his attempt to make a last round-up of Mr. Bowsman with the stool. Meisner recently recovered from what the Chattanoogans did for him, or, rather, to him.

Varying Interest.

The rest of the program is of varying interest for the most part, foreigners with tongue-twisting names being prominent. Gustiono Gerarei, of Italy, and Cliff Dudas, of Poland, whose real name is Dudaskinsky, share the spotlight with Meisner and Bowsman in an international conflict. Both matches will go two falls to a finish.

Meisner has promised to throw no stools or other implements tomorrow. In the semi-final, Mike Yonkers, of Pittsburgh, will meet Cyclone Thompson, of Boston. The other actors of the evening bring in international talent, Bill Kavaris, of Greece, meeting Fred Mueller, of Germany, and Sam Goldberg, Jewish flash, facing Eugene LaRue, of France.

Government Announces Curtailed Duck-Shooting Season

Bureau Limit Hunters to 30 Days

Conservation Measure Sets Separate Times in North, South.

By Dillon Graham.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

A 30-DAY open season on ducks has been promised hunters, but under the most rigid regulations ever imposed by the Government in an effort to reduce the annual kill.

The shooting season, applying to Geese, brant, jacksnipe and coot, as well as to ducks, will open in northern States on October 21 and close on November 19. In southern States the season wil run from November 20 to December 19.

Announcing the regulations with President Roosevelt's approval, J. N. "Ding" Darling, director of the Biological Survey, yesterday said the restrictions were the only alternative to a closed season because "we've killed more ducks than we've hatched every year for the last 35 years."

24,000,000 to Go South.

Darling estimated 24,000,000 ducks wil fly south this fall and 12,000,000 wil be kille dby hunting or natural causes. He figured 9,000,000 were killed by hunters last year and the kill this year would be from 5,000,000 to 6,000,000.

But Darling's program was assailed by John H. Baker, executive director of the National Association of Audubon societies.

Baker said a closed season was vitally necessary. He declared migratory ducks now would be subject to withering gunfire for 110 consecutive days on their flight from Canada to Louisiana and added the responsibility for further reducing the ranks of the ducks would "lie at the feet of the Federal authorities."

Prohibition of shooting over baited water or land.

Prohibiting of live decoys.

Elimination of zoning by States and the substitution of two zones, Northern and Southern.

Restriction of shooting to the hours between 7 a. m. and 4 p. m.

Reduction of some bag limits.

Making illegal the possession of more than one day's bag.

The three-shell limit placed on auto-loading and repeating shotguns take effect this fall and regulatoins provide that hunters may use a shotgun only, not larger than No. 10 gauge.

No open season will be allowed on wood ducks, bufflehead ducks, Ross' gees or swans. No shooting of snow geese will be permitted in Florida or in States north of Florida bordering on the Atlantic Ocean. The prohibition against brant hunting in the East has been removed.

Daily Bag Limit.

The daily bag limit on ducks will be 10 in the aggregate of all kinds and the possession limit will be 10. Ba gand possession limits on geese and brant will be 4.

The regulatoins limit the use of a blind, boat or any type floating craft to locatoins not more than 100 feet fro mthe shore line.

New seasons on mourning doves provide for shooting in Northern States from September 1 to December 15 and in Southern States from October 1 to January 15.

Putting Stance That Failed Him

CLAUDE RIPPY,

Putting Poorly, Rippy Beaten In Tourney

Master Strafaci, whose brother, a hair dresser, also participated in the championship, was the lad who polished off Amandoles. Strafaci, out in 36, played even par golf for 14 holes to win, 5 and 4.

Policeman Coria, semi-finalist last season, put out Kenny Rogers, San Antonio (Tex.) Army flier, 2 and 1, and Wesley Casper, assistant superintendent of a Louisville manufacturing company, 5 and 3. Coria, a seasoned public links golfer, went out in 35 to lead Casper 2 up, and shot the next six holes in 2 over par.

In the morning Rogers fired a subpar 35 at him, but Coria came back with a trio of threes to win on the seventeenth green.

Tomorrow's 36-hole semi-finals will find Coria opposed to Russell, the Indianapolis municipal champion, who has supplanted Mitchell as the apple of the home-town folks' eyes, and Tomes matching strokes with Strafaci.

While Rippy putted himself out of the picture in his match with Stefanchik, he was handicapped considerably by several stymies.

Stefanchik laid Rippy a stymie on the first hole for a win, and they halved the second in par 4s. They halved the third in par 3s, Rippy pitching close agter being short with his tee shot.

Rippy was the victim of another stymie on the fourth, and lost the hole with 6 to a 5. The Washington boy 3-putted the fifth, a short hole, taking a four to the Indianians' 3.

Halve Next Three.

They halved the next three holes. Rippy won the ninth to go 2 down. He was short in 3, but knocked up a stiff approach for his par 4, as a trap cost Stefanchik a 5.

After halving the tenth in par 5s, Rippy won back another hole at the eleventh, scoring his par 4 as Stefanchik found himself partially stymied by a 3 and wound up with 5.

Rippy blew a putt on the twelfth for a half in 4. It looked like he would square the match on the thirteenth, a short one. Rippy's shot stopped a few feet to the right of the green on a slope, and his opponent's ball nestled in a trap. Stefanchik blasted out safely, but missed a 6-footer, and it was a half in four.

Misses Another Putt.

On the fourteenth Rippy recovered nicely from the rough. Stefanchik was short in 2. Rippy missed another short putt, and his opponent canned his.

Both made beautiful shots on the 170-yard fifteenth, Rippy's ball hitting his opponents. Rippy was three feet from the pin, and missed his putt, and his Indiana rival sank his from three and a half feet for a deuce.

The end came on the sixteenth. Here Stefanchik knocked his drive into the lagoon, dropped another ball, and played a wonderful fourth shot for a five. Rippy hit a grand drive, but sliced his second into an almost unplayable lie. After missing his putt from 18 feet, Rippy conceded his opponent the hole.

Rippy went out in 39 and Stefanchik, 37. Stefanchik was only two over par for the 16 holes and Rippy, six over par.

Haas Injures Wrist.

Chicago, Aug. 1. (AP).—George "Mule" Haas, veteran White Sox outfielder, suffered a wrist injury in batting practice before the Cleveland game today and is expected to be out of the line-up from ten days to two weeks. Haas tore a ligament in his left wrist when he twisted the wrist while batting.

Favorites Win In Women's Net Play

Miss Wheeler and Miss Babcock Advance at Easthampton.

By the Associated Press.

EASTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 1. Two Californians reached the semifinal round of the Maidstone Club's annual invitation tennis tournament for women today before a deluge of rain washed out the rest of the program.

Seeded form prevailed in both completed matches. Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., listed third, conquered the hard-hitting Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., seeded sixth, 6—2, 6—3, and Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, fifth, made short work of Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, 6—0, 6—2.

As the result of the downpour, the remaining two quarter-final matches will be played tomorrow, with Mrs. Sarah P. Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., meeting Katherine Winthrop, also of Boston, for the right to play Miss Babcock. Miss Wheeler's opponent will be the winner of the match between Mrs. Ethel Burkhardt Arnold, of Los Angeles, top-seeded favorite, and Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City, former "first ten" luminary.

Miss Babcock had not been playing up to her No. 3 national ranking earlier this summer, but against Mrs. Van Ryn she once again displayed the tennis which put her in the forefront among the Nation's net women.

Her shots off the ground were steady and had both pace and depth. Her forecourt attack was well planned and carried out with skillful volleying, and her service also was improved. Mrs. Van Ryn lost ten straight games before she could hold her service.

Miss Wheeler prevailed over Mrs. Andrus because she was much more accurate from the base line and volleyed well when she charged the net behind her deep forehanders. Mrs. Andrus's control was ragged, although Mrs. Andrus is ranked fourth nationally—eight notches lower than the Pacific Coast girl—her defeat was no upset because Miss Wheeler is playing strongly and is enjoying one of her best Eastern campaigns.

Three California Youngsters Are Regarded As Likely Prospects for U. S. Davis Cup Team

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, August 1.—California, one of the country's most fertile tennis centers, is being counted on to develop the players who will catapult the United States back to the heights.

Three youngsters from the same sector that produced Maurice McLoughlin, "Little Bill" Johnston and Ellsworth Vines already have fallen under the eyes of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, although only two days have elapsed since America was whitewashed in the Davis Cup challenge round by Great Britain.

Holcombe Ward, veteran chairman of the association's cup committee, revealed that Jess Millman, Lawrence Nelson and Leonard Patterson—all Pacific Coast youngsters—are being given serious consideration for future cup warfare.

Best of Youngsters.

"According to our informaton, they're the best of the young material on the coast," Ward said. "I understand all three of them will be here for the national championships."

They hail from the southern section of California, where Millman is ranked No. 4 in the senior division and Nelson No. 5 in junior singles. Patterson did not receive a ranking this year.

"Of course, when I speak of them I have in mind the future because it hardly can be expected they will develop fast enough for next year's cup play," Ward said.

Budge, Mako, Parker.

"For the time being, we've got to count on Don Budge and Gene Mako, along with Frankie Parker, of Lawrenceville. If Parker shows improvement in the next ten months it is likely that trio will represent us next year."

Ward stoutly defended Joseph Wear's leadership of the American team in this year's campaign.

"What more could he do?" Ward asked. "We gave him the best material and supported him with an outstanding college trainer, Harry Hillman, of Dartmouth. There was no fault to find with his selection of the team. After that it was up to the boys and the results proved they were not good enough on those days, at least, for Perry and Austin."

Defends System.

It has been suggested that a professional should have been taken across with the team and kept with it throughout tournament play and cup matches.

"That wouldn't be practical," Ward said. "As soon as they reach England the boys play in the Queen's tournament and then the Wimbledon championships; if they haven't got the stuff then they can't pick it up in the few idle days before the interzone final starts. I'm satisfied the system is all right. The trouble is there is a dearth of top-notch material."

Dundee's Jaw Wired In Delicate Operation

Seattle, Aug. 1 (AP).—A operation setting and wiring the jaw of Vince Dundee, of Baltimore, former middleweight champion, was completed today by Dr. H. T. Buckner, and the fighter's condition was pronounced good.

"There should be no complications," Dr. Buckner said. Dundee will have to stay in a hospital for several days.

Belle Haven's Golf Tourney Date Is Set

President's Cup Event to Be Staged Aug. 14-15; Others Slated.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Aug. 1.—The golf committee of Belle Haven Country Club, headed by Charlie Rollins, is planning a series of matches and tournaments to fill out the rapidly waning season.

Saturday the first team will travel to Winchester for a foursome match.

August 14 and 15 are the dates selected for the President's Cup Tournament. This event, open to all members, is one of the most popular in the club's tourneys. On August 13 a 24-man team from Quantico invades the local course.

The Mount Vernon Independents want a game for Sunday on their home field at Engleside, Va. Call Manager Bill Hammond at Alex. 1762-J.

The Fort Hunt Rangers have reorganized, and Manager Harvey Baker has signed a number of young players.

Local fighters who will ppear on the Old Dominion Boat Club smoker here in two weeks held an intensive workout at the clubhause tonight. The following are among those who will take part in the matches: Bananas Pavone, Rob Schwartz, Tony and Joey Dennito, Bill Shu and Eddie Hammersley.

Bulletin.

Capt. Floyd Rollins, of Messick, Va., phoned last night that large schools of blues have been entering the bay since Tuesday. Capt. Bob Birchett reported that schools of blues were churning the waters of Herron Bay and were being caught in large numbers yesterday. He has plenty of fresh chum. Phone West River 18-F-13 for reservations. Croakers and sea trout were being landed at almost all points along the bay yesterday.

THIS column does not wish to offend boatmen on the bay by publishing reports of catches made at certain fishing grounds nor does the writer cater to any group or groups of captains. As stated here last Friday morning, this column is solely for the interest of anglers and boatmen alike. Any boatman who wishes to increase his present amount of business through this column can do so by the medium of hsi reports (authentic) to hte writer, for without these reports there is no indication of the actual results being obtained in your particular locality.

By dropping a postal card or letter daily or as often as a report is warranted, your information will be passed on to the fishing fraternity. Do not depend solely on your parties to convey this infromation to your correspondent because many do not wish to have their names published and consequently withhold information.

There is no question but Solomons Island will turn a record week for bluefish, trout and croakers. Capt. W. W. Woodward and Dick Lore advise me that since Wednesday their boats have been coming in with what it takes to make anglers completely satisfied—good catches of big fish. These boats operating out of Solomon's are all modern and have the latest conveniences.

Trout (weakfish) have at last arrived in large numbers, likewise the bluefish and big hardheads, the latter around the 3-pound mark, the two former averaging close to 3 pounds with a few trout exceeding that weight. Bluefish are schooling and are being taken by both trolling and still fishing. The moon will be at its most successful position this week for high-class fishing and with any kind of a break in the weather you ca count on a "humdinger" of a trip to your choice of the many hundred places along the bay and its tidal waters.

This week does not appear to be a gamble as to the selection of fishing grounds. If you are after the speedy trout go to Solomons, if after bluefish, from Solomons on down the bay. Hardheads and croakers should be everywhere. Make your reservations by phone or you might have to wait another week because you can count on all the boys getting an early start and staying late.

It is well to remember that many fine trout are lost through careless handling and too strong an arm. The trout has a very tender mouth from which the hook is easily pulled out. Keep your line taut and allow his to run and don't restrain him until after he has tired sufficiently to bring to the boat. Then use a net because often times when lifting him into the boat he will pull free from the hook by his own weight.

The list of parties who have made exceptionally good catches is too long for publication. However, here are some of the numbers caught at Solomons Island this week: A party of five caught in 3 hours and 30 minutes 20 large trout (3 pounds average weight), 200 large croakers; another party left in the same boat and returned in a short time with 8 trout and 125 croakers; another landed 20 nice blues by trolling; another 25 bluefish and 100 croakers, all large. One more returned with so many croakers that your correspondent hesitates to put it down for fear of running out of ciphers. Another party had 12 nice trout, many croakers and four blues, all caught still fishing.

Dn't forget that if you take more fish than you can use try and make the effort to bring some back for the children in town that don't have the wherewithal to purchase them.

Reserve Funds Higher in Week By 155 Million

Total Brings Balances to 2½ Billions More Than Legal Needs.

By the Associated Press.

A transfer of Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks was the main factor in recording an increase of $155,000,000 in member bank reserve balances during the week ended July 31, the weekly condition statement of the Reserve institutions disclosed.

This addition brought reserve balances to a total of $5,100,000,000, which was $1,185,000,000 more than last year. This figure is approximately $2,500,000,000 in excess of legal requirements. Treasury cash and deposits with the Reserve banks, in the meantime, declined $143,000,000

Monetary gold stock increased $8,000,000 during the week to total $9,143,000,000. Money in circulation rose $23,000,000 to a total of $5,519,000,000 as a result of demands for cash in payment of month-end requirements. The conditions statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended July 31, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,471,000,000, an increase of $4,000,000 compared with the preceding week, and of $7,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On July 31 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,465,000,000, an increase of $5,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $23,000,000 in money in circulation and $155,000,000 in member bank Reserve balances, offset in part by decreases of $143,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks, and $13,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, and increases of $3,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $8,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency.

Wheat Imports Lower Prices

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Announcement of good sized imports of Canadian wheat into the United States, together with talk of prospective additional quantities, led to lower prices for wheat today. Confirmation of pessimistic estimates of damage to the domestic wheat crop were much more than offset by apparent likelihood of an influx of Canadian wheat into this country.

Wheat in Chicago closed unsteady at the day's bottom level, 1⅛@1½ cents under yesterday's finish, September, 93⅛@93¾; corn, ⅝ off to 1¼ up; September, 77¾@77⅞; oats, ⅜@¾ down, and provisions unchanged to 17 cents decline.

Texas Corp. Retires Bonds Out of Cash

New York, Aug. 1.—The Texas Corporation retired yesterday out of cash in its treasury the entire outstanding $10,500,000 debentures of its subsidiary, California Petroleum Corporation. As they carried coupons of 5 and 5½ per cent the redemption will save about $1,600,000 annually. The issues were to mature in 1938 and 1939.

Court Refuses To Bar AA Tax

Cause Not Sufficient, Rules North Carolina Federal Judge.

By the Associated Press.

Elizabeth City, N. C., Aug. 1.—U. S. District Judge I. M. Meekins, of Elizabeth City, today denied and refused to grant a restraining order sought to prevent the Government from collecting the processing tax on wheat and flour under the agricultural adjustment act.

The plaintiff was the Janney-Marshall Co., Inc., of Fredericksburg, Va., trading as Germanier Mills, and the defendant, N. B. Early, a collector of internal revenue for Virginia.

Judge Meekins said his idea was that "that the revised statutes of the United States pointed out a complete remedy involving the collection of taxes by the Government and that to enjoin the Government from the collection of the tax because of the alleged threat, as the plaintiff termed it, by the Congress to cut off the taxpayers' right to adjudicate his cause in the courts, was not sufficient to warrant the unusual and unprecedented remedy suggested by the plaintiff—injunction against the Government and a restraining order in favor of the taxpayer."

Stock Seat $114,000, Top for This Year

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—Arrangements were made today for the transfer of a seat on the New York Stock Exchange at $114,000. A new high level for this year.

Food Index Up 3 Cents.

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—The Dun & Bradstreet Weekly Food Index registered a gain of 3 cents last week to stand at $2.63 as of July 30.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

Unchanged	199	198
Total issues	863	851

Stocks.—In active trading which totaled 1,896,550 shares the market absorbed a steady outpour of realiznig sales with the pressure most pronounced at the close. The average decline, however, was only three-tenths of a point.

Bonds.—The market lacked feature and the majority of issues about held their own. Wednesday's activity was continued with a turnover of $12,146,000. Governments were steady, minor losses and gains being evenly divided.

Grains.—Substantial imports of Canadian wheat, with prospects of more, led to lower prices. September closed at 93⅛. Corn was steady and oats slightly lower.

Cotton.—Quotations were 12 to 17 points off at the end of the day's trading. Two private reports indicated crops larger than June estimates. October closed at 11.48.

Sugar.—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.20 for spots and refined sugar at 5.10 for fine granulated. Futures were quiet.

Coffee.—Spots remained the same with Santos No. 4 at 8 and Rio No. 7 at 6¼.

$7,000,000 Pork Tax Fought by Packers

Chicago, Aug. 1 (AP).—Counsel for 18 major meat packing companies begin arguments today at a hearing on their request for a temporary injunction to enjoin the collection of more than $7,000,000 in overdue Federal processing taxes on pork. Judge John P. Barnes presided at the hearing in Federal District Court.

Brokers' Loans Decrease.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City amounted to $850,000,000 during the week ended July 31, representing a decrease of $30,000,000 for the week.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Run Into Profit Taking and Turn Back in Active Trading After Early Advance—Wheat Prices Drop.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, August 1.—Dog days brought a brave attempt by stocks to continue their advance, but after moderate early gains in active dealings and some new high record writing, profit taking and an onrush of bearish feeling got the better of the market. Gains of the day and yesterday, too, were largely wiped out in a rush of selling in the last hour, which left the majority of stocks from a fraction to a point or more lower on the day. Turnover again approached the 2,000,000-share mark. Commodities also had a poorer time as speculative enthusiasm waned. September wheat closed 1¼ cents a bushel lower, at 93⅜ cents.

Stocks again were a mixture of advances to new high prices and of profit taking setbacks. Liquidation of Great Northern continued, putting the price below 20, but some of the other rails, notably New York Central, were firm. Motor stocks had a period of strength before relaxing much. Auburn, Chrysler and General Motors were the favorites. Further gains were made by Hudson, Mack, Nash, Packard and Studebaker.

Public utilities were irregularly higher. Consolidated Gas opened higher and then gave up a fraction. Columbia Gas attracted attention by opening higher on a large block. Metals were mixed and so were the foods. Mail order stocks climbed to new high levels. Automobile accessory shares were strong. Timken Detroit Axle was a leader with a gain of a point or so on large volume. Some of the independent steels moved ahead.

Amusements Irregular.

Amusement issues were irregular. Columbia and Fox made headway, but Radio dropped back a little. American Sugar fell to a new low on loss of a point. American Crystal Sugar first preferred sold at the lowest price issued on a decline of 2 points. Losses of 1 to 3 points were shown by Conde Nast, General Cigar, Motor Products, Peoples Gas, Sterling Products, Standard Brands common and preferred and the preferred issues of American Zinc and Consolidated Cigar. With the exception of Steel and Westinghouse, the industrial leaders were firm.

Excess reserves of banks here now are around $1,100,000,000 for the first time and the worst of it is, from the banks' viewpoint, that the intense pressure is likely to be fairly continuous, instead of brief duration as was the case last June. For the country as a whole, excess reserves are almost at the $2,530,000,000 peak of early June. Eyes were turned to the money market to see if rates which already are nominal, would be capable of further adjustment. Foreign currencies were erratic. Guilders gave up yesterday's gain and dollars were firm against the gold bloc money. Sterlin was higher.

This being an off day for industrial news, aside from a number of corporation earning statements, more attention was paid to administrative words and legislative actions at Washington. No one could be found who liked President Roosevelt's reference to the immorality of holding tax-exempt bonds. Lifting of the exemption, which would require a constitutional amendment, would not be opposed by the market. That is a matter to be decided by the public at large. The question is whether in paying higher interest rates on its loans the Treasury would more than make up the difference by collecting taxes from investments that now go into tax-exempt bonds.

So long as the tax-exempt bonds are outstanding the market feels that it is perfectly moral and legal to hold such obligations of the Treasury. President Roosevelt himself has set the example. Meanwhile, the matter is not likely to become an active market issue. Of more immediate concern is the tax-exemption feature of charity gifts, that now looks to be finding some favor in Congress. It is improbable that any corporation would increase its gifts for that account, so that exemption would mean a net gain to stockholders, even though the views of the Administration recently were expressed to the contrary.

Abroad the news was a shade more favorable. It looked slightly more likely that a way could be found to let Italy back out of her adventure in Africa that already has proved to be costly. Some liquidation of Italian-owned American securities might take place should war preparations continue much longer, but it easily could be absorbed. Few war orders would come this way. As a market factor Italy and Ethiopia are important only as their fight might draw others into the disturbance.

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XIX.—Indian Charlie's Leap.

Time after time they caught William Donald Mayer, worked against all but insurmountable odds in an effort to convict him, and saw him repeatedly freed, when they must go and catch him all over again.

This could not have happened in England Firstly, there would not have been a tangle of technicalities to aid and abet Mayer in his career. Further, about the second time he appeared in court, he would have been put away for a long enough period to make him realize that, after all, there was something to the power of the law. There has been a great deal of mush stirred up by the ladies of soft-brained criminal coddlers within recent years upon the subject of "the psychology of offense," the "rebellion complex in criminals" and similar drivel. The fact is that men and women commit crimes because they think they can get away with them. William Donald Mayer and his mother are excellent evidences that their reasoning is entirely justified.

Scotland Yard Used as Model.

But to continue a comparison with Scotland Yard: Mr. Hoover, in building up the Division of Investigation, used the Yard's mainspring of effectiveness when he centered from the beginning upon the installation of a highly efficient identification unit. But, for that matter, he borrowed from all large law-enforcement bodies, even to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, in establishing the tradition that a special agent must always get his man. Again, in this, he proceeded upon the theory that the best way to defeat crime is to impress upon criminals the surety of apprehension and punishment.

In the North a criminal raises his hands at the approach of a Red Coat for a very good reason. He knows that if he kills this officer another will come in his place and another after that, and a dozen following the third man. The forest Red Coat is not an individual; he is a symbol of the power of the British Empire. Sooner or later the criminals of America will realize that the same applies to special agents of the Division of Investigation.

In 1925, for instance, a Chicago gangster named Martin James Durkin, who specialized in automobile thievery, drove into a Chicago garage with a car he had stolen in New Mexico. Durkin had already shot and wounded three Chicago policemen, as well as one in California. Through a bad break in luck, Special Agents Edward B. Shanahan, of the Division of Investigation, was without aid. He attempted to arrest Durkin single-handed. The gangster's right hand swept forward; there was a flash of yellow-blue flame from an automatic pistol, and Shanahan fell, dying almost instantly. Durkin shifted gears, drove his car out of the garage and escaped. That night J. Edgar Hoover snapped messages to every special agent in the key cities of the United States:

"Get Durkin! I don't care how long it takes, get Durkin. If you've got to chase him for the rest of his life, catch Durkin and teach him that he can't kill a Division of Investigation man and get away with it!"

Every field office in the United States took up the hunt. Durkin's characteristics were studied—how he could pose as a buyer of an expensive car, order it serviced and filled with oil and gas for delivery the next day, then burglarize the salesroom that night and drive the car away. Every automobile agency in the country was familiarized with Durkin, his looks, his actions and his methods. At last, a San Diego automobile company gave notice that a car had been stolen the night before under typical Durkin circumstances. The chase began.

Goes to Hotel for Proof Of Car Ownership

All roads east from California were policed. Shotgun squads patrolled highways day and night. Every police chief and sheriff in the Western country had been notified; seven days later a sheriff in Pecos, Tex., stopped a young man on the street and asked him for proof of ownership of his car. True, the wheels were red instead of green, and the serial and license numbers when the sheriff took them were different from the numbers sent out on the Durkin car, but the officer just thought he'd investigate. However, the young man was persuasive; the sheriff allowed him to go to his hotel to bring back proof of ownership.

The young man did not return. The sheriff hurried his information to the field office of the Division of Investigation at El Paso. Instantly the chase began again—but this time the division had something to work on. It knew the fake numbers that Durkin had substituted for the true factory ones, as well as the license numbers and other changes made on the car. Agents from El Paso started off in high-powered motor cars to comb the country in the remote western section of Texas, known as the "Big Bend of the Rio Grande."

After two days, Durkin's car was found abandoned, due to a broken wheel. Agents checked at every ranch in the vicinity, at last to find that a young man, accompanied by a woman, had inquired the way to the railroad at Alpine, Tex. There the ticket agent said the pair had gone to San Antonio. Special agents got on the telephone and the San Antonio office took up the chase. The pair had checked some baggage; at San Antonio those baggage checks had been exchanged for others, bound out on the Texas Special for St. Louis.

Scotland Yard Faces Different Problems

The next morning the Texas Special stopped just outside Webster Grove, Mo. Police and special agents were everywhere in the vicinity, but concealed. Inside the drawing room, Durkin and his woman companion prepared to leave the train; they soon would be in St. Louis. The doorbell buzzed.

"There's the porter for the bags, honey," said Durkin's woman.

The killer opened the door, jerked back as if to reach for his gun, felt the bump of an automatic barrel against his belly, and weakly raised his hands. It was useless to fight; he faced the pistols of Division of Investigation special agents and St. Louis police officers. Ten minutes later the murderer was handcuffed and on his way to trial and prison.

The same relentless pursuit followed the killing of Special Agent W. Carter Baum by Lester M. Gillis, alias Baby Face Nelson, during an attempt last spring to arrest John Dillinger at the Little Bohemia resort in Wisconsin. The chase for Baby Face was Nation-wide. At last, Inspector Samuel Cowley and Special Agent H. E. Hollis caught up with him. In the fight which followed, the officers gave their lives to do it, but they killed Nelson. One man escaped—John Paul Chase; again the hunt led across America—and special agents got him.

Scotland Yard has no such troubles as present themselves in these American killers. In truth, there is little adventure in the life of a C. I. D. man. Most of England's criminals come from a low stratum of humanity and an exceedingly nether plane of mentality.

Asks Agent's Advice On Train Holdup

For that matter, if anything as melodramatic as the case of Indian Charlie ever came to light in England, that weekly purveyor of thrills to chambermaids, known as Reynold's News of the World, would print its edition in blood-colored ink. Yet the case is only one in hundreds in Division of Investigation files.

In a little Texas town, two boys were schoolmates. One was the son of worthwhile parents, the other a youngster who must smart forever under the contumely of the fact that his father, a saloonkeeper, had been hanged for murder. Other boys reviled him, but the well-bred boy was his friend.

School over, their paths parted. The well-bred boy moved to another town, went to college and entered the service of the Division of Investigation, at last to be stationed in Fort Worth. One day the saloonkeeper's son came to see him. He had heard that his friend was in the service here; would he help him out in a marital matter? The special agent acted as a mediator—and again lost track of his boyhood acquaintance. Years passed.

The last big oil boom came to Texas. Towns arose over night. Slab-boarded buildings sprang out of the mire to house poolrooms, gambling halls and worse. Ruffians flooded into the fields. One day the murderer's son appeared again.

"I need advice," he said. "A fellow asked me to help him hold up a train—the Texas & Pacific No. 11, with the pay roll on it."

New Man in Crime, And He Talked

"The pay roll" meant more than $100,000 in cash, which was carried out monthly on November 11. Immediately the special agent sought the District attorney's opinion, which was that men could not be arrested for something that had not happened.

So a grim game began. Other special agents were hurried to the first agent's aid. The saloon-keeper's son was sent forth to gain what information he could and report anew. In the meantime, the heterogeneous mob of ne'er-do-wells who had flooded into the East Texas fields was augmented by a number of unshaven fellows who hung around poolrooms, and who leaned vacuously against the wall and missed nothing.

At last the surveillance narrowed to three men—J. L. Morris, a half-breed known as Indian Charlie; W. T. Edwards, alias Billie Edwards, and A. K. Jenkins, called Skeets. Skeets was the man who had first approached the saloon-keeper's son. He was new to crime and he talked. Not much. Only a hint now and then of what was going to happen. It was sufficient, however, to give special agents a line on whom they must watch and from whom they could learn vital facts about the desperate men involved in the plot.

It is a strange fact that all crimes are not hatched in utter secrecy. Sometimes many persons know it—or have partial knowledge of it. A keen man working in those surroundings hears more than a person would believe. From here, from there, from the original informant, the plot at last was pieced together.

On the night of September 14, when Number 11 pulled out of Fort Worth with the pay roll, Indian Charlie would leap into the express car from a box car on an adjoining track in the yards. He would cover the messenger with his gun, tie him up and then, when the train passed the water tank, 2½ miles out, kick out the mail bags containing more than $100,000 in pay rolls to be picked up by his two comrades. Following this, he would close the express car door, cut the messenger's throat and then, when the train started upgrade a few miles farther on, drop off and join his comrades in the cellar of an old house in the woods near Lake Worth, where they would divide the loot. Indian Charlie could do all that; the Special Agents were sure of it. He was a giant with great arms and gorilla-like hands. His face showed the cruelty necessary for slitting the throat of a helpless man.

At 11:30 on the night of September 14 Number 11 stood as usual on its track in the Fort Worth station. In the combination mail and express car the messenger sat as usual with the door open. At last came the highball signal.

Indian Charlie Leaps, Trusses Up Messenger

The train gathered speed on its way out of the yards, at last to clatter past a line of empty, black-mawed box cars. Indian Charlie leaped straight through the door of the express car, his gun already sliding from its holster. "Put 'em up!" he shouted. The messenger whirled from his desk, with hands in the air. The huge bandit worked swiftly.

A coil of rope came from a loop in his waist. He forced the man to the wall of the car, commanded him to put his hands behind his back and, with lightning-like pulls and cruel jerks, bound him and pushed him to the floor. Then he turned to the mail sacks, swiftly sorting out the ones containing registered mail.

Packing Boxes Open, Agents Emerge.

The train had rumbled over a bridge; it was only a few hundred yards to the water tank. Indian Charlie braced himself in the door. Then as the train roared past the tank, with a single push of a great foot, he sent the sacks, containing $100,000, out into the darkness. That done he reached for the door. It slid groaningly to its hasps. Indian Charlie pulled it tighter. Then, with a swift glance about him, he slithered a long knife from his belt and with a stealthy crouch started forward to cut the throat of the helpless messenger.

He did not reach his man. There had been some packing boxes in the end of the car. Magically they had opened. Special agents of the Division of Investigation, together with other law-enforcement officers, had moved swiftly into view. Guns leveled, they shouted for the giant to put up his hands. He chose to shoot it out. But before he could pull the trigger, a burst of yellowish-red flame had come from the other end of the car. The great knees of Indian Charlie caved slowly. His gun-hand relaxed; he sank to the floor in death.

Meanwhile, at the water tank, the other bandits hurried to pick up the bags of money that they might rush them to the car which would take them to the old house in the woods. But they galvanized at the sound of voices from the darkness—again there was the call of officers to "put 'em up." Billie Edwards swiftly drew his gun and fired; the bullet missed a special agent by inches. The returning fire was more sure—Billie Edwards joined Indian Charlie in death. Only one man was left—Skeets, the novice. Shaking with fright, he stood with his arms high above his head in surrender.

This proves rather conclusively that the law-enforcement agencies of this country can function without the assistance of a Scotland Yard. What they need is the proper form of support.

Attorney Kills Man He Finds With Wife

Bryan, Tex., Aug. 1 (AP).—Luther Broadway, prominent attorney of Madisonville, Tex., was shot to death in a hotel room here today and M. M. Riedel, Houston attorney, surrendered to Chief of Police K. T. Willis.

Willis quoted Riedel as saying:

"I found this man in a room here with my wife and killed him."

W. R. Allen, county attorney, said a charge of murder would be filed against the Houston attorney.

No sir! I don't believe it... you cuckoos... I'm that way too, for even arguing with you about this being the year 7324.
Also, you trying to tell me there's no more U.S.A. What about the big cities..... New York, Cleveland, Washington, Detroit, St. Louis.?
What are those names again, old-timer?
Washington? Boys, he's right. There was such a place.
7324! My word! What about progress, speed... doing away with the law of gravity.... all those scientific things we were to have.?
Boys, the longer this man talks.... take my word, he knows his mythology.
Yes, I agree with you, W-9873. This man's build. His strong voice. Also, he did not salaam when he heard the name of our Dictatress, Chloe XIV.
Yes I saw that.
I, too.
Gentlemen, I'm sure this man was sent to us... to our cause.

Rally of Scouts For Jamboree Set for Tonight

Council-Wide Session for Guides to Be Open; Promotions Listed.

A council-wide jamboree guide rally this evening at 7:30 o'clock at Temple Heights, Connecticut avenue above Florida, will be the outstanding Scout activity of this week. The rally is for all Scouts and Scouters and the program will include entertainment such as George Small's one-man band and a group of hillbillies; group singing of jamboree songs, story telling and a report from the national chief of excursions, O. H. Benson.

It was announced at the national Boy Scout headquarters yesterday that an official guide neckerchief would be made which would be orange in color with a blue border having the word "guide" stamped across the corner. While these are jamboree colors, they will readily distinguish the guide from Scouts wearing one of the jamboree neckerchiefs, which will be blue and red.

According to the last check-up, something over 800 Scouts were under training and several have taken the quiz which is being given each Thursday evening at the Scout training center, 1018 Vermont avenue.

Local jamboree registration is still climbing and following special permission applications will continue to be received until further notice. Scoutmasters from two local jamboree troops have been selected and their acceptance is expected. They are District Commissioner Ralph F. Bartley and William C. Westlake, scoutmaster of Troop 8. The latter led a group of local Scouts to the jamboree in England in 1929. Additional local leaders will be announced within the next few days.

Attention has been called to an announcement made by the national Boy Scout headquarters to the effect that the wearing of the official Scout uniform in the District of Columbia and the vicinity during the jamboree period will be restricted to those registered in the jamboree or those acting as guides.

Among the items of interest to Scouts and Scouters of Washington in the Camp Roosevelt program are aquatic day tomorrow, in which a special water program of swimming and diving will be featured by a diving demonstration by the crew of the Coast Guard cutter Apache, which will anchor off Camp Roosevelt for the week-end. This is the climax to a special week given to aquatics at the camp. Other features are the farmers' picnic next Thursday, when the people who live in the vicinity of Camp Roosevelt are invited to be the guests of the camp. This is an annual affair and has always attracted a large group.

Scout day on August 14 will be featured by an election with all of the electioneering and politics usual on such an occasion, following which the winning party will run the camp for the day.

An old-fashioned barbeque will be staged in the afternoon. As a grand finale for the camping season the second annual Camp Roosevelt banquet will be held Saturday evening, August 17, and in this connection the Scouts at camp have appealed to their friends in Washington to send them a piano or a small organ.

Camp Wilson is having a great year for visitors and has entertained Scouts from several States. Of special interest to the camp are the vesper services held each Sunday afternoon at 5. These services have been attended by large numbers of people from Washington and vicinity. One of the season's largest courts of honor is expected to be held Saturday, August 10, at Camp Wilson. The courts are being held there the second Saturday of each month, while on the fourth Saturday of each month courts are held at the Peck Chapel, Twenty-eighth and M streets northwest.

Scout leaders of the Capital division will meet with District Commissioner Louis F. Nickel at the training center, 1018 Vermont avenue, Monday, at 8 p. m.

H. E. Eberly has been appointed scoutmaster of Troop 14, replacing W. C. Cronenburg, who has served since the troop was organized. Cronenburg will continue as a member of the troop committee. Scoutmaster Eberly announces among his plans for the troop one emphasizing advancement in which a series of special meetings will be held to take up the various points in advancement.

At the court of honor and review held at Camp Roosevelt, the Boy Scout camp on Chesapeake Bay, Sunday, July 21, the following boys advanced in rank:

On The Air Today

The president of the Washington Music Teachers Association, Mrs. Hugo Hesselbach, comments in returning her Sunday Post radio page program preference poll form as follows:

"I have crossed out the things we never listen to and checked the ones we prefer. Those not crossed out or checked we listen to if there is nothing better. But judging from your list (last Sunday's tabulation) I should say only children or young people have replied so far."

Curiously enough, one of the most interesting aspects of the poll to me thus far has been the large number of forms returned by older people. At least I judge from their comments they are not of the hot-cha scat-singing age.

* * * *

As a matter of fact, the poll tomorrow will place the following programs at the top of the list: One Man's Family, Major Bowes Amateur, Jack Benny, Art Godfrey, Ford Sunday Evening Hour, Amos 'n' Andy, Cheerio, Seth Parker, Beauty Box Theater, Cities Service Concert, Show Boat, Arch McDonald, State Fair Concert, Postilion, New York Philharmonic, Hollywood Hotel, Marine Band Shut-in Hour, Will Rogers, Alexander Woolcott and Mary Marlin.

* * * *

That array of programs, representing the preferences of almost 500 listeners, is to my mind a remarkable list. "One Man's Family," far in the lead in the poll, is certainly adult entertainment. It is a far cry from the type of radio entertainment usually summed up under the heading of "popular."

Maj. Bowes has hit upon the universal appeal—the idea of opportunity for the unknown and ambitious person with talent. I believe Bowes has a larger audience among adults than children, by a large margin. Bowes is known to Broadway as a master showman and his amateur hour more or less bears that out.

Benny is the only simon pure comedian on the list above. Amos 'n' Andy are favorites equally with the chairmen of the boards of the largest corporations and their janitors. Cheerio, Seth Parker, Ford Sunday Evening Hour, Marine Band and Woolcott never brought in any star-gazing youngsters from the front porch.

* * * *

The Postilion's greatest following is with serious-minded adults. Mary Marlin is directed principally to the woman of the house in a daytime hour. Will Rogers is beloved by adults, and his radio chatter is followed principally by men and women who appreciate and understand his subtle humor.

As a matter of fact, the list to date is intriguing because of the unusually pronounced trend it marks toward the serious and dignified in radio entertainment.

The New York Philharmonic ranks far ahead of Wayne King, Ray Noble, Rudy Vallee, Waring's Pennsylvanians, Fred Allen, Al Jolson, Burns and Allen, Joe Penner, Bing Crosby, Ben Bernie, Guy Lombardo and the rest of the big-salaried names in radio.

* * * *

What constitutes good radio entertainment after all? If Francis Lederer is being starred on Broadway, the audience Friday nights is not confined to old gentlemen with goatees or serious students of the play. Mr. Lederer's audience will be formed of persons from every walk of life and of all ages.

Tonight Mr. Lederer appears with Frances Dee in "Hollywood Hotel" in a condensed version of their latest motion picture, "The Gay Deception." Next week Clark Gable, who packs them in at the picture houses, again at all ages and from all walks of life, will be Dick Powell's guest. Hearing Mr. Lederer on the air tonight will be those who would go to the theater to see him in person. And next week Mr. Gable's motion picture theater audience will enjoy hearing him.

Some of my most dignified friends are still talking of Mr. Gable's now famous bus picture with Claudette Colbert. I wonder—wouldn't they enjoy hearing Mr. Gable in Dick Powell's program? And if they do, does that tag them as unappreciative of the better things in the amusement field?

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

Maxine Davis, magazine and feature writer, has gone forth to discover the America of 1935. She will write of her experiences for The Post. Her fourteenth article appears today.

San Francisco, July.—There are banners in the wind in this glamorous city. Great blue and white banners bearing the legend, "Fair Play." There are posters in windows, and in elevators occasionally one sees business men wearing buttons advertising the same slogan.

I found out about it. As a symptom, it is interesting. It is the successor of the NRA.

Here is the story:

As soon as the Supreme Court outlawed the Blue Eagle, executives of 14 of the largest department and specialty stores, comprising the San Francisco Retail Drygoods Association, met to decide what to do. They agreed to retain the retail code, temporarily. Then they gathered with all the city's merchants, members of the Retail Merchants Association, and unanimously decided to organize the Fair Play League.

With a few minor changes, they adopted all the conditions of the old code. They made no modification whatsoever in wages, hours or fair trade practices.

No Chiseling Reported.

The members have no way of enforcing their rules among their membership, but thus far they've heard of no chiseling. And they are confident there won't be much, because they claim merchants are afraid of getting a reputation for breaking promises, for operating under false pretenses and thus losing customers.

At the present time, members do not anticipate much wage-cutting, because if the majority maintain their present scale they figure that, as times are better, an employer who cut, ultimately would face the loss of his best employes to his competitors.

In this connection, it's amusing to note that the minimum wage is the legal state minimum of $16 a week for female workers. The men are protected by a law designed to help women!

The idea of the Fair Play League is spreading. Oakland, across the Bay, has one. In Los Angeles, the merchants are operating on the code by mutual agreement until September 1, when they plan to take steps to organize a similar plan. Seattle, Wash., has a somewhat similar arrangement, save that it has adopted a 45 instead of 40-hour week. And the San Francisco officials are swamped with endless inquiries from still other communities.

Ballyhoo Resembles Johnson's.

At present the members of the league pay dues $1 per employe per year. This is used for advertising, for ballyhoo. While they regret him, they haven't forgotten Hugh Johnson. His methods aren't exactly in vogue, but the propaganda is gently reminiscent of the vigorous general.

This is a development which may or may not prove significant. And even more important is the fact that a merchant here and there is thinking in social as well as ledger terms. Heads of some of the old established firms here are asking what's going to happen to a man or a woman before they fire an employe, how many dependents he has, what chances he has of finding another job, and isn't there some way he can be retained in the store?

I don't know how general this is, but I found some evidence of it, and it was heartening.
